LEXINGTON, city, & capital of Fayette co., Ky., is situated on a branch of the Elkhorn r., at the junction of the Frankfort & Lexington r. r., & the Covington & Lexington r. r., in 38° 6′ N. lat., & 48° 18′ W. lon., 24 E.S.E. Frankfort, 85 S. Cincinnati, 74 E. Louisville, 522 W. Pop. 1820, 5,279; 1830, 6,461; 1840, 6,997; 1854, 12,000. It is the oldest town in the state, was formerly the capital, & is one of the richest & best built places in the western states. It is regularly laid out, & some of the streets are paved. The main street is 80 ft. wide, & 1¼ m. in length, & the principal roads leading to the city are Macadamized for some distance from it. Many of the streets are bordered with fine shade trees, & its environs are beautiful, & ornamented with elegant residences. There is a public square near the centre of the place, surrounded by fine brick buildings. The city contains 10 churches,—2 Presbyterian, 1 Campbellite, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, 1 Unitarian, 1 Roman Catholic, & 2 African, one of them Methodist & the other Baptist. Among the public buildings are a court house & jail, a splendid masonic hall, one of the finest buildings in the state, the State Lunatic Asylum, & the Halls of Transylvania University. This university was founded in 1798, & has a classical, medical, & law department. It has a president & 14 professors, or other instructors. The classical department has about 100 students, the law 78, & the medical 260, making 438 in the whole. The medical graduates of this institution are more numerous than those of any similar institution in the United States, excepting that of Philadelphia. The libraries of the university amount to 15,000 vols. The commencement is on the Wednesday before the 3d Friday in August. There are in the city, 2 academies, & 3 male & 2 female schools, of a high order. This city is more celebrated for its intelligent & polished society, & as an elegant place of residence, than for the bustle of business. It has 2 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,380,000; an insurance office, 75 stores, 3 printing offices issuing a daily & 2 semi-weekly newspapers, several extensive rope factories, tanneries, woollen fac., machine shops, &c. It is said that the name was given to this place by the surveyors, who, while laying it out, received intelligence of the battle of Lexington. In 1797 it contained only 50 houses. The country around the city is one of the most fertile districts in the United States.

LIBERIA, v., Prince William co., Va.

LIBERIA, an independent negro republic of W. Africa, established 1823, extends along the coast of Guinea, between Sierra Leone & Cape Mensurado, from the Shebar r. on the N. to the Garaway on the S., a distance of 350 m., with an average breadth of 80 miles. Pop. 1850, 250,000, of whom 10,000 are free blacks from the United States, & the remainder aborigines, or captives released from slavers. The country has been all purchased from time to time by the American Colonization Society; & its climate has improved greatly by a systematic drainage, & clearance of woods. Palm oil, to the value of $150,000, is shipped annually; camwood, ivory, gold-dust, coffee, indigo, ginger, & arrowroot, are other principal products. Cocoa and sugar thrive, & it is expected that cotton will soon become an article of export. No draught animals succeed, & much of the cam-wood exported is brought 200 miles from the interior on men's backs. It is estimated that 2 million inhabitants of the interior now obtain supplies of European goods from this republic & Cape Palmas. Liberia, formerly a dependency of the United States of America, was recognized as an independent republic in July, 1848. Government vested in a president, vice-president, & a senate of 6 mems., and house of representatives of 28 mems., elected by all possessors of a real estate to the value of $30. Value of imports for the year ending Sept. 30, 1851, amounted to $166,-000; exports said to amount to a much larger sum. Ann. rev. about $20,000, derived from sale of land & duties on spirits. About 50,000 of the pop. are said to use the English language, & children are sent from the surrounding countries, 400 or 500 m. distant, to attend the schools of this state, which also supports two public journals. On the whole, the establishment of Liberia is a most successful experiment for the civilization of W. Africa. The seaport & cap. Monrovia, has a pop. of 9,000.

LINCOLN, Lindum, a city, parl. & munic. bor., & co. of itself, Engl., cap. co. Lincolnshire, on the Witham, here crossed by 3 bridges, 47 E.N.E. Derby, and with which town & with Boston, New Holland, Grimsby, & central England, it is connected by r.roads. Area of co. of city, comprising numerous pas. 17,560 ac. Pop. 1851, 17,536. It is situated in a fine dist., at the foot & on the slope of a hill, crowned by its cathedral, castle, &c. Streets irregular, but generally well built, paved, & lighted. The superb cathedral was erected between the 12th & 15th centuries, in a mixed, but uncommonly beautiful style of English architecture, & the exterior is generally considered the finest in the kingdom, while the vast interior is only surpassed by that of York. The W. front, stained windows, screen, choir, ladye chapel, great bell (recast in 1835); tombs of the bishops, & of Catherine Swynford, wife of John of Gaunt; the chapter-house, cloisters, valuable library, & ruins of the old episcopal palace, all demand special mention. Several of the pa. churches, anciently 52 in number, are interesting, and the city abounds in anc. remains, including the stately castle built by William the Conqueror; traces of the old town walls; a gateway, perhaps the most perfect relic of Roman architecture in the country; a beautiful conduit; numerous ruins of churches & convents; the palace of John of Gaunt, & many other antique houses. Other princip. buildings are the co. hall and jail, within the castle walls; the ancient guild hall, a sessions house, city jail, & house of correction; grammar school, founded in 1583; blue-coat school, rev. nearly 2,000*l.* per ann.; co. lunatic asylum, co. hospital, union workhouse, theatre, assembly rooms, several libraries, mechanics' institution, & mkt. house. It has also several newspapers, a banking company, & branch bank, with excellent breweries, & large exports of flour, by the Witham, & the anc. Roman Foss-dyke canal, which communicates with the Trent. Market, Friday. Races in Sept. Lincoln is the polling & elect.

place for N. divis. of the co. The city sends 2 mems. to H. of C. The diocese comprised in 1838, 1,072 benefices, in cos. Lincoln, Notts, Leicester, Hunts, Bucks, & Bedford. Lincoln was, at the Conquest, & long after, one of the richest ports in England, the Witham at that period being navigable for large vessels. It suffered greatly during the baronial wars, & also in the civil war, when its cathedral was occupied as a barrack.

LINCOLNSHIRE, a large marit. co. of England, extending along its E. coast from the Wash to the Humber, which separates it from Yorkshire; it has E. the N. Sea, S. cos. Cambridge, Northampton, & Rutland; & W. Leicester, Notts, & York. Area, 2,776 sq. m., or 1,776,785 ac., of which nearly 1,500,000 are said to be cultivated. Inhabited houses, 1851, 81,335. Pop. 407,222. It is naturally divided into 3 districts:—1, the wolds, a low range of hills in the N.E.; 2, the moors, a lower, but more extensive division, running N. & S., & now mostly cultivated; 3, the fens, in the S. & E., a low tract protected from the sea by embankments, which, as the shoaling of the water is very gradual (the tide often running out more than 2 m.), might in places be extended so as to gain vast tracts of new land. Chief rivers, the Trent, Welland, Witham, & Ancholme. Climate in the fens moist, & previous to the extensive drainage now effected, very productive of ague. Soil mostly a fertile sandy loam, on the moors & wolds; in the fens, deep loam, rich marly clay, or peat. Improvements in agriculture, especially as regards draining, irrigation, & bone manuring, have rendered this one of the most productive English cos. Chief crops, oats, especially on the moors & wolds, wheat, beans, barley, hemp, woad, rape, turnips, & artificial grasses; but the pasture land greatly exceeds the arable in extent. That of the fens is unequalled elsewhere in quality. The cattle, mostly short-horned, attain a great weight. The sheep are also famous for size & for long wool. Many horses are bred; the waste fens support vast flocks of geese, chiefly kept for their feathers, & the waters are the resort of wild ducks. Estates & farms of all sizes. Lincoln is separated into the parts of Lindsey, in the N., Kesteven S.W., & Holland S.E., & into 63 hunds., & 629 pas., in the Midland circuit & diocese of Lincoln, besides which city, it contains Boston, Grantham, Stamford, & Great Grimsby. The co. sends, bors. included, 13 membs. to H. of C., 2 of which are for N., & 2 for the S. division. This co. is famous for the number & beauty of its ancient parish churches.

Amer., & of another bounding the inlet Liverpool Bay, Arctic Ocean, North America, immediately S.W. Cape Bathurst. Lat. about 70° N., lon. 129° W.

LIVERPOOL, a parl. & munic. bor., &. next to London, the principal seaport of England, co. Lancaster, hundred W. Derby, on the E. bank of the Mersey estuary, about 4 m. from the Irish Sea, 314 m. W.S.W. Manchester, & 210¼ m. N.W. London. Lat. of St. Paul's Church, 53° 24′ 6″ N., lon. 2° 59′ 5″ W. Area of borough, comprising, with Liverpool pa., portions of the townships of Kirkdale, Everton, W. Derby, & the extra parochial place of Toxteth Park, 2,229 ac. Pop. 1841, 286,487; 1851, 375,955. Mean temp. of year, 50°.8; winter 41°.3, summer 61°.1 Fahr. It extends 5 m. in length, by about 2¼ m. at its greatest breadth over gently rising ground; the highest point within the borough, being about 220 feet above the quay wall of the river. Though very irregularly laid out, it has many broad, straight, & handsome thoroughfares; and its streets are receiving great embellishment in point of architecture. The aggregate area of the wet docks now in use (1854), is 185 acres. The quay space is nearly 13 miles in length. The dry docks occupy an area of over 20 acres. "The Mercantile marine of Liverpool is inferior only to that of New York. There belonged to the port December, 1852, 1,861 sailing vessels, of the aggregate burden of 613,505 tons, manned by 20,000 seamen, of these 223 vessels were under 50 tons each, & there were also 108 steamers, with an aggregate burden of 19,480 tons."—(M'Culloch.) Among the largest of the docks are the Brunswick, Queens, Kings, Albert, Salthouse, Canning, Georges, Princes, Waterloo, Victoria, Trafalgar, Clarence, Nelson, Bramleymoore, Wellington, Sandon, Salisbury, Collingwood, & Stanley. The three last are connected with the Leeds & Liverpool canal, & most of the others have half tide locks & wet basins. Notwithstanding this enormous dock accommodation, the exigencies of the traffic demand more. The burden of the vessels which paid dock dues in Liverpool, from June 25th 1851, to June 24th 1852, was 3,912,506 tons. Of this vast amount of shipping, 3,536,183 tons entered the Liverpool docks; 187,611 tons of steam vessels discharged in the river without entering the docks; 188,712 tons discharged at Runcorn without entering the docks; whilst 33,031 tons entered those docks after discharging at Runcorn. The amount of revenue from the various countries of the world in 1852, was £254,470, of which a fraction less than one half was from the United States, viz., £102,649, equal to $510,000. The tonnage in 1851, was 3,737,333, comprising 21,071 vessels. Entire customs revenue £3,366,284. The rapid increase of the commerce of the port, is seen by contrasting the extent of dock-room, & the amount of shipping, tonnage, & revenue, above stated, with the corresponding items in 1836, when they were as follows:—Area, 111 acres, shipping, 12,537, tonnage 1,592,456, revenue £183,455. Warehouse room attached to the docks is wanting, & most of the imported goods have to be placed in private warehouses. The London & North Western railroad, has a terminus on the high ground of the town at Edge-hill & from thence 3 branches through tunnels run, one to the centre of town for general traffic, & one to the North & South docks respectively for goods. The East Lancashire, the Lancashire & Yorkshire, & the Liverpool & Southport lines join, & have a good station near the docks in Great Howard Street, & a general station in Tithe-barn Street, near the exchange. Liverpool is supplied with water pumped from wells in the red sandstone, into head reservoirs, from which it is distributed with such pressure that fires are extinguished by jets direct from the mains, without the intervention of fire-engines. The water is of fine quality, but deficient in quantity. Gas is supplied by a chartered company, & is introduced into most of the houses. The sewerage of the town was, until lately, extremely defective, & the paving & cleansing were not properly attended to; in some localities, too, the population lived chiefly in cellars, or in crowded courts. Owing to these causes, & to the influx of Irish, the mortality of the town was very high. Under a local act, obtained in 1846, active measures have been taken to remedy these evils. Sewers have been made in all directions, & houses drained. The cellars emptied of their inhabitants, & 6,000 of them shut up. Attention has been given to the paving of the streets, & to their proper cleansing.

Among the public buildings is the town hall, erected at a cost of upwards of £110,000. It contains a superb suite of entertainment rooms, the council-hall, & various public offices, connected with the management of the municipal business, & the corporate estate. On the landing of the grand staircase, is a fine statue of Channing by Chantrey. The hall stands on one side of a square, the other 3 sides of which are formed by the Exchange buildings, a noble pile, the lower story of which is an arcaded walk. In the centre of the quadrangle is a statue of Nelson, surrounded by emblematical bronze figures. The custom-house, comprising also the excise, post, dock, & stamp offices, is an enormously large heavy building, of the Ionic order, covering an area of 6,700 sq. yards. In the area opposite its north front is a bronze statute of Huskisson. A beautiful structure to contain the assize courts & a hall for music, to be called St. George's. It is of the Corinthian order, externally & internally. A new concert hall has also been completed, of colossal dimensions, & in excellence in the requisites of hearing & seeing, may vie with any building of a similar kind. Liverpool contains 155 churches, viz.,—1 Baptist, 59 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 10 Independent, 3 Jews synagogues, 34 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 8 Presbyterian, 16 Roman catholic, 1 Catholic apostolical, 1 Sandemanean, 2 Swedenborgian, 4 Unitarian, & 14 Isolated congregations. Among the educational establishments are the Liverpool Royal Institution, which has a large library, & a museum inferior only to those of the metropolis, the Collegiate, a fine building in the Gothic style; the Mechanic's Institute, a school of medicine, & several schools belonging to the different religious bodies. There are many hospitals, an infirmary, dispensaries, & charitable institutions; four large covered, & two open, public markets for provisions, a fish market & pedlar's market; corn exchange, & tobacco warehouse. A new jail, 2 m. out of the town, is in course of erection, to supersede that within the borough. There are public baths on the pier-head, & 2 other baths & wash-houses in the town for the working classes, the first of the kind erected. Another extensive building, containing washouses & baths for the working classes, is in progress, & sites have been secured for four additional establishments. The bank of England has a branch here, & next to it is the Liverpool Commercial Bank, both fine buildings, near the exchange. There are ten other banks. There are fourteen newspapers published in Liverpool. The town has some extensive sugar refineries, iron & brass foundries, breweries, rope, glass, soda, & alkali works; a large manuf. of watches & jewellery; & ship-building is carried on in it to a great extent, but it owes its chief importance to its being a great seat of foreign export & import trade, & the main outlet for the manufs. of Manchester, W. Yorkshire, Staffordshire, & the principal part of the trade of England with Ireland & America. The entrance of the Mersey is encumbered with shoals, but at high water it may be entered by the largest ships. The value of the principal articles imported into Liverpool in 1850, were of cotton, 15,730,000*l*; grain & flour, 5,198,796*l*; sugar, 2,485,000*l*; tobacco, 3,383,000*l*: wool, 138,000*l*; tea, 1,831,000*l*; hemp, 770,640*l*; timber, 725,000*l*. The entire value of foreign & colonial produce was, 37,404,400*l*. Liverpool is connected by railroad & canals with all the great towns of England, & by steam packets with Glasgow, Dublin, Cork, Bristol, London, & the principal ports of America to which mail steamers depart. The bor. is divided into 16 wards, & governed by a mayor, a recorder, 16 aldermen, & 48 councillors. It has quarter & petty sessions, courts of record & requests, & is the seat of assizes for the hundred of W. Derby. Its port jurisdiction comprises the whole estuary of the Mersey. It sends 2 members to H. of C. Reg. electors 1851, 17,316.

LOING, Luna, a river of France, rises in St. Colombe, dep. Yonne, flows past Châtillon, Montargis, Nemours, & Moret, where it joins the Seine on the left. Length 70 m. It feeds the canals of Braire and Loing, by means of which the Seine communicates with the Loire.

LOIR, Lidericus, a river of France, rises in the lagoon of Cernay, dep. Eure-et-Loir, flows past Châteaudun, Vendôme, Château-du-Loir, & Durtal, and joins the Sarthe on the left, 5 m. N. Angers. Length 156 miles.

LOIRE, Liger, an important river of Europe, & the largest in France, rises in Mont Gerbier-de-Jones, dep. Ardèche, at an elev. of 3,940 feet, flows N.N.W., and W. past Roanne, Nevers, La Charité, Cosne, Gien, Orleans, Beaugency, Blois, Amboise, Tours, Saumur, Ancenis, Nantes, & Paimbœuf, & enters the Bay of Biscay by a wide estuary below St. Nazarie, dep. Loire-Inf. Length 580 m.; principal affls. on the right, the Lignon, Semène, Furend, Coise, Rahins, Sornin, Reconce, Arroux, Aron, Nièvre, Ceze, Authion, & Maine; on the left, the Borne, Ance, Lignon, Aix, Bèbre, Acolin, Allier, Loiret, & Cosson. It is navigable in descending from la Nivrie, & in ascending to Roanne, dep. Loire. The tide is perceptible as far as Nantes.

Its course is generally rapid, & navigation is interrupted during 5 or 6 months in the year, from want of water, overflowing, or freezing. Dikes & barrages have been constructed along a great part of its course, many of which were destroyed by a great flood in 1846. Vessels of upwards of 300 tons discharge at Paimbœuf. The Loire is connected by canals with the Saône, Seine, & Vilaine. There is steam communication between Moulins and Nantes, by means of the Allier & Loire.

LOIRE, a dep. of the S.E. of France, formed of the old prov. of Lyonnais, & situated between the deps. Rhône, Saône-et-Loire, Allier, Puy-de-Dôme, H. Loire, Ardèche & Isère; cap. Montbrison. Area, 1,921 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 472,588. Surface generally elev. and mntnous.; traversed in the S.E. by the mntns. of the Cevennes, & partly enclosed between them & the mntns. of Forez; highest point is Mont Pila, in the Cevennes. The greater portion of the dep. is situated in the basin of the Loire, & watered by its affls., the Ondène, Furond, Lignon, & Sornin; the Rhone forms its limit in the S.E. Climate variable, but healthy. Soil generally infertile; corn raised insufficient for home consumption; potatoes & hemp are important crops, & the chestnuts of Lyon are celebrated. Wines are generally of good quality, the best are those of the valley of the Rhone. Silk worms are extensively reared, especially in the vicinity of Bourg-Argental, where is produced the finest silk in France for the manuf. of blondes. From the inexhaustible richness of its coal basin, this is one of the most important mining deps. in the country; the other mineral products are iron, marble, granite, porphyry, & flint. There are numerous mineral springs, the best frequented of which are St. Alban, Sail-sous-Couzan, & St. Galmier. The manufs. of this dep. are among the most celebrated & extensive in France; the 2 chief branches are silk & ribbons, the principal seats of which are at St. Chamond & St. Etienne, & iron and steel goods, of which St. Etienne is the centre. The next important manufs. are those of flint glass & bottles, laces, cottons & muslins, common cloths, paper & leather. Boat-building is carried on to a considerable extent at Roanne & St. Rambert. The dep. has 3 lines of r. r. connecting the principal towns with Lyon, & is divided into the arronds. Montbrison, Roanne, & St. Etienne.

LOIRE, a comm. & vill. of France, dep. Rhône, arrond. & 14 m. S. Lyon. Pop. 1,450.

LOIRE (HAUTE), a dep. of the S.E. of France, formed of part of the old prov. of Languedoc, & situated between the deps. Loire, Puy-de-Dome, Cantal, Lozere, & Ardèche; cap. Le Puy. Area, 1,920 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 304,615. Surface elev. & mntnous., traversed on the E. by the Cevennes, & on the W. by the mntns. of Margerides, which unite the Cevennes with mountains of Auvergne, & on the S. by the Forez mntns. Many of these are volcanic; culminating point, Mont Mezin, in the Cevennes, 5,794 feet. The dep. is entirely situated in the basin of the Loire, by which and by its affl. the Allier, & numerous smaller streams, it is watered. Climate rigorous in the mntn. dists. Soil poor, sterile on the slopes of the mntns. Agriculture in a very backward state; corn & potatoes sufficient for home consumption. Wine is raised in small quantity & of inferior quality. Cattle rearing is an important branch of industry; bees are numerous in some localities, & furnish excellent honey, and silk worms are extensively reared. Chief mineral products, coal, antimony, gypsum, building stone, & potter's clay. Manufs. are unimportant, the chief are lace, silk, ribbons, paper, & leather. From the want of employment, a great portion of the pop. leave the dep. during a considerable part of the year. The dep is divided into the arronds. Brioude, Le Puy, and Yssengeaux.

LOIRE-INFERIEURE, a maritime dep. in the N.W. of France, formed of part of the old prov. Bretagne, situated on the Atlantic Ocean & the Bay of Biscay, between the deps. Morbihan, Ille-et-Vilaine, Mayenne, Maine-et-Loire, & Vendée; cap. Nantes. Area, 2,735 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 535,664. Surface in general level, traversed by low hills, and mostly situated in the basin of the Loire, & its estuary. Chief rivers, the Loire, Vilaine, Erdre, Brivé, Sevre-Nantaise, Moine, Maine, Acheneau, & Ognon. The dep. contains numerous lagoons, among which the étang de Grand-Lieu is the largest in France. Climate humid, but healthy. Soil generally fertile. Agriculture in an advanced state; chief products, grain & wines, the latter are nearly all pale, & are of second class quality. Cattle are extensively reared, horses excellent, & sheep of good breeds; bees are numerous. Chief mineral products, marine salt, turf, coal, & iron. Nantes is the principal port. The department is divided into the arronds. Ancenis, Châteaubriand, Nantes, Paimbœuf, and Savenay.

LOIRET, Ligerula, a river of France, dep. Loiret, rises in 2 springs, 2 m. S.S.E. Orleans, & joins the Loire on the left near Orleans; length 10 m.

LOIRET, a dep. of the N.W. of France, forming part of the old prov. Orleannais, situated between the deps. Seine-et-Oise, Eure-et-Loire, Loir-et-Cher, Cher, Nievre, Yonne, & Seine-et-Marne; cap. Orleans. Area, 2,645 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 341,029. Surface flat & little elevated. The N. portion is situated in the basin of the Seine, & watered by its affls., the Loing & Essonne, & in the S. it is traversed by the Loire, & watered by its affls., the Loiret, Cosson, & Beuvron. There are several lagoons in the basin of the Loing. Climate mild & healthy, except near the lagoons. Soil rich & fertile N. of the Loire, but poor on the S. of that river. Chief products, grain, wine, saffron, lint, & timber. Apples, for cider are extensively grown. Wine mostly red, & of good quality. Sheep & cattle are numerous, & of good breeds; fowls & bees abundant. Mineral products comprise only building stones & potter's clay. There are mineral springs at Segray & Beaugency, the former of which has a bath establishment. The important manufs., of which Orleans was formerly the seat, have greatly declined; the chief are cloths and woollen caps, pottery, cotton thread, leather, beet-root sugar, & paper. The dep. is divided into the arronds. of Gien, Montargis, Orleans, & Pithiviers.

LOIR-ET-CHER, a dep. in the N.W. of France, formed of part of the old prov. of Orleannais, surrounded by the deps. Eure-et-Loir, Sarthe, Indre-et-Loir, Indre, Cher, & Loiret. Area, 2,363 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 261,892. Surface level, & having numerous etangs (lagoons). It is situated in the basin of the Loire, & watered by many of its affls. Soil generally fertile, except in the S.; climate mild. Agriculture forms the chief occupation of the pop. Chief products, grain, wine, hemp, & fruits. The wines are in general of good quality, the best are those of the Cher. Sheep are numerous, & of good breeds; horses are excellent. The rearing of bees & fowl is an important branch of rural industry; that of silk worms is inconsiderable. The most valuable mineral product is that of flint. There are mineral springs at St. Denis & Vieuvy-le-Rayé, & valuable fishing in the lagoons. Manufs. comprise leather, glass, woollen cloths, cottons, beet-root sugar, paper & gloves. The dep. is divided into the 3 arronds. of Blois, Romarantin, & Vendôme.

Total	2,281,732
Total, both Govs.	5,007,472

Caps., Milan and Venice. It is composed of a vast plain inclined to the S.W., & situated entirely in the basin of the Adriatic, between lat. 44° 47′ 10″ & 46° 40′ 25″ N., and lon. 8° 33′ and 13° 43′ E., bounded E. by the Adriatic and Illyria S. by the Pontifical States Modena & Parma, S.W. and W. by Piedmont, N. by Switzerland & the Tyrol. Area, 17,511 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 5,007,472. The territory is enclosed on the N. by the Rhætian, Noric, Carnic & Julian Alps, from which several extensive valleys depend. The mntns. Euganei & Berici, in the gov. Venice, form 2 masses of little extent, nearly isolated in the plain. The rest of the territory is composed of low plains, which terminate in lagoons, on the shores of the Adriatic. The principal rivers are the Po & its affls., all of which flow to the Adriatic. 29 of these are navigable, & many of them are connected by means of canals. All the fine lakes of northern Italy, belong wholly, or in part, to the Lombardo-Venetian government; the Lago Maggiore forms its W. boundary. Climate severe in the mntn. regions, but none of the mntns. rise to the snow line; otherwise it is temperate & healthy, except near the lagoons & in the vicinity of the rice fields. Mean temp. of year at Milan 55°.2; at Venice 55°.4; it is often, however, severe in winter, & the lagoons of Venice are sometimes frozen over; rain falls often and copiously in summer & autumn; average ann. amount 35 in., but at Tolmezzo, on the Taglimento, the average fall is 100 ins. The prevailing winds are N.N.W. & N.E. in the gov. Venice, & E., W. & N.E. in the gov. Milan. The soil, in the plains, composed of rich alluvium, & abounding in marine deposits, is almost everywhere extremely fertile; it is cultivated with great care, and the system of artificial irrigation is the most complete in Europe. The provs. of Lombardy & Venice are the most fertile in the Austrian empire. Principal products, maize, wheat, oats, rye, & barley. The number of cattle, 1845, was, in the prov. Milan, 407,890, & in Venice 369,782; in the deleg. Lodi the finest Parmesan, & in Milan the best Strachino, cheese is made. Wine is an important product, but its quality is generally inferior. Hemp & flax, of excellent quality, are extensively grown. Minerals comprise copper, iron, lead, arsenic, marble, alabaster, potter's clay, coal, & precious stones. The principal mineral springs are those of Bormio, Massino, & Trescorre, in the gov. Milan; & Albano, Rovere, Recoaro, & Piano, in the gov. Venice. The principal manufs. are silks, cheese, cloths, printed cottons, paper, glass, & pottery ware. The principal seats of commerce are Venice, Milan, Brescia, Bergamo, Padua, & Verona. Commerce is facilitated by means of excellent roads, including those leading over the Splugen & Valtelne, & by navigation on the lakes, rivs., & canals. The railroads in operation are the great line from Milan to Venice, & the lines from Milan to Monza N.W. & Milan to Treviglion. The pop. belong chiefly to the Italia-Tuscan family, of whom 2,667,202 are R. Catholics, & 2,965 Jews. Roman Catholicism is the religion of the state. The chief educational establishments are the universities of Pavia & Padua; 12 colleges (Licei), 43 gymnasia, & numerous other schools. The royal imperial institute of Milan has sections at Vienna, Padua, & Verona, & there are 24 public libraries in the state. The kingdom is divided into the archbishopries of Milan & Venice, & 18 bishoprics; it has 37 monasteries & 34 nunneries, & numerous hospitals & charitable institutions. The Lombardo-Venetian kingdom was formed in 1814, of part of the kgdm. of Italy, created by Napoleon. The congress of Vienna recognised it as a possession of the Austrian empire, & granted to Austria the power of maintaining garrisons in Ferrara & Comacchio, beyond its southern frontier. [AUSTRIA.]

LONDON, p-t., Monroe co., Mich., 45 S.W. Detroit, 502 W. Soil fertile, adapted to grain. It has a tannery, a grist m., 2 saw m. Pop. 1840, 425; 1850, 626.

LONDON, p-t., capital, Middlesex co., Can. W., at the junction of the two branches of Thames r., & on the Great Western railroad, 125 m. W.S.W. Toronto, & 81 from Hamilton. It contains a court-house, 8 churches, 1 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Free, 1 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, & 1 African; a savings bank, a seminary, 52 stores, 3 iron foundries, 2 tanneries, 2 breweries, 3 printing-offices, each issuing a weekly newspaper; & in 1852, 7,124 inhab. Pop. of tshp. 6,035.

LONDON [Londinium, Augusta Trinobantum, Camera Regis, of the Romans; French & Spanish, Londres; Italian, Londra; Dutch, Londen], the capital of the United Kingdom of Great Britain & Ireland, & the largest & most important city in the world, on the Thames, about 40 m. from its mouth; lat. (St Paul's cathedral) 51° 30′ 48″ N., lon. 0° 5′ 38″ W. (R). On the left bank, where the principal part of London is built, in the cos. Middlesex & Essex, the site rises gradually at the rate of 36 feet per mile; while, on the opposite bank, the houses cover nearly a uniform & extensive flat, forming part of the cos. of Surrey & Kent, & lying, in some places, several feet below the highest tides. "London extends over an area of 78,029 acres & 122 sq. miles, & the number of its inhabs. was 2,362,236, on the day of the last census. A conception of this vast mass of people may be formed by the fact that, if the metropolis was surrounded by a wall, having a north gate, a south gate, an east gate, & a west gate, & each of the four gates was of sufficient width to allow a column of persons to pass out freely four abreast, & a peremptory necessity required the immediate evacuation of the city, it could not be accomplished under four-&-twenty hours, by the expiration of which time the head of each of the four columns would have advanced a no less distance than seventy-five miles from their respective gates, all the people being in close file, four deep."

The city is built on alluvial deposits consisting of beds of clay & gravel, below which is the hard clay stratum known to geologists by the name of "London clay," in the middle of the great chalk basin extending from Berkshire to the E. coast. As regards salubrity, there are considerable differences, according to the nature of the locality, the density of the population, the state of the drainage, & other causes; but London, on the whole, is a healthy city; the mortality in the seven ordinary years 1838-1844, being at an average rate of 25 deaths annually out of every 1,000 inhabitants, while that of Paris is 33 in 1,000. In 11 of the 36 London districts, the mortality was lower than in all Engl.; the proportion for the latter being 22 in 1000. Hanover square & its vicinity, Camberwell, Lewisham, Islington, & Hackney are some of the healthier districts; while the region round Smithfield, Blackfriars' Bridge, & the Tower, is the most unhealthy. The prevailing wind is the S.W., & there are few places in Britain where less rain falls. The mean annual temperature is 50° 5′, & the general range of the thermometer is from 20° to 81°; the highest & lowest markings being, for the most part in August & January respectively. Occasionally the mercury rises above 90°; & it has, on rare occasions, descended below zero at night. In the beginning of winter, the lower parts of London especially are occasionally enveloped in fogs, so dense that the shops require to be lighted, & vehicles of all kinds are brought to a stand still.

Though the thick atmosphere of the climate, & the smoke continually hovering over London, render it impossible, or next to impossible, to survey properly the whole metropolis from any one point, still there are a number of positions whence interesting & picturesque views may be obtained, either of the whole or of considerable portions of it; the great dome of St. Paul's, forming a most conspicuous object. Among these may be named Highgate Hill on the N., & Blackheath on the S.E. side; the top of the Colisseum in Regent's Park, the top of St. Paul's, & of the Monument in the City, & of the Duke of York's column at the end of Waterloo Place. London was surrounded with walls by the Romans, & its extent was then, probably, limited by the end of Leadenhall Street & the top of Ludgate Hill, on the E. & W., by the river on the S., & London Wall & Little Britain on the N.; this part of the city being called "London within the walls." The walls seem to have extended along the river, as well as on the other sides. The city, at the present day, is bounded S. as formerly by the Thames; it extends N. up Goswell Street to Charterhouse Square, E. along High Street, Whitechapel, to Middlesex Street; & W. along the Strand to Temple Bar, the only remaining city gate, & a work of Sir Christopher Wren. It is to this portion of the metropolis alone that the term "The City" is exclusively applied. Notwithstanding the great size of London—comprising, even in the portion of it presenting a solid mass of houses E. to W. From Blackwall to Chelsea, a distance of 7 m.; & N. to S., from Walworth to Holloway, a distance of 4¼ m.—it is tolerably easy for strangers to make their way in it, as the Thames traverses it from W. to E., & most of the great lines of streets run nearly parallel to the river, while these are intersected by streets running N. & S. With the exception of public buildings, some club-houses, banks, assurance offices, & residences of the nobility, the houses of London are uniformly built of brick; & in the more modern parts of the town, frequently covered with a plaster composition. In the older parts the great majority of the streets are narrow, & frequently crooked; but in those parts that have recently sprung into existence, they are wide & spacious. Of the W. to E. streets, the most important is that which enters on the W. from Kew & Kensington, forming the finest of all the approaches to London; it stretches on, through Knightsbridge & Piccadilly, with Apsley House & numerous other edifices facing the Green Park, which constitutes its S. boundary for about half its length. This line is somewhat broken at the E. end of Piccadilly, but the Strand continues it, somewhat nearer the river, & it stretches on through Temple Bar, along Fleet Street, Ludgate Hill, St. Paul's Churchyard, Cheapside, Cornhill, & Leadenhall Street, from whence it branches off into the Mile-End Road & the Commercial Road. The next great artery between the W. & E. extends along Oxford Street, which is itself 1½ m. in length, through Holborn, Skinner Street, and Newgate Street, where it joins the more S. line above described at the W. end of Cheapside. Further N. again is a third line, extending from Paddington to the city; as far E. as Islington, a distance of about 2¾ m., it is called the New Road, & thence to Finsbury Square, about 1 m., it bears the name of the City Road. Among the principal streets which run N. & S., in the West End, are Park Lane, with its numerous elegant structures overlooking Hyde Park; St. James' Street, with its handsome club houses & hotels; Bond Street, so narrow but fashionable; Regent Street, one of the broadest streets, & perhaps the handsomest in London. This street is greatly frequented as a promenade, & with its magnificent shops, its crowds of well-dressed loungers, & the incessant throng of elegant equipages, it presents, a most interesting & animated spectacle; on the N. it communicates with Portland Place, which may be considered a continuation of Regent Street. This is also a very handsome & spacious street, consisting entirely of private residences, it is now less fashionable than it was 20 years ago. On the S., Regent Street communicates with Piccadilly by a double crescent of stately buildings called the Quadrant, terminating in a circus, which corresponds with that on the N., where Regent Street intersects Oxford Street. From Piccadilly, Regent continuous S., widening at its termination into Waterloo Place, which is ornamented at its S. extremity with the Duke of York's column. In Southwark & Lambeth the principal thoroughfares lead from the bridges to a common centre, the well known posting-house called the Elephant & Castle, nearly equidistant from all of them except Vauxhall & Chelsea bridges. These great lines of roads, with several others, though wide & well-built streets, if Blackfriars' Road be excepted, are inferior to the leading lines on the N. side of the river.

The city of London, as we have already seen, now forms but a small part of the metropolis, & it may be said to be only inhabited in the day time; for, in the afternoon, the busy & anxious crowds who jostle in its narrow streets during the day, rush from their warehouses & counting-houses in the city to their homes in the West End or in the different suburbs.

Great improvements have been recently effected in this quarter, especially in the neighborhood of the Bank & the Exchange, by the opening of new streets of considerable breadth, & in a very superior style of architecture, especially those that lead from the Bank to London Bridge on the one hand, & to Moorfields on the other. This portion of the metropolis alone possesses a corporation, the oldest, richest, & most powerful municipal body in the world. The city is divided into 108 parishes, of which 97 are called "without," & 11 "within" the walls—a distinction which is merely nominal, as the walls have long since disappeared. The space which extends down the N. bank of the river as far as Blackwall, is occupied by the various docks, wharfs, and warehouses, & inhabited by slopsellers, crimps, & sailors. To the N. of this district lie Spitalfields & Bethnal Green, which is traversed by the Eastern Counties railr., from which the traveller can readily distinguish the silk-weavers busily plying their handlooms. Adjoining Spitalfields, on its W. side, is Clerkenwell, the seat of the watch-trade. On the N., the parish of Islington, placed on a salubrious elevation, where new streets & squares of flimsy construction rise in amazingly rapid succession, is mostly inhabited by the middle classes. On the Surrey side, Southwark, including Bermondsey, is the great seat of the tanning trade; while Lambeth is occupied generally with manufactories. Shadwell & Rotherhithe are the head-quarters of sailors, & are but meanly built & inhabited; indeed the whole of the r. bank of the Thames is much inferior in wealth & importance to that portion of the metropolis on the l. or Middlesex shore. The E. line of the city of Westminster coincides with the W. line of the city of London, Temple Bar being the point of junction in the Strand. It is bounded to the N. by Oxford street, from Tottenham Court Road to Kensington Gardens, & its W. limit, passing through the Serpentine in Hyde Park, reaches the Thames at Chelsea Hospital. Marylebone, Finsbury, & Tower Hamlets form a continuous line lying in the N. & E. of these two cities. With regard to the "West End"—a term used to distinguish the fashionable part of London from the rest—its body & centre are bounded by Regent street & Waterloo Place on the E., St. James' Park on the S., Park Lane & Green Park on the W., & by the western division of Oxford street on the N. This square & compact body, which contains the mansions of the nobility, the club-houses & the squares in which reside the élite of fashion, is bounded on the N. by Marylebone; a district which was not long since fashionable, but which has greatly declined in that respect since the rise of Belgravia, although a few ducal & other aristocratic residents are still to be found in Cavendish & Portman squares. Still further N. lies the Regent's Park district, containing some fine terraces & crescents, & numerous pretty villas. Those who dwell here belong chiefly to the middle classes, among whom are a considerable number of city merchants. To the E. of Marylebone lies the Bloomsbury district, with its well-built houses and squares, erected towards the latter part of the last century. This portion of London is chiefly occupied by lawyers & merchants. Still further E., we recognize the architecture of the era of Anne, in the capacious dwellings of Great Ormond street & Queen square, where fashion reigned near the beginning of last century. To ths S. of this line is the Strand district, which is strictly trading, although the streets running out of it towards the river are chiefly occupied by lodging-houses. In the extreme W. of London have recently risen into existence two extensive districts, Tyburnia & Belgravia, which flank Hyde Park on the N. & S. The fields & gardens which extended, twelve or fifteen years ago, from near Edgeware Road to Bayswater, have now given place to streets, terraces, & squares, which form a striking contrast, by the regularity of their appearance, to many of the older portions of London. The houses, from their height, have an air of grandeur, but the uniformity of their plaster decorations becomes tiresome. Here reside great numbers of professional men & city merchants, as well as various others who have some pretensions to fashion. Belgravia, on the S. or opposite side of Hyde Park, is bounded on the E. by Grosvenor place, a fine range of buildings facing the Green Park & Buckingham Palace Gardens; on the N. by Knightsbridge, on the E. by Sloane street, & on the S.E. by Ebury street. Belgrave square forms the nucleus of this fashionable region, & contains, like many of the streets around it, numerous edifices of palatial size & structure. Contiguous to this district lie Chelsea & Brompton; the latter lying low, and, possessing a warm & moist air, is the resort of consumptive persons. On the S.E. of Belgravia, also, lies Westminster proper, one of the poorest & most squalid districts in the metropolis. Malaria & disease prevail here; the drains being below the high-water level of the river, & the moral atmosphere is equally tainted. Something has been recently done to cure both evils, by the opening of a new street, & the building of three new churches; the erection of the latter being due to private liberality.

The streets are regularly kept clean, & are well lighted & paved. The carriage-way is generally paved with granite, but several streets, such as Regent street & the New Road, are macadamized. The amount annually expended in paving exceeds 200,000*l*. From the extent of the metropolis, & the great amount of business carried on in it, the principal streets, as might be expected, present a continual throng of vehicles of every description, often forming an almost unbroken line above a mile in length. The principal E. & W. lines are the great scenes of crowded thoroughfare; in them, the narrow parts are not unfrequently completely blocked up for a time, passage either one way or other being quite impracticable; when long lines of omnibuses, cabs, private carriages, drays, & dust-carts may be seen waiting in impatience till the street is cleared from the temporary obstruction.

Squares & Public Monuments.—The squares of London are numerous, & many of them of great extent & exceedingly elegant, the centre generally being occupied with shrubbery, which, notwithstanding the smoke of the metropolis, usually thrives well; & many of them are adorned with statues, which, both in conception & execution, are of very various degrees of merit. Among the squares more deserving of notice, may be named—Lincoln's Inn Fields, with an area of 12 ac., near the centre of the metropolis; Eaton, Belgrave, 10 ac.; Grosvenor, Portman, Cavendish squares, all in the W. end; Russell square, 10 ac.; Bedford, Bloomsbury, Tavistock, & Euston squares, in the N. part of the town; & Trafalgar square, at Charing Cross; fronting one of the principal thoroughfares, & adorned with public buildings, fountains, the Nelson column, & statues of Charles I. & George IV. The most conspicuous public monuments are "The Monument," on Fish Street Hill, London Bridge, a fluted Dorick column, 202 ft. high, erected in 1677, in commemoration of the great fire of London; the York column, at the S. end of Waterloo Place, a plain Doric pillar of granite, 124 ft. high, surmounted by a bronze statue of the Duke of York; a fluted Corinthian column, in Trafalgar square, 176½ ft. high, raised in honor of Nelson, & surmounted with a colossal bronze statue of the hero, while the pedestal is decorated with bronze sculptures in high-relief, the figures larger than life; & a colossal equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, placed on the summit of the grand arch at the top of Constitution hill, forming the approach to Buckingham Palace; & another of smaller size in front of the Exchange.

Gas, Water, Sewerage.—London is supplied with gas by twenty companies, producing above 15,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day. And there are seven water companies, supplying daily 44,573,979 gallons, being at the rate of 164 gallons for each house. The principal source whence water is obtained is the Thames, some of the companies deriving their supplies from the river as high up as Kew, & some as far down as between Westminster & Waterloo bridges. Spring water from Hertfordshire, is brought in by an aqueduct called the New River, 40 m. in length, including windings; & a further supply is drawn from the river Lea. Artesian wells, of excellent water, may be formed in any part of London, by boring down to the chalk: but such a source of supply for the metropolis would seem little to be depended upon, from the fact, that existing wells of this kind have, in recent years, been rapidly lowering in level. Some portions of London are well drained; but in others, such as Bermondsey, Westminster, Wapping, where the sewers are below the level of high water, the drainage is necessarily imperfect; & the consequence is, that malignant fevers, & other epidemic diseases, make fearful ravages among the inhabitants of those districts. But although much remains to be done, the system of sewers deserve to be ranked as one of the wonders of London, from their great depth and immense size. The ordinary daily amount of sewerage discharged into the Thames on the N. side, has been calculated at 7,045,120 cubic ft.; and on the S. side, 2,407,600 cubic ft.

Bridges & the Thames Tunnel.—Within the limits of the metropolis, & W. of the Tower, the Thames averages 1,000 ft. wide. Till towards the middle of last century it was crossed by only one bridge; but now, between Chelsea & the Tower, there are eight bridges, three of which are within the limits of the city, & four in Westminster. The lowest down, & most important of all, is London Bridge, connecting the city at King William street, with Southwark at the junction of Wellington street & Tooley street. It is an elegant structure of granite; built after designs by John Rennie, & under the superintendence of his son Sir John Rennie. Of the immense traffic on this bridge, some idea may be formed from the fact, that 13,000 carriages, of all kinds, pass along it every hour. About 500 yards farther up the river, stands Southwark Bridge, in like manner connecting the city & Southwark; Queen street & Bridge street being the approaches on either side. It is an iron bridge, of three segmental arches, resting on stone piers, & was erected by the elder Rennie. About half a mile further W., Blackfriars' Bridge connects the city at Bridge street, with Southwark at Great Surrey street. It was designed by Mylne, & built of Portland stone, which, not having resisted the effects of the water & the atmosphere, the piers have latterly been cased with granite; & otherwise, the frequent repairs upon it have more than doubled its original cost. Waterloo Bridge, nearly half a mile above the former, is esteemed by many to be the finest in the world. It was constructed of granite, by the elder John Rennie, &, including its approaches, supported on semicircular arches, is 2,456 ft. long; it is perpectly level, & connects the Strand with the Waterloo Road. Under ¼ m. S.W., Hungerford Suspension Bridge, constructed by I. K. Brunel, for foot-passengers only, spans the river from Hungerford market to Belvedere Road; it is 1,352 ft. long. Westminster Bridge, opened in the middle of last century, crosses the river at the N. end of the Houses of Parliament, from Westminster to Lambeth, & about 700 yards S. from Hungerford Bridge. It was built of Portland stone, & is in such a state of decay, that unless taken down, it must soon give way of its own accord; about 3,000,000 of horses pass along this bridge annually. Nearly 1 m. S. from the last-named bridge, Westminster & Lambeth are a third time connected by Vauxhall Bridge; the Vauxhall Bridge Road, leading from Pimlico & New Bridge street, leading from Vauxhall Gardens, being the approaches on either side; like Southwark Bridge, it is of cast iron, but is very inferior to it in every respect. Nearly 2 m. W. by S. from this bridge, Chelsea or Battersea Bridge connects the localities whence it obtains its double name, & is an old wooden structure, opened in 1772. The following table shows the chief measurements, cost, &c., of the bridges:—

The Thames Tunnel, a roadway under the river, which is generally regarded as the greatest wonder of the metropolis, is 2 m. below London Bridge. An attempt was made in 1808, to make a tunnel below the river at Limehouse; but the water burst in & destroyed the works, when the tunnel, which entered on the Surrey side, had reached within 200 ft. of the opposite bank. The present work is a monument of the skill & energy of Sir Isambert Brunel, who commenced operations March 2, 1825. On August 12, 1828, there was an inundation, which stopped the works till January, 1835, when they were renewed with great energy, and the tunnel was at length opened to the public, March 25, 1843. It consists of a hollow brick cylinder or tube, subdivided into two roadways, each 15 ft. high, & 12 feet broad. The entire cost was about 614,000*l.*, of which the government lent 247,000*l.* to the company who carried on the enterprise. As a speculation, the tunnel has turned out very unprofitable; the annual receipts being under 5,000*l.*—a sum which is barely sufficient to keep it in repair, as land-springs make constant inroads. There is a cylindrical shaft at each end, with 100 steps, by which foot passengers ascend & descend, on paying a toll of a penny each. The company have not been able to meet the cost of completing the approaches, so that there is no access for vehicles of any kind.

Palaces.—St. James', erected by Henry VIII., from a design by Holbein, at the foot of St. James' street, is an irregular, dingy-looking brick building. But it is well adapted internally for royal levees & drawing-rooms, which are held here during the fashionable seasons. Buckingham Palace, facing the W. end of St. James' Park, was built by George IV., & consists, since the erection of the E. front, of a quadrangular range of buildings. This E. façade, which is loftier than the rest, & in the Italian style, gives to the whole a more palatial appearance than it formerly possessed. The situation is low & damp, & the palace is flanked on the S. by buildings of an inferior description, while the gardens are overlooked on the W. by the houses in Grosvenor Place. In the gallery, which is 160 ft. long, are some good pictures. The Queen resides here several months every year in the spring & summer. Whitehall:—The Banqueting House, designed by Inigo Jones, in the Palladian style, & justly regarded as one of the greatest architectural ornaments of London, is the only remnant of the ancient palace of Whitehall; the ceiling, painted by Rubens, is the most extensive work of that artist existing in the country. In front of it was beheaded Charles I., who was conducted to the scaffold through an opening which was made in the walls for the purpose. Kensington Palace, situated in Kensington Gardens, is a plain brick building. It was purchased by William III., & became his favorite residence, & was the birth-place of her Majesty Queen Victoria. Lambeth Palace, on the Surrey side of the river, opposite the houses of Parliament, has been for many centuries the residence of the Archbishops of Canterbury. It is a brick edifice, & comprises a great variety of styles in architecture, & contains a library of 25,000 vols.

The Parks.—Of these the largest & most fashionable is Hyde Park, which lies between the Uxbridge and Kensington roads, & contains about 400 acres. It has, towards the S. side, a large artificial lake, called the Serpentine, which is spanned by a handsome bridge of five arches, at the entrance to Kensington Gardens. The principal entrance to the Park on the S. side, is by a triple archway close to Apsley House, & within a few yards of that point is the beginning of Rotten Row, a narrow strip railed off for equestrians, & stretching about 1 m. towards Kensington.

Somewhat further N., and on the other side of the Serpentine, is a fashionable drive called the Ladies' Mile, which extends nearly to the bridge before mentioned; & here, on the summer afternoons, may be seen vast numbers of splendid equipages driving up & down, while others make the circuit of the park. On Sunday afternoon it is frequented, for the most part, by an inferior description of equipages, while the footpath on each side is crowded with promenaders of all ranks. The principal entrance on the N. side is at the end of Oxford Street, & is adorned with an elegant arch of white marble, which formerly stood in front of Buckingham Palace. Kensington Gardens, with which Hyde Park communicates at several points, are well wooded & finely laid out. Here carriages are not admitted. St. James' Park (83 ac.) extends from Buckingham Palace to the Horse Guards, & in its centre is an ornamented sheet of water, studded with islets covered with trees and shrubs, and round which swim a great variety of aquatic fowls. St. James' Park is a favorite resort of the humbler classes, especially on Sunday. The Green Park, 71 ac. in extent, lies between St. James' Park, on the S., & Piccadilly on the N. On the E. side it is overlooked by Stafford House, Bridgewater House, Spenser House, and other noble mansions. Regent's Park, on the N. side of London, covers an area of 468 ac. Round the park is an agreeable drive nearly 2 m. long, & an inner circular drive encloses the Botanic Gardens. At the N. end are the Zoological Gardens, to which a fine broad avenue leads along the centre of the park, with clusters of trees on each hand, & footpaths ramifying out in all directions. Victoria Park, on the N.E. of London, was recently laid out & planted as a place of recreation for the inhabitants of Spitalfields & Bethnal Green. Battersea Park was lately formed on the S. bank of the Thames, opposite to Chelsea hospital, at a cost of £200,000.

The New Palace of Westminster, or the Houses of Parliament—This vast & magnificent edifice contains the House of Peers & the House of Commons, with the various apartments & offices connected with parliamentary business. It is a highly decorated structure, in the Tudor Gothic style, after designs by Sir Charles Barry, & is still incomplete. It stands partly on the site of the old Houses of Parliament, destroyed by fire in 1834, on the lt. b. of the Thames, between the river & Westminster Abbey, & extends over an area of about 8 ac. The façade, which overlooks the river, 900 feet in length, produces a grand effect, which is due, in a great measure, to the three magnificent towers; but the site is unfortunately too low, and the building itself not lofty enough for its extent. The walls are of brick, faced externally with magnesian limestone; & the whole edifice is separated from the river by a terrace of granite. It is panelled with rich tracery, & profusely decorated with statues & shields of arms of the kings & queens of England, from the Conquest to the present time. In the S.W. angle, is the Victoria tower, supported upon four pointed arches 60 feet in height; it is 75 feet square, &, when completed, will be 340 feet in height. There is also a tower in the centre, 300 feet high by 60 feet, surmounted by a lantern; & the clock tower, at the N. end of the edifice, with its richly decorated spire, rises 320 ft. The House of Peers is an apartment 97 feet long, 45 ft. wide, & 45 ft. high; magnificently decorated throughout with carved oak panelling, a profusion of gilding, paintings in fresco, & richly-stained glass windows. The House of Commons is a somewhat smaller apartment, fitted up in a much plainer style. The foundation of the building was laid on April 27, 1840.

Government Offices.—These are mostly situated in & near Whitehall; the Treasury, Home Office, & Board of Trade, occupy one range of buildings, which have been recently improved by a uniform and handsome façade. The Horse Guards & Admiralty, which are somewhat nearer Charing Cross, have little to admire in their external appearance. The Ordnance Office, also, in Pall Mall, is a plain building. Some of the public offices are in Somerset House, a spacious and handsome quadrangle, finished in 1782, from designs by Sir W. Chambers; its N. façade, 200 feet in length, faces the Strand, & its S. front, 800 feet long, overlooks the river, viewed from which, it presents one of the most striking elevations in London. The Post-office, in the centre of London, near St. Paul's, is a spacious & handsome building, completed in 1829, from the designs of Smirke. It is 390 feet long, 130 ft. wide, & 64 feet high. Its façade, which is towards St. Martin's-le-Grand, has three Ionic porticoes, the one in the centre, which is the largest, being surmounted by a plain pediment. The Mint, a stone building of Grecian architecture, finished in 1811, stands on Tower Hill, & occupies, with its workshops & offices, about 10,000 sq. yds.

The Tower.—This celebrated fortress, which doubtless formed the nucleus of modern London, lies on the banks of the Thames, from which it is now separated by a platform, just beyond the liberties of the city. It occupies an area of 12 ac., enclosed within a wall surrounded by a ditch, now dry, but in former times filled with water from the Thames. On the S. side is an archway called the 'Traitor's Gate,' through which state prisoners were brought from the river. The most ancient part of the existing edifices—the White Tower—was erected about 1078, for William the Conqueror, by Gundulph, bishop of Rochester. It stands near the centre of the quadrangle, round which are placed several other towers, each having its distinctive name. The Tower contains the Wellington Barracks, erected on the site of the grand storehouse, burned down in 1841; the jewel room, a modern edifice, in which are preserved the regalia of Gt. Britain; the horse armory, Queen Elizabeth's armory, and the church of St. Peter-ad-Vincula. Besides its use as a fortress, the Tower was likewise the temporary residence of several kings and queens of England. But with its history as a state prison, for which it was used during five centuries, events are connected of much greater interest than any that pertain to the jousts, fêtes, and entertainments, of which it was the scene while occupied as a royal dwelling. Within its walls were confined kings, queens, statesmen, warriors, and philosophers. Many prisoners were here privately murdered, & many publicly executed; Edward V. & his brother, smothered by order of Richard III., may be mentioned among the former; and Anne Boleyn, Thomas Cromwell, Catherine Howard, & the dukes of Somerset & Monmouth among the latter; the headless bodies of whom are interred in the church of St. Peter above named.

Places of Worship.—St. Paul's Cathedral is the greatest architectural ornament of the metropolis, and the best-known edifice in it. It occupies the summit of Ludgate Hill, where its foundations were laid on June 21, 1675, on the site of the former cathedral, which was destroyed in the great fire of 1666. It was finished in 1710; & Sir Christopher Wren, by whom this magnificent temple was designed, lived to witness its completion. It is 510 feet in length, from E. to W., while the transept is 250 feet, exclusive of the semicircular portico at each end; the breadth of the W. front is 180 feet, and the height of the walls 110 feet. The building is crowned with an immense dome, surmounted by a lantern with ball & cross—the height of the latter being no less than 404 feet from the ground. From Ludgate Hill, a fine view is obtained of the W. façade, with its beautiful double portico of coupled columns in the Corinthian & Composite orders, & its two clock towers, each 222 feet high, over which rises the gigantic cupola. This vast structure, which is built entirely of Portland stone, cost only £747,954 2*s.* 9*d.*, which was paid by levying a tax on coal. The interior is extremely deficient in ornaments. Among the few monuments it contains are those of Lord Nelson, Sir Ralph Abercromby, Sir John Moore, Dr. Johnson, Howard, Sir Joshua Reynolds, & other eminent characters of modern times. Side by side, under the centre of the dome, lie interred Lord Nelson & the Duke of Wellington. Westminster Abbey, after St. Paul's, the finest ecclesiastical edifice in London, & one of the best specimens of the pointed style, dates from the reign of Henry III. & Edward I., when it was erected on the site of the Saxon minster, founded by Sebert. The beautiful chapel at the E. end was added by Henry VII.; &, at the beginning of last century, the upper part of the two towers at the W. end were erected from designs of Sir Christopher Wren. It is 360 feet long, & 195 feet wide within the walls. In this edifice the kings & queens have been crowned from Edward the Confessor to Queen Victoria; & here many of them are buried, some with, and others without, monuments. In the S. transept are the tombs & honorary monuments of great poets, from Chaucer down to Campbell, whence it is called 'Poets' Corner;' & in other parts are numerous sculptured monuments to statesmen, warriors, philosophers, divines, patriots, & eminent individuals generally, many of whom are interred within its walls. Of the other edifices, the most remarkable are St. Bartholomew's in W. Smithfield, which contains some fine specimens of Norman, early English, & later styles of architecture; St. Saviour's, in Southwark, which boasts of the best early English architecture in London in its choir & lady chapel, the only portions of the old church which remain; St. Stephen's, Walbrook, the interior of which is extremely fine, & generally regarded as one of Wren's best works: & the Temple church, which combines transition Norman architecture with early English, the latter in the choir, which was founded in 1240. Important restorations, in this church, have been recently completed at a cost of £70,000. Besides these, many of the older parish churches are elegant structures: among those worthy of being specified are Bow Church, St. Bride's in Fleet street, & St. Martin's-in-the-Field's. The churches of the earlier part of the present century, are altogether inferior in design, & mostly in a debased Grecian style. Those built in more recent years are chiefly adaptations of the Gothic, & give favorable indications of a return to a purer taste. Of the Roman Catholic churches in London, the largest is that called St. George's cathedral, in Southwark, finished in 1848, at a cost of about £30,000. The Dissenting places of worship are mostly plain, unpretending structures.

Public Buildings.—Besides churches, some of which have already been adverted to, a number of the most importa t, if not the most elegant buildings in the metropolis, are situated within the city. The nucleus of the whole is formed by the Bank of England, the Royal Exchange, & the Mansion House, which all face towards an open area, the centre of bustle & business, near the middle of the city, which is further adorned with the handsome offices of several assurance companies. The Bank of England, in Threadneedle street, belonging to a chartered company, established in 1693 under the management of a governor, deputy-governor, & twenty directors, was built in 1732. It has, since that period, received various additions and improvements, & now forms a low, flat, insulated, irregular parallelogram, covering 4 ac. of ground. Adjoining the Bank of England is the Royal Exchange, an extensive & ornate building, having a Corinthian portico, surmounted by a pediment, enriched by sculpture. It surrounds an open, interior quadrangle, in the centre of which is a marble statue of Queen Victoria, by Lough. In this court, which is surrounded by covered arcades, the meetings of the merchants on 'Change are held. An equestrian statue, by Chantrey, of the Duke of Wellington, occupies the area in front of the building. The Royal Exchange was originally founded by Sir Thomas Gresham in 1567; & having been burned down in 1666, it was rebuilt, & opened in 1669. This second Exchange having also been burned down on January 10, 1838, the present edifice was erected on its site. The Exchanges for special purposes are—the Stock Exchange, in Capel Court, the Coal Exchange, Lower Thames street, built by J. B. Bunning, opened on October 30, 1849; it is a sumptuous, though rather incongruous building, the great Hall of which is circular, 60 feet in diameter, & 74 feet to the apex of the glazed dome, with which it is covered; the Corn Exchange, a fine Doric structure, in Mark Lane, opened in 1747, & enlarged & partly rebuilt in 1827. The Mansion House, the residence of the Lord Mayor while he holds the office of first magistrate of the city, was built in 1739–53, from the designs of Dance, the city surveyor, at a cost of £71,000. It has a Corinthian portico in front, & stands in the E. end of the Poultry, nearly opposite the Bank of England. The Guildhall, situated at the N. end of King street, Cheapside, is the civic palace where the principal business of the Corporation of the city of London is conducted; and the magnificent banquets given here, have rendered city feasts proverbial. This edifice was erected at different periods, as may be perceived from its incongruous architecture. The debased Gothic front, with the city arms in the centre, was finished in 1789; but it has been since frequently repaired. The Hall, an immense room, in which 3,000 persons can dine, contains some monuments of ordinary sculpture; &, at the W. end, raised on pedestals, are the well-known colossal figures of Gog & Magog. The East India House, containing the offices of the East India Company, is situated in Leadenhall street. It is an extensive building, with an Ionic portico in front; and contains, besides the necessary accommodations for carrying on the business of the Company, an excellent library, rich in Asiatic literature, and an interesting museum of Indian objects.

Civic Corporation & Government.—The chief civic officer of London is the Lord Mayor, annually elected from among the aldermen who have been sheriffs, on September 29. The powers & privileges of this officer are very extensive. He is installed in office on Nov. 9, when a procession takes place called "the Lord Mayor's Show." The court of aldermen consists of 26 members, including the Lord Mayor. They are chosen for life by the householders of the twenty-six wards into which the city is divided, each being the representative of a separate ward. They are properly the subordinate governors of their respective wards, under the jurisdiction of the Lord Mayor, & preside in the courts of Wardmote for the redress of minor grievances. Such as have filled the office of Lord Mayor become justices of the quorum, & all others are justices of the peace within the city. The sheriffs, two in number, are annually chosen by the Livery, or general assembly of the freemen of London. The Common Council is a court consisting of 240 representatives, returned by 25 of the wards, in proportion to their relative extent; the 26th, or Bridge Ward Without, being represented by an alderman. The general business of this court is to legislate for the internal government of the city, its police, revenues, &c. The recorder is generally a barrister of eminence, appointed, for life, by the Lord Mayor & aldermen, as principal assistant and adviser to the civic magistracy, & one of the justices of Oyer & Terminer. The Livery of London is the aggregate of the members of the several city companies, of which there are 81, embracing the various trades of the metropolis. Of the city companies, 12 are termed great companies, & from one or other of them the Lord Mayor was formerly chosen. In order of precedence they are:—The Mercers, Grocers, Drapers, Fishmongers, Goldsmiths, Skinners, Merchant Tailors, Haberdashers, Salters, Ironmongers, Vintners, Clothworkers. Many of the companies are very rich, and possess large halls; few of them, however, having any pretensions to architectural beauty, excepting the Goldsmiths' Hall, behind the Post-office; the Fishmongers' Hall, near London Bridge, & the Ironmongers' Hall, in Fenchurch street, all of which are very elegant structures.

The Metropolitan Police.—The organisation of the present effective police force, is the consequence of Sir Robert Peel's celebrated bill of 1829. Before that period, the streets were often unsafe at night, from the small number & unfitness of the watchmen to whom the preservation of order was entrusted. This force is divided into the city police, confined to the city proper, & the metropolitan police; which latter consisted, in 1852, of 5,549, & their jurisdiction extended 10 or 12 miles round St. Paul's. In 1849, the total number of persons apprehended by the metropolitan police was 70,666, of whom 24,356 were females; 34,746 were discharged by the magistrate; 31,343 disposed of summarily, or held to bail; & 3,643 tried & convicted, only 700 being acquitted. In the same year, the number of felonies was 10,924, affecting property to the amount of 38,279*l.*, of which only 6,709*l.* were ultimately recovered. Only about one-third of those apprehended could read or write. In the same year there were 1,473 persons reported as lost or missing, of whom 994 were restored by the police; the suicides were 131, besides 76 attempted, but prevented—lower numbers than in Paris, notwithstanding the difference of population. The fire-engine establishment has seventeen stations, where engines & firemen are kept always in readiness; & there are two floating engines on the Thames. In 1849, the number of fires was 345, & in 1851 above 1,000.

Courts of Law.—The four courts of Chancery, Common Pleas, Queen's Bench, & Exchequer, are on the W. side of Westminster Hall, with which they communicate. The hall itself, which was built by William Rufus, & is 290 feet long, 68 feet wide, & 110 feet high, was formerly used for great state trials, from that of Sir William Wallace down to those of Warren Hastings & Lord Melville, which were the last. It now serves merely as a promenade for lawyers, during the sitting of the courts. It is said to be the longest apartment not supported by pillars in the world, except the Hall of Justice at Padua. The Old Bailey Sessions'-house, adjoining Newgate, is the central criminal court for the trial of prisoners who have committed offences within 10 m. of St. Paul's. One or more of the judges in Westminster Hall sit here also in the Old Court, while the New Court is presided over by the Recorder & Common Serjeant of the city of London. County courts, of which there are 11 within the metropolis and its immediate neighborhood, were established a few years ago for the trial of small debt cases, 50*l.* being the limit. In 1848, there were 85,621 plaints entered before these courts. The Crown appoints the judges, who are barristers. Beside the above, there are also the Clerkenwell Session-house, the city police courts, which are held at the Mansion-house & Guildhall, and are presided over by the Lord Mayor & one of the aldermen; & the 11 courts connected with the metropolitan police, each of which is presided over by a barrister of at least seven years' standing. Inns of Court:—Of these there are four, Inner Temple, Middle Temple, Lincoln's Inn, & Gray's Inn. They were originally colleges for the study of law, but now are little more than residences for lawyers. A law student, in order to be called to the bar, has merely to be entered as a member of one of these inns, & to dine a certain number of times in the common hall. The Inner & Middle Temple are close to Temple Bar, between Fleet street & the river. The roof of Middle Temple Hall, built in 1572, is considered the best specimen of Elizabethan architecture in London. Subordinate to the Temple are Clifford's, Clement's, Lyon's, and New Inns. Lincoln's Inn is situated between Chancery Lane & the extensive square called Lincoln's Inn Fields. During a portion of the year, the Lord Chancellor sits in the old hall, & the Vice-Chancellors hold their sittings in adjoining buildings. A magnificent hall & library, in the Tudor style, from the designs of Hardwick, have recently been erected in the gardens. Subordinate to Lincoln's is Furnival's Inn in Holborn. Gray's Inn stands on the N. side of Holborn, and has attached two Inns of Chancery—Staple Inn & Barnard's Inn. The gardens, first planted about the year 1600, were a fashionable promenade in the time of Charles II., & for some time after.

Prisons.—There are altogether about a dozen criminal prisons, three of which are in the city. Newgate, situated near St. Sepulchre's Church, is a gloomy and massive structure, formerly used for debtors as well as criminals, but now confined to felons, & accommodates properly about 400. Bridewell, near Blackfriars' Bridge, is a house of correction for vagrants, pilferers, or disorderly persons, summarily convicted before the Lord Mayor & Aldermen. Giltspur street Compter, near Newgate, which it resembles in its architecture, is used as a place of confinement for all prisoners at the Central Criminal Court & the London Sessions, & summarily convicted within the jurisdiction of the city magistrates. A house of correction is attached to it. It holds about 250. Clerkenwell prison, belonging to the county of Middlesex, is similar in character to the last. The House of Correction, Cold Bath Fields, which will hold about 1,200 prisoners, is a very extensive brick building, near Gray's Inn Lane, with spacious courts & airy grounds. The classification is good, & the silent system is followed, connected with hard labor. A large tread-mill employs 320 at a time. Millbank Penitentiary, or Prison, as it is now called, is an immense brick edifice, designed by Jeremy Bentham, & is said to have cost half a million sterling. The external walls form an irregular octagon, & enclose upwards of 16 acres of land. Its ground plan resembles a wheel, the governor's house occupying a circle in the centre, from which radiate six piles of buildings, terminating externally in towers. The average number of inmates is about 700. Every convict sentenced to transportation in Great Britain, is sent here previously to the sentence being carried into execution, & remains three months under close inspection. Horsemonger Lane Jail, Southwark, the county jail for Surrey, contains about 250 prisoners. The top of the building is used as a place of execution. The Westminster House of Correction, in Tothill Fields, which is built on the Panopticon principle, has a court-yard in the centre, 250 feet in diameter, with prisons round it for 600 persons; but the average number confined is 350. The silent system is pursued, & a good classification maintained. The Model Prison, Pentonville, contains 1,000 separate cells. The inmates are detained for 2 years, & are taught useful trades, previous to transportation. The principal prisons for debtors are the Queen's Bench & Whitecross street prison.

Clubs.—Many of these establishments, having most elaborate & ornate buildings, form some of the principal architectural features of the metropolis. They are situated chiefly in the W. end, in & near Pall Mall, & vie with each other in expense & luxury. The principal ones are the Athenæum, possessed of a fine library, & having a great many artists & men of science & letters among its members; the Army & Navy, the United Service, the Guards', & the Junior United Service; the Carlton, the great Tory, standing side by side with the Reform club, in Pall Mall, the former limited to 800, & the latter to 1,400 members; the Travellers', Brooks', one of the oldest of the clubs, & the rallying point for the Whig party; White's, also a very old club, frequented chiefly by the Conservative nobility; the Conservative; the Oxford & Cambridge; the Garrick, frequented by lovers of the drama. The entrance fees vary from 9 to 30 guineas, & the annual subscriptions from 5 to 12. There is also great diversity in the number of members, which range from 500 to 1,500. Many members, who have no house in town, live almost entirely at their clubs, hiring only a bed-room in the neighborhood.

Theatres & other Places of Amusement.—The two principal theatres are Covent Garden & her Majesty's Theatre, in the Haymarket, which have carried on, for several years, a rivalry in the representation of Italian operas. Drury Lane, for a series of years, has been used for the performance of English operas, melodramas, & equestrian feats. The Haymarket, and the Princess', in Oxford street, are now the chief theatres in the West end where the regular drama is performed. The other principal theatres are Sadler's Wells, in Islington; the Lyceum, the Adelphi, St. James', the Victoria, the Surrey, & Astley's, the last being exclusively devoted to equestrian performances. On the E. side of Regent's Park stands the Colosseum, a polygonal structure, with a magnificent Doric portico and cupola, used chiefly for the exhibition of panoramic views. Exeter Hall, in the Strand, capable of containing 3,000 persons, is used for concerts on a great scale, as well as for the annual May meetings of the different religious societies. In Hanover square there is a large hall for concerts & other public assemblies. In Willis' Rooms, in King street, St. James', are given the fashionable balls called "Almack's;" also lectures, concerts, &c. One of the principal attractions in London is the Zoological Gardens, in Regent's Park. The Surrey Zoological Gardens, though on the whole greatly inferior to the former, have some points of superiority; they cover about 15 acres, & contain a sheet of water 3 acres in extent. Vauxhall Gardens, on the S., & Cremorne Gardens, on the N. side of the river, are also favorite places of resort, where music, fire-works, & balloon ascents, are among the principal attractions.

Museums & Galleries.—The British Museum, in Great Russel street, now a spacious & imposing edifice, with an Ionic façade & sculpture in the pediment; built during the last 30 years, was founded in 1753. It contains an immense collection of books, manuscripts, sculptures, coins, minerals, stuffed animals; Egyptian, Assyrian, Etruscan, Greek, & other antiquities. This institution is open three days in the week to the public. The library of printed books contains upwards of 460,000 vols. In Greek, & perhaps also in Egyptian antiquities, this collection is not surpassed by any in Europe. The National Gallery contains some very fine pictures; but, from their limited number, scarcely deserve the name of a national collection. One end of the building is used for the annual exhibitions, schools, & lecture-rooms of the Royal Academy. Marlborough House, in Pall Mall, contains a collection of painters by English masters; the greater part of which was presented to the nation by Mr. Richard Vernon, in 1847. Dulwich Gallery, at Dulwich, 5 m. from Waterloo Bridge, contains a fine collection, especially of Dutch paintings, among which those of Cuyp occupy a prominent rank. There are many fine collections of pictures & statues in the houses of the nobility, some of which are thrown open occasionally to the public. The museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, on the S. side of Lincoln's Inn Fields, a handsome new building, erected at a cost of 40,000*l.*, contains some curious skeletons & surgical preparations. The Soane Museum, on the N. side of Lincoln's Inn Fields, possesses many valuable objects, consisting of books, prints, MSS., drawings, maps, models, plans, &c. There is also a museum in Whitehall Yard, connected with the United Service Club; and a Museum of Practical Geology in Jermyn street.

Literature, Scientific Institutions, &c.—London has long been the favorite residence of literary men, drawn hither, probably, in older times ere literature had assumed its present independent position, by the attractions of titled patrons. But whatever may have communicated the original impulse, we have now the fact, that the metropolis is the great centre around which cluster the literary & scientific men of the country, the seat of the principal learned institutions, & the headquarters of journalism & of the book trade. There are six morning, & nearly as many evening newspapers, & a host of other journals, which appear weekly or at shorter intervals. The morning papers, during the sitting of parliament, require each a staff of 14 reporters. The chief learned institutions are the Royal Society, Somerset House, which was founded 1663; the Society of Antiquaries, in the same building, founded in 1707; the Royal Academy of Arts, in Trafalgar Square, founded in 1768; the Royal Academy of Music, founded in 1822; the Royal College of Physicians, at the N.W. corner of Trafalgar Square, founded by Linacre, physician to Henry VIII., & the present building, finished in 1825; the Royal Geographical Society, founded in 1830, with a choice geographical library & large collection of maps; the Institution of Civil Engineers, established in 1818; the Royal Institute of British Architects, founded in 1834, & possessing a good library of architectural works; the Royal Institution of Great Britain, Albemarle street, established 1799; the Geological Society, in Somerset House, established in 1807.

Educational Establishments.—At the head of these stands the University of London, established in 1837, solely for the purpose of conferring degrees, the candidates for which are for the most part supplied by University College & King's College. The senate consists of a chancellor, vice-chancellor, & thirty-five other members, who hold their sittings in Somerset House. The faculties are those of arts, law, and medicine; and the examinations are held twice a-year. In University College, which was opened in 1828, the course of education embraces the classical tongues, science, history, jurisprudence, and medicine, religion being wholly excluded. King's College is on a similar plan, except that religion is taught in it in accordance with the principles of the Church of England. The buildings are handsome, especially that of University College. There are likewise two Episcopalian theological schools, an English Presbyterian, a Baptist, an Independent, a Unitarian, and a Jewish; and several schools for medicine, botany, chemistry, geology, &c. Of the numerous endowed schools, the most noted are —St. Paul's school, which provides a free education for 153 boys, the most advanced of whom are sent to Oxford & Cambridge, with exhibitions of about 50*l.* to 120*l.* Milton, the great Duke of Marlborough, and Halley, were pupils in this school, which has a high character. The revenues are about 6,000*l.* Charter-House (a corruption of Chartreuse), founded in 1611, and endowed with property which in 1815 yielded 22,000*l.*; it supports 80 poor brethren, and educates 40 boys, who are afterwards apprenticed or sent to the university. The Merchant Tailors' School, founded in 1561, furnishes a very efficient education gratis to 100 boys, and to 150 others at rates varying from 5*s.* to 2*s.* 6*d.* a-quarter; the school has 43 fellowships in Oxford, and 7 in Cambridge. Christ's Hospital, Newgate street, better known as the Blue-coat School, was founded in 1553, as an hospital for poor fatherless children and foundlings, although many are said to be now admitted without having the qualification of poverty. The presentations are in the gift of the governors, who are nearly 500 in number; and each of whom, in order to hold that office, must have contributed 500*l.* to the funds of the institution. The establishment in London accommodates at present 920 boys; and there is a subsidiary hospital at Hertford, where there are generally about 450 of the younger boys, and 80 girls—making in all 1,450 children maintained, clothed, and educated by this institution. The Grecians, as the most advanced in classics are called, are sent, with valuable exhibitions, to Oxford and Cambridge; and those in the mathematical school are placed with commanders of ships, and fitted out at the expense of the hospital; others are apprenticed to different trades. Westminster School was founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1560, for the free instruction, clothing, board and lodging of 40 boys, called kings' scholars; in reality, however, each now pays about 45*l.* a-year. Dryden, Locke, & the Earl of Mansfield were in this school. Besides the above, and numberless private schools, there is a free school in almost every parish; & the National Society & British & Foreign School Society supply instruction to many thousands of children. These societies have also normal schools.

Hospitals & Charitable Institutions.—London abounds with hospitals for the cure of disease, lying-in charities, asylums for orphans, & other institutions of a like nature. Among those most deserving of notice are St. Bartholomew's Hospital, in W. Smithfield, first founded in the 12th century, & then refounded by Henry VIII. in 1546; admitting patients suffering from accident, & diseases of all kinds, containing 580 beds, & relieving 70,000 annually.—Guy's Hospital, Southwark, found. in 1721, by Thomas Guy, a bookseller, accommodating 580 in-patients; it has also an excellent museum & theatre of anatomy—St. Thomas' Hospital, in the Borough; St. George's Hospital, near Hyde Park Corner, with a handsome front overlooking the Green Park; the Middlesex Hospital, founded in 1745; Westminster Hospital; & various other hospitals of smaller size, supported chiefly by voluntary contributions—Charing Cross Hospital, King's College Hospital, University College Hospital, &c. There are medical schools attached to the above institutions. Bethlehem Hospital (Bedlam), in St. George's Fields, S. of the river is appropriated to the insane poor. The building, which has an imposing appearance, extends over nearly 14 acres; the rooms are large & airy, well-warmed & ventilated, & can accommodate at least 400 patients. St. Luke's Hospital, also for insane patients, was founded in 1751, & accommodates 260 persons. The Foundling Hospital was founded in 1739, by Captain Coram; at present it is rather an asylum for illegitimate children whose parents are known, than an hospital for foundlings, as it was originally. The number of children averages about 500, & they are maintained till the age of 12, when they are either apprenticed or provided for otherwise. Chelsea Hospital (see Chelsea.) Greenwich Hospital (see Greenwich.)

Cemeteries.—Extra-mural interment is of very recent date, & is still only very partial; most of the cemeteries being too distant & expensive for the poorer classes. Kensal Green Cemetery, in which several royal personages have been buried, was opened in 1832: it occupies about 48 acres of ground, & is tastefully planted & laid out. There is another at Highgate, about 20 acres in extent, & others at Stoke Newington, Brompton, Norwood, &c.

Means of Conveyance.—This is of two kinds, internal & external. The former is accomplished by means of omnibuses, cabs, & steamboats. The omnibuses, 1,200 in number, ply on all the principal thoroughfares to every part of the metropolis, & to all the neighbouring villages; they pay duty to the amount of 324, annually; & the 7000 conductors & drivers by whom they are managed pay, for licenses, 1,750*l* annually. The cabs number about 3,500. Numerous small steamers ply on the Thames, affording the most convenient means of communication, at all hours of the day, to all points of the river between Richmond & Woolwich, a distance of 18 m. Besides these facilities for locomotion, parcels are delivered in all parts of the metropolis by a joint-stock company. The external means of conveyance comprise railroads, canals, & steam-vessels. Seven railroads, affording means of transit to all parts of the kingdom, have stations in London; they are the Great Western, North-Western, Great Northern, Eastern Counties, Blackwall, South-Eastern, or Dover, Brighton & South-coast, & the South-Western.

Some of them, as the North-Western, with its Doric temple for an entrance, & the Great Northern, with its gigantic arches, have termini of a most expensive kind, though little can be said in favor of the architectural suitableness of such erections. The canals strictly connected with London are seven in number—the Grand Junction, Regent's, Broomley & Lea, Lea Union, or Sir George Duckett's, Kensington, Grosvenor, & Surrey; this last follows nearly the line of the canal cut by Canute the Dane, for the purpose of transporting his vessels into the upper part of the river, past the defences of Old London Bridge. A large fleet of steam-vessels afford constant means of transit for passengers & goods between the Thames & all parts of the E. & S. coast of England, the E. coast of Scotland, & the N. ports of the continent; while, from the easy means of transit by railroad, Southampton may be esteemed the out-port of London, through which she communicates by steam with the most distant parts of both hemispheres.

Markets.—These are numerous, but, excepting for the articles sold in them, none are worthy of notice, presenting, as they do, little to attract, either in external beauty, or in internal arrangement. The principal ones are, Billingsgate, for fish; Hungerford, fish, butcher-meat, & vegetables; Farringdon, butcher-meat, vegetables and fruit; Covent Garden, vegetables, fruit, flowers, & plants, both green-house & hot-house; Leaden-hall, poultry, game, hides, & cattle-horns; Newgate, butcher-meat, carcass & retail (the most extensive carcass market in London); & Smithfield (formerly the great place of executions, & where so many martyrs died in the time of Queen Mary), the great market for cattle & sheep, long felt to be a nuisance, from its position in the centre of the city, but about to be removed to a suburban locality, in pursuance of an Act, passed by Parliament in 1852. It is difficult, or perhaps impossible, to arrive at an accurate estimate of the quantity of food consumed in London. In 1849, however, there were sold in Smithfield & Leadenhall markets alone—Sheep, 1,514,130; cattle, 228,560; calves, 26,422; fowls, 3,296,400; rabbits, 850,000; hares, 48,000. Allowing for carcases imported by steam & otherwise, the annual consumption of butcher-meat has been estimated at 240,000 bullocks, 1,700,000 sheep, 28,000 calves, & 35,000 pigs, besides vast quantities of bacon & ham. Exclusive of eggs brought from various parts of the United Kingdom, 70,000,000 to 75,000,000 are imported annually from France & other continental countries. About 13,000 cows are kept in the metropolis & its environs, for the supply of milk & cream. The consumption of wheat may be estimated at about 1,600,000 quarters a year.

Manufactures.—It would be almost endless to specify the different kinds of articles manufactured in London. It contains the largest breweries, distilleries, & sugar-refineries in the kingdom; was long the principal seat of the silk-weaving, & still employs about 14,000 workers in that branch; has extensive manufs. in metal, including machinery of all kinds plate, jewellery, watches, & brass-work, occupying likewise about 14,000 workmen; & as many more are engaged in the production of books & prints. Millinery occupies 40,000; the making of clothes & slops above 28,000, & boots & shoes as many more. Besides these branches, 12,000 are engaged in cabinet-making, & many thousands in coopering, coach-building, leather-working, hat-making, ship-building, rope-making, mast-making, &c., all of which are departments of manufacture conducted on a large scale; & there are numerous extensive chemical works, soap-manufactories, & dye-works.

Commerce, Docks, &c. The port of London extends from London Bridge to a little below Blackwall, & is divided into the Pool, Limehouse Reach, Greenwich Reach, Blackwall Reach, & Bugsby's Reach; it is under the care of the corporation of the city as conservators. The docks, some of which are of great extent, are surrounded by wharfs, sheds, storehouses, vaults, & warehouses of the most spacious kind. St. Katherine's Docks, London Docks, the West India Docks, & the East India Docks, extend along the N. bank of the river, at intervals, from the Tower to Blackwall, & on the S. bank, between Rotherhithe & Deptford, are the Commercial docks. The tide rises 18 feet at springs, & 14 feet at neaps, at the London Docks; & the depth at low water, springtides, on the outer sill of St. Katherine's docks, the deepest in the port, is 10 ft. The largest is the West India import dock, 2,600 feet long, 500 broad, & capable of containing 204 vessels of 300 tons each. The vessels belonging to the port, in 1850, numbered 2,735 sailing & 318 steam, aggregate tonnage 667,297; being 129,000 less than New York the year previous. Its foreign exports, in 1850, amounted to 14,137,527*l*, being an increase over 1845 of above 3,000,000*l*; the foreign exports of Liverpool, for the same period, increased from 26,000,000*l* to 35,000,000*l*; the enormous coasting trade of London, however, renders it superior to every other port of Europe, in the number of vessels & the amount of tonnage frequenting it; but no returns being printed to show the actual amount of this tonnage, only an approximation can be given. About 5,000,000 tons of shipping enter the port anually, of which 1,500,000 are from foreign ports, 500,000 from the colonies, & 3,000,000 are coasters. The number of vessels engaged in the coal trade alone is above 10,000, importing in 1851, 3,236,542 tons of coals. The exports consist chiefly of British manufactures, though a large quantity of the foreign imports are also re-exported. The imports consist of every kind of article brought from foreign parts; a list of them, in fact, would form an epitome of the articles of the trade of the world. For East & West India produce, London is the great port; tea, sugar, tobacco, wine, corn, timber, tallow, hides, wool, & drugs form large items on the list. All articles imported must be entered at the Custom-house, a large building by the river side, between London Bridge & the Tower; the long room, where public business is transacted, is 185 ft. long, 66 ft. wide, & 55 ft. high. The amount of customs taken here, affords an excellent means of estimating the comparative value of the imports of London. The amount received in 1849 was 11,070,176*l* (being only 700,000*l* less than the total amount of its foreign exports for the same year); while the total amount of customs for the United Kingdom, for the same year, was 22,483,956*l*; showing that nearly a half of the whole amount was received at the port of London.

People.—With respect to the habits & condition of the general population of London, perhaps there is no set of men who are more devoted to their calling, whatever it may be, & who possess greater perception of character, & a keener eye to their own interest; but as they have more regard to material comfort than mental improvement, they are inferior in general intelligence to the same classes in the Scotch cities. Their reading rarely extends beyond the Times, or the weekly newspapers; but the rapid spread of cheap publications will no doubt produce a marked change for the better. From the great sums of money spent the higher classes in the metropolis, the London tradesmen has probably a greater respect for the aristocracy than is entertained by the people in other large towns; and, although generally alive to his own interests, he is rather too apt to be imposed upon by persons of title, whether real or assumed, as the police reports so often testify. He is also a lover of peace & order, as was evinced on the famous 10th of April, 1848, when 40,000 special constables were enrolled for the defence of the city against the Chartists. Many of the London tradesmen are very wealthy, but, in general they live without much ostentation; whereas many of the higher class of merchants are ruined by vying with the aristocracy in splendour of living. Skilled artisans of all sorts receive high wages, but they live too well to save much of their earnings. On Sunday, great numbers of these, as well as clerks and shopmen, flock to Richmond, Hampton Court, Greenwich, Hampstead, & other places in the neighbourhood of London, or by excursion trains to Brighton & other more distant localities; but there are many tradesmen, such as the weavers in Bethnal Green, the slop-cabinet makers in the same locality, & the "sweaters," men working for the cheap tailoring marts in the Minories, who are obliged to ply their task a great part, if not the whole of Sunday. To these may be added the needle-women, the "sank-workers," or stitchers of soldiers' clothes, & the "garret-masters," in the boot & shoe trade. Others, again, are so fatigued with the labours of the week, that they make the Sabbath literally a day of rest, & lie in bed all day. This is done to a great extent by milliners' apprentices, who work late, & carpenters who work for the "strapping shops"—a name given to those shops in which they are tasked to an unusual degree. Notwithstanding all the wealth of London, & its numerous societies for the relief of the indigent, it contains abundant misery & distress. In 1846-47, the money raised by rates, & expended for the relief of the poor, amounted to 634, 369*l*. The mendicants are quite a distinct class, and practise beggary almost as a trade; nine-tenths of them are impostors & convicted vagrants, incurably idle, dishonest, & profligate. The really indigent are relieved by an institution called the Refuge for the Destitute.

History.—In the reign of Nero, London was already a place of considerable importance; and, after the Romans left Britain, it is supposed to have become the capital of the E. Saxon kingdom. Little more is known of it, during the Heptarchy, than that it suffered severely by fire in 764, 798, & 801. When England was united under one monarch, London became the metropolis of the kingdom, and, soon afterwards, it was sacked by the Danes. At the Conquest, London submitted to William, & received from him a charter, which is still preserved; and, on the accession of Henry I., a new charter was granted—the model from which Magna Charta was taken—restoring the privileges which existed before the Norman Conquest. London Bridge, erected instead of a wooden one, was begun in 1176, & finished in 1209. This was, to a great extent, the same that was taken down in 1832. In 1218, the forest of Middlesex was cleared, & that portion of London N. of the city began to be built. In 1236, water-pipes began to be laid in the city; and, early in the 14th century, coal was first introduced. In 1328, the village of Southwark was incorporated with the city, as it had previously served as a place of refuge for malefactors. In 1349 & 1361, London was visited by the plague. In 1381, broke out the rebellion of Wat Tyler, who fell by the hands of the Lord Mayor, hence the dagger on the city arms. In 1416, lamps were introduced; in the same century, some of the principal streets were paved, & wooden houses began to be replaced by others of brick. In the next century still greater improvements were effected. Westminster was now connected with the city, by a row of noblemen's mansions along the river, one of which still remains at the extreme W.—Northumberland House. In the 17th century, Spitalfields was covered with houses; & the space N. of the Strand, as far as Holborn, & from Temple Bar to St. Martin's Lane, were extensively built upon, as well as the neighbourhoods of Charing Cross & Pall-Mall. The New River was completed, & many houses were supplied with water; sewers were dug; smooth pavements were laid down for passengers; & hackney coaches came into general use. But the streets were so narrow & dirty, & the houses in so filthy a state, that the city was scarcely ever exempt from the plague, which sometimes committed great ravages. In 1666, the great fire broke out, & spread over 336 acres, destroying 13, 200 houses, 90 churches, & many public buildings. In rebuilding considerable improvements were introduced; & a fire at Southwark, 10 years after, gave a similar opportunity of improving that district. Population & trade now rapidly increased, partly from the immigration of French Protestants, driven from their country by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. In the 18th century, the metropolis steadily advanced in extent, prosperity, & splendour. In 1780 took place the Gordon riots, when the mob were in possession of London for two days, & committed frightful havoc. Since that disgraceful outbreak, the peace of London has never been seriously endangered; and the troops stationed in & around the capital, together with the effective police force that now exists, seem quite adequate to ensure it against any similar disturbance. The extension & improvements which have taken place in London during the present century, are still greater than at any former period, & further changes of great importance are now in operation. The most remarkable event of recent times in the history of the metropolis, is the carrying into effect of the Great World's Exhibition, originated by Prince Albert. The magnificent edifice, formed of glass & iron, in which was exhibited the unparalleled collection of manufactures & works of art there brought together, was erected in Hyde Park, & opened May 1, 1851. It was above a third of a mile long (1848 ft.), 408 ft. wide, 48 ft. high in the centre, & 24 ft. at the sides; it covered 18 ac. of ground, was composed of 702 tons of wrought & 3784 tons of cast iron, 896,000 superficial ft. of glass, forming 293,655 panes, & weighing 400 tons; 600,000 cubit ft. of wood, & costs 347,937*l*. The number of exhibitors was 13,937, & the value of the articles exhibited was estimated at 1,781,929; of which, 1,031,607*l* belonged to the United Kingdom, 79,901*l* to the colonies & dependencies of Great Britain, & 670,420*l* to foreign countries. The exhibition remained open for 5 months & 11 days, & was visited by 6,039,195 persons. The total amount of money drawn was 561,243*l*. The structure was removed in 1852, & rebuilt on a more magnificent scale in Sydenham, & was opened in June 1854. (Imperial Gazetteer.)

Ireland, Ulster, having N. the Atlantic Ocean & Loch Foyle, E. Antrim, from which it is separated by Loughs Neagh and Beg, S. Tyrone, & W. Donegal. Area, 810 sq. m., or 518,270 ac., of which about 320,000 are cultivated; 180,000 waste, and 10,000 water. Inhabited houses 1851, 33,590. Pop. 191,744. Surface in the S. and centre mountainous; elsewhere mostly lowland. Primary granite rocks form the basis of the district, with secondary sandstones, and overlying trap rocks. Coast fine, low. Chief rivers, the Foyle, Bann, and Roe. Climate mild, mean ann. temp. of the cap. 49° Fahr.; mean annual depth of rain 34 inches. Soils various, but on the lowlands mostly fertile. Agriculture is improving. Oats, potatoes, flax, and wheat, are the principal crops. Breeds of live stock inferior. Poultry numerous, and eggs are extensively exported. Estates large, and mostly owned by the 12 London companies, to which the county was granted by James I., after forfeiture, by the rebellion of its native chiefs. Hence the prefix of London to the anc. name of the co. Farms held under leases both terminable and interminable, and often very small. Rent of land varies from 5s. to 2l. 10s. an ac. Manufs. of linen extensive. The co. is divided into 6 baronies and liberties, and 31 pas. in the dioceses of Armagh and Derry. Principal towns, Londonderry and Coleraine. It sends 4 members to H. of C., 2 being for the co.

LONDONDERRY, a fortified city, parl. and munic. borough, and river port, cap. above co., on the broad and navigable Foyle, here crossed by a wooden bridge, 1,068 feet in length, above its entrance into Loch Foyle, 120 miles N.N.W. Dublin. Lat. 54° 59′ N.; lon. 7° 19′ W. Pop. 1851, 19,604. It stands magnificently on a ridge projecting into the river, and is enclosed by walls and bastions built in 1609, and beyond which large suburbs now extend. It has 4 main streets, leading from a fine central square, on the summit ridge, towards the 4 city gates; these are broad, clean, well paved and lighted, and most of the other streets are well built, though within the city walls, very steep, & lined with antique houses. Principal buildings, the cathedral, a Gothic pile without transepts, built 1633, & having a modern tower & spire 178 feet in height. The bishop's palace, a large plain structure; the deanery; places of worship and schools, for various religious denominations; a diocesan free grammar school or college, founded in 1617, and which, together with Gwyn's school, is munificently endowed; a valuable diocesan and public libraries; a town-hall, rebuilt in 1826, and containing assembly & news rooms; a large courthouse, county jail, district lunatic asylum, infirmary & fever hospitals, union workhouse, spacious barracks, an elegant monument in honour of the Rev. G. Walker, the celebrated defender of the city during its memorable siege; a custom-house & town-hall. The town has also a literary and mechanics' institute; & numerous industrial, charitable, & other schools; 3 or 4 newspapers; several branch banks, many flour mills, a copper foundry, large distillery, small manufs. of table linen, and extensive exports of oats, flour, eggs, salted provisions, butter, live stock, flax, and linens. Imports of British manufs., coal, timber, wine, sugar, and tea; trade chiefly with Liverpool & Glasgow, now greatly facilitated by steamers. Numerous emigrants sail hence for the U. States & Canada. Vessels of 600 tons ascend the Foyle to the city quays. Markets, Wednesday, Thursday, & Saturday. Londonderry sends 1 mem. to the H. of C. It was built in its present form by the "Irish Society," or London companies, who colonised and gave name to the co.; and it is famous in history for the siege it so heroically sustained in 1689, under a clerical commander, against the forces of James II. A few cannon used in this defence, are still on the city walls.

Federal representative population, 416,365.

Physical Features, &c.—Below the mouth of Red riv the Mississippi divides into several branches or outlets which, diverging from each other, slowly wend their way to the Gulf of Mexico, & divide the S.W. part of the state into a number of large islands. The western of these outlets is the Atchafalaya, which leaves the main stream at the mouth of Red river, & inclining eastward, flows into Atchafalaya bay, in the Gulf of Mexico. About 128 m. below the Atchafalaya is the outlet of Plaquemine, the main stream of which unites with Atchafalaya, but other portions of it intersect the country in different directions. Thirty one m. below the Plaquemine & 82 above New Orleans, is the outlet of La Fourche, which communicates with the Gulf of Mexico by two mouths. Below the La Fourche, numerous other small streams branch off from the river at various points. On the E. side of the Mississippi the principal outlet is the Iberville, which communicates with the Gulf of Mexico through lakes Maurepas, Pontchartrain, & Borgne. The whole territory between the Atchafalaya on the west, & Iberville, &c., on the east, is called the Delta of the Mississippi, from its resemblance in shape to the Greek letter of that name. A large extent of country in this state is annually overflowed. The alluvial margin along the Mississippi has a breadth of from one to two miles, & is of great fertility. To prevent the river from inundating the valuable tracts in the rear, an artificial embankment has been raised on the margin of the river, called the Levee. On the east side of the river this embankment commences about 40 m. below New Orleans, & extends up the river for a distance of 180 m. On the west side it continues with little interruption to the Arkansas line. Along this portion of the river there are many beautiful & finely cultivated plantations, & a continual succession of pleasant residences. The southwestern part of the state consists of sea marsh on the margin of the Gulf, but further inland of extensive & fertile prairies, which contain many flourishing settlements. The surface is elevated from 10 to 50 feet above high tide. The country between the Mississippi, Iberville, & Pearl rivers, in its southern parts, is generally level & highly productive in cotton, sugar, corn, rice, & indigo. The northern part has an undulating surface & a heavy natural growth of white, red, & yellow oak, hickory, black walnut, sassafras, magnolia, & poplar. In the north-western part the Red river, after entering the state by a single channel & flowing about 30 m., spreads into a number of channels, forming many lakes, islands, & swamps, over a space of 60 m. long and 6 broad. The bottoms on the river are from 1 to 10 m. wide, & very fertile. The timber is willow, cottonwood, honey-locust, pawpaw, & buckeye; on the rich uplands, elm, ash, hickory, mulberry, black walnut, with a profusion of grape vines. On the less fertile & sandy uplands of the state are white pitch & yellow pines, & various kinds of oak. There were in this state in 1850, 1,590,025 acres of land improved, & 3,939,018 of unimproved land in farms. Cash value of farms, $75,814,398; & the value of implements & machinery, $11,576,938. Live stock—horses, 89,514; asses & mules, 44,849; milch cows, 105,576; working oxen, 54,968; other cattle, 414,798; sheep, 110,333; swine, 597,391. Value of live stock, $11,152,275.

Value of products of the orchard, $22,359; produce of market gardens, $148,329. Pounds of butter made, 683,069; of cheese, 1,957; sugar, hhds., 226,001; maple sugar, 255 pounds; molasses, 10,931,177 gallons; bees wax & honey, 96,701 pounds; wool, 109,897; cotton, 178,737; silk cocoons, 29; hops, 125; tobacco, 26,878; hay, 25,752 tons; clover seeds, 2 bushels; other grass seeds, 97 bushels; & there were made 15 gallons of wine. Value of home made manufacs., $139,232; of slaughtered animals, $1,458,990.

Rivers, &c.—The Mississippi river forms the boundary of the state for a considerable distance, & in its lower part runs wholly within the state, & enters the Gulf of Mexico by several channels. It is navigable for vessels of the largest size. Red river enters the state near the north-west corner, & passes through in a south-east direction, discharging a vast amount of water into the Mississippi, 236 m. above New Orleans. The Washita runs in a south direction in the north part of the state, & enters Red river a little above its junction with the Mississippi. Bayou La Fourche & Atchafalaya are large outlets of the Mississippi. The other rivers & streams are the Black, Tensau, Sabine, Calcasieu, Mermanteau, Vermilion, Teche, Pearl, Amitie, Iberville, &c.

Manufactures.—There were in this state in 1850, 8 establishments with a capital of $255,000, employing 347 persons, & making 1,570 tons of castings, &c., valued at $312,500; 96 flouring & grist mills, 120 saw mills, 16 tanneries, 47 printing offices, 60 newspapers, —11 daily, 6 tri & semi-weekly, 37 weekly,—& 1 monthly publication; aggregate number of copies issued annually, 12,416,224. Capital invested in manufactures, $5,304,924; value of manufactured articles, $7,045,514. On the 1st of January, 1854, there were 7 railroads, with 117 miles of track finished & in operation, & 119 miles in course of construction.

The principal places in the state are Baton Rouge, the capital, New Orleans, Jackson, St. Francisville, Opelousas, Grand Coteau, Alexandria, Nachitoches, & Shreveport. There were, January 1st, 1853, 7 banks in the state, with an aggregate capital of $12,000,000. Tonnage, same year, 156,273 tons. Total value of exports of American & foreign produce, 1852, $49,058,885. Value of imports, $12,057,724.

Education, &c.—In the state are the following institutions, viz.: Centenary College, at Jackson; St. Charles College, at Grand Coteau; Baton Rouge College, at Baton Rouge; Franklin College, at Opelousas; the University of Louisiana, at New Orleans; Medical Department University of Louisiana, at New Orleans; & Law University of Louisiana, at New Orleans;—the whole having, in 1850, 695 students. There were also 143 academies, 5,328 pupils; 664 schs., 25,046 scholars. School fund of the State, about $92,500. 10 libraries, aggregate number of vols., 26,800. There is an insane asylum at Jackson, an asylum for the deaf, dumb, and blind at Baton Rouge.

The state penitentiary is located at Baton Rouge.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 77 Baptist churches, 3 Christian, 14 Episcopal, 3 Free, 1 German Reformed, 1 Jewish Synagogue, 125 Methodist, 18 Presbyterian, 55 Roman Catholic, 6 Union, 1 Universalist, & 2 other sects; the whole having 306 churches. Total value of church property, $1,782,470.

Government, &c.—The governor & lieutenant-governor are elected for four years; representatives are chosen for two years, & senators for four years, one half being chosen biennially. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court, district courts, & in justices of the peace. Judges of the supreme court are chosen for 10 years, the chief justice by the state at large, and the associate justices (4 in number) one of which is elected every two years. The legislature meets biennially. Every free white male who has been two years a citizen of the United States, & attained the age of 21 years, & has resided in the state one year next preceding the election, & six months in the parish in which he offers his vote, has the right of suffrage.

Louisiana was first explored by the French, & received its name in 1682 from M. La Salle, in honor of Louis XIV., & a settlement was attempted in 1684, but failed. In 1699 a more successful attempt was made by M. Iberville, who entered the Mississippi and founded a colony. His efforts were followed by Crozat, who held the exclusive trade of the country for a number of years; about 1717 he transferred his interest to a chartered company, at the head of which was the notorious John Law, whose national bank & Mississippi speculation involved half the French nobility. In 1731 the company resigned the concern to the crown, who in 1762 ceded the country of Louisiana to Spain. In 1800 Spain re-conveyed the province to France, from whom in 1803 the United States purchased the entire territory for $15,000,000. The portion now included in the state formed a constitution, & was admitted into the Union in 1812. A second constitution was adopted & went into operation in 1845, & the third & present one was formed & adopted in 1852.

The Prescott Manufacturing Co., chartered in 1844, has a capital of $600,000; 2 cotton fac., 16,168 spindles, & 548 looms; employing 450 females, & 90 males, & manufacturing 9,400,000 yards cotton cloths pr. annum. The Lowell Machine Shop, incorporated in 1845, with a capital of $500,000, has 2 shops, a smithy, & furnace; employing 600 persons; turns out annually 3,000 tons wrought & cast iron, & can furnish machinery complete for a mill of 6,000 spindles, in three months' time. The above comprehends 45 establishments with aggregate capital of $12,600,000, employing 13,000 persons; average wages of females, clear of board, pr. week, $2; average wages of males (deducting board), pr. week, $6 48. The manufacturing companies have established a hospital for the sick, which is under the superintendence of a skilful physician.

The public buildings are a court-house, city hall, market-house, mechanics' hall, hospital, a city library, containing 5,000 vols., a public high school, 8 grammar schools, & 36 primary schools. The mechanics' hall contains a fine library of 3,300 vols., a reading room, a chemical & philosophical apparatus, & a mineralogical cabinet of several thousand specimens. There are 26 churches,—6 Baptist, 5 Congregational, 2 Christian, 2 Episcopal, 4 Methodist, 1 Pilgrims', 3 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, & 2 Universalist. There are 4 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,100,000; 2 savings' institutions, one of which has a deposit of about $750,000 from 5,000 depositors; a mutual insurance co., 3 powder fac., a paper m., a flouring m., 3 grist m., a saw m., & a variety of other manufacturing establishments;—8 printing offices issuing 1 daily, 2 tri-weekly, 5 weekly newspapers, & 2 monthly publications. Capital employed in manufactures, $14,464,725; value of manufactured articles, $12,277,977. The city is well supplied with water from the Merrimac forced into a reservoir east of the city, & is distributed throughout the city in iron pipes. It is well lighted with gas. The "New-England Offering," a monthly magazine issued here, is supplied with original communications, mostly from the females employed in the factories; it has attained a high reputation. Lowell was built upon lands originally occupied by the Wamsit Indians (now extinct), & received its name in honor of Francis C. Lowell, of Boston, distinguished for his efforts to introduce the cotton manufacture in the United States.

The back country & trade of this place are very extensive. The Lynchburg water works is one of the most interesting undertakings in the United States. An arm of James river, formed by an island 2 miles in length, is crossed by a dam 10 feet high, thence a canal ½ m. in length conveys the water to the pump-house on the river's bank. A double forcing pump, worked by a large breast wheel, impels the water through a pipe 2,000 feet long to a reservoir of the capacity of 400,000 gallons, & at an elevation of 253 feet above the river level, from which the water is distributed in iron pipes throughout the city. The water-power created by the dam is amply sufficient for working a large additional amount of machinery.

Altitude 532 feet. A railroad connects Lyon with the Loire at Roanne, & others to Paris & Marseille. It consists of the city proper, mostly on a peninsula, & numerous suburbs; it is the seat of a national court, & of a university academy for the deps. Rhône, Loire, & Aix; it is the residence of many foreign consuls, & has a chamber of commerce, a mint, a national college, seminary & library of 10,000 vols., museum, & botanic garden & the school of design, called Institution de la Martiniere. Lyon, the second city of France, in regard to pop. & commercial importance, is regarded as a fortified town, since batteries have been erected on the heights commanding the town & its approaches. Its streets are in general narrow & ill-paved, but the quays & the Place Bellecour are lined with hotels and elegant mansions. Among the numerous public buildings, the chf. are the hôtel-de-ville, hôtel-Dieu, church of St. Jean, & the great theatre. The Rhône & Saône are traversed by numerous bridges. Lyon has manufs. of all kinds; those of silks are the most celebrated in the world. It was founded by the proconsul Munatius Planeus, B.C. 43, & became the cap. of Celtic Gaul, or Lyonnaise. Destroyed by fire, it was rebuilt by Nero. Severus ruined it, A.D. 197, but it was restored by Constantine. It was the residence of the kings of Burgundy till the end of the 5th century; & was ravaged by the Saracens in the 8th century; afterwards governed by its archbishops, feudatories of the German empire; it was annexed to France in 1312. In 1793 it was taken by the army of the convention after a two months' siege, & was the scene of the most horrid cruelties. Birth-place of Germanicus; the Emperors Claudius, M. Aurelius, & Caracalla; of the botanist Jussieu, Jacquard, & Camille Jourdan. Lyonnais, was an old prov. of France, cap. Lyon, now forming the deps. Rhône & Loire. The Lyonnaise (anc. Gallia Lugdunensis), was a name given by Augustus to Celtic Gaul, or the country comprised within the Loire, Saône, Marne, & Seine, cap. Lugdunum; it was afterwards divided into the 1st, 2d, 3d, & 4th Lyonnaise.

MADAGASCAR, an island of the Indian Ocean, separated from the S.E. coast of Africa by the channel of Mozambique, situated between lat. 11° 57′ (C. Amber) & 25° 38′ (C. St. Mary) S., and lon. 43° 20′ (C. St. Vincent) & 50° 31′ (C. East) E. Length 1,030 m., greatest breadth 350 m. Pop. variously estimated at from 1,600,000 to 4,000,000. Surface flat on the coasts, but in the interior elevated mountains divide the island into numerous well-watered valleys. Climate hot on the coasts, temperate in the interior, but everywhere unfavorable to Europeans. Soil generally very fertile, with rich pasturage & magnificent forests. Chief vegetable productions, medicinal plants, pepper, cotton, indigo, sugar cane, tobacco, rice, manioc. Domestic animals comprise bisons, sheep, swine, dogs, & cats. Silk worms are reared. Honey & wax are procured in great abundance in the woods, which swarm with bees. The mountains supply gold, silver, copper, lead and iron, which last is mined to a considerable extent. Coal is used in smelting, & there is a coal mine near the cap., & another near Diego-Suarez. The inhabitants manuf. iron utensils, & work in gold and silver articles, as chains, necklaces, & ear rings. Carpets are made at Tananarivo, & cotton goods are extensively manufactured. Sugar mills have been lately introduced, & at Mahala 3,000 men are employed in the manuf. of sugar. Trade is conducted chiefly with the Portuguese settlers on the E. coast of Africa. Exports, native produce. Imports, linen, ribbons, glass, and Spanish piastres. The inhabitants consist of Malagashes, Ovas, & other tribes of Papuan, Malay, Arabian, & Kafir origin. The island is divided into 28 provs., each having a chief, subject to one of the Ovas, with the title of king, whose cap., Tananarivo, is near the centre of the isl.; Tamatave is the chief commercial town. Fetichism is the prevailing superstition. European missionaries were protected by one of the late kings, when civilization made considerable progress, but in 1835 Christianity was prohibited, & in 1845 all Europeans were expelled; since that time the native Christians have been cruelly persecuted, & many suffered martyrdom in 1850. This island was known to the Arabs in the 13th century, under the name of Zaledj; it was first called Madagascar by Marco Polo. In 1642, the French settled on it, & called it "Ile Dauphine;" they have since made several attempts to colonize it, but without success.

MADEIRA ISLES, a group in the Atlantic Ocean, belonging to Portugal, from the S.W. coast of which they are distant 660 m. S.W. They consist of the isls. Madeira & Porto Santo, & the islets called the Desertas, situated between lat. 32° 23′ 15″ & 33° 7′ 50″ N., & lon. 16° 13′ 30″ & 16° 38′ W. The largest island, Madeira, is 31 m. long, & 12 m. broad. Pop. 1850, 108,464. Cap. Funchal. It consists of a mass of volcanic rocks, which in Pico Ruivo rise to 6,056 feet in elevation. From the central mass steep ridges extend to the coast, where they form precipices of 1,000 to 2,000 feet in height. The only plains are a small portion of the W. coast, & the table land of Paul de Serra in the interior. The roads are very steep, & unfit for carriages. Oxen are the only beasts of draught, & ponies are used in travelling. Climate remarkably equable, & celebrated for its salubrity, on which account numerous visitors, afflicted with disease of the lungs, constantly resort to Madeira. The soil, which on the S. side extends 2¼ m. inland, is well watered, & extremely productive. The vine is the chief article of cultivation, it grows to an elevation of 2,000 feet, but the best wine is produced at an elevation of less than 1,000 feet. Sugar, once extensively cultivated, is now neglected. Coffee is grown of superior quality, & the arrow root is excellent. The orange, banana, & guava, are abundant. Wheat, maize, beans, & barley, are cultivated to a small extent, but quite insufficient for home consumption. The failure of the potato, formerly the chief support of the pop. of the vills. & remote districts, has added to the existing distress, & the condition of the lower orders is that of squalid poverty. Begging is universal. Madeira was settled by the Portuguese in 1431. [FUNCHAL.]

MADRAS (PRESIDENCY OF), one of the great divisions of British India, comprising the S. portion of Hindostan, between lat. 8° & 20° N., & lon. 73° & 85° E., having N. & N.W. the presids. Bengal, Bombay, & the Nagpoor & Berar doms., & enclosing the territories Mysore & Travancore.

In the centre is a table land consisting of the Balaghaut ceded dists. (Bellary & Cuddapah), with Mysore, &c., bounded by the E. & W. Ghauts, these chains uniting near lat. 11° N., lon. 76° 30′ to 77° E., in the Neilgherry hills, the elevation of one peak of which, Dodabettas, is estimated at 8,760 feet. On every side the country descends from the Ghauts progressively to the sea, but more rapidly on the W. than the E. side, in which latter region, extensive plain tracts stretch along the Coromandel coast. Principal rivers, the Godavery, Kistnah, Pennaar, Palaur, Punnair, Cavery, & Coleroon, all flowing to the E. coast; where also are many salt lagoons, the principal being that of Colair. Rice, paddy, wheat, barley, maize, & all the grains common in India, are here raised; other products are sugar cane, cotton, pepper, tobacco, hemp, areca, ginger, & numerous fine fruits, with teak timber from the Ghauts; coir, cocoa nuts, ebony & sandal wood, iron & copper ores, soda, nitre, & diamonds.

Except in the N. circars, where the zemindary prevails, the land is mostly assessed on the ryotwar system, by which the government collector is in immediate contact with the cultivator, who is ann. assessed according to his crop, or the land he cultivates. [INDIA.] The principal cultivated land is in the dists. Rajahmundry, Coimbatoor, & Tanjore, which last may be called the granary of the presidency. Manufs. of cotton cloths, formerly extensive, are carried on in all the E. dists.; those of Tinnevelly being exported to the W. Indies & America; & the red cloths of Madura, muslins of Chicacole, carpets of Ellore, & silks of Berhampore still maintain some celebrity, though they have long begun to be superseded by British manufs. Iron, saltpetre, & salt are among the principal manufd. products. The foreign trade is mostly monopolized by Madras, the cap. Government is vested in a governor, subordinate to the governor-general of India, a council of 4 members, & a provisional one to provide for any unexpected vacancy, or to succeed on any retirement, & the secretaries of the political, civil, & military departments. In each of the dists. is a European collector with the chief magisterial power; & provincial courts of appeal are located at Chittoor, Masulipatam, Trichinopoly, & Tellicherry; Madras having the supreme court & some special tribunals. Revenue for the year 1851–52, 3,993,997*l*. Expenditure, 3,460,904*l*. The territories of this presid. were nearly all acquired by the British during the latter half of the 18th century.

MADRAS, maritime city of British India, cap. above presid., on the Coromandel coast, lat. of observatory 13° 4′ 1″ N., lon. 80° 14′ E. Pop. of its dist. of 30 sq. m., in 1851, estimated at 720,000 persons, of whom, the city & suburbs, within 2½ m. around Fort George, comprise from 300,000 to 400,000. It is badly situated for a commercial cap., on a surf-beaten shore, where rafts (catamarans) are obliged to be used to land passengers & all kinds of merchandise. It stands on level ground; it has no striking appearance from the sea, but it is generally well built & handsome. Fort George, the citadel, is on the beach, surrounded by an esplanade, on the N. side of which is the "black town," partly enclosed by a brick wall, & containing many good native houses, with European warehouses, the custom-house, board of trade, & court-house; on the W. & S. sides of the fort, separated from the town by a river, is Choultry-plain, on which are some extensive suburbs, consisting mostly of detached houses, occupied by Europeans; & here are also the residences of the governor & the Carnatic nabob, St. George's cathedral, & a handsome stone mosque. Other chief buildings are several Episcopal & Armenian churches, an elegant Scotch church, Independent, Wesleyan, & Unitarian chapels, the cenotaph to the Marquis Cornwallis, &c. Madras is the seat of a university, a medical college, Bishop Corrie's grammar schools, various other schools, & several literary associations. At the suburb, St. Thomé, on the shore, about 3 m. S. from the fort, are a Roman Catholic cathedral & some chapels, this being the place where most of the inhabitants of Portuguese descent reside. Madras is the seat of all the chief government offices for the presid., of the supreme court, boards of revenue, admiralty, education, &c.; and though having less foreign trade than the caps. of the other presids., its commerce is still considerable, as it is the chief emporium of the Coromandel coast, & trades direct with Great Britain & the other European countries, the United States, Ceylon, & S.E. Asia. Principal imports are rice & other grains, chiefly from Bengal; cotton piece goods, twist, & metallic wares from Great Britain; raw silk, areca, betel, gold dust, spices, & teak timber from Pegu; spirits & wines, coral beads, horses, drugs, to the total value, in 1851–2, of 1,958,736*l*. Exports of cotton stuffs & wool, indigo, pepper, timber, coffee, & other native produce, amounted in the same year to 3,075,103*l*. The site of the city formed the first territorial acquisition by the British in India, permission to erect a fort here having been obtained in 1639.

MADRE-DE-DIOS ARCHIPELAGO, W. Patagonia, is between lat. 50° & 51° S., & lon. 75° W., separated from the mainland, & from Hanover & Chatham isls. by Concepcion Str., & consists of several mntnous. & rocky isls., little explored.

It has no cathedral nor university, but a college with a faculty of theology; schools of medicine & veterinary surgery; a house of education for orphans of the military, founded in 1835; normal school, school of engineers, military college, conservatories of arts & trades, & of music; a national library of 130,000 vols., and numerous MSS.; an astronomical observatory, botanic gardens, the academy of Spain, founded in 1713; and several other academies, museums, & cabinets; numerous hospitals, & benevolent institutions. Madrid has 4 theatres, but the chief place of resort is the bull ring, an amphitheatre near the Alcala gate, capable of containing 12,000 spectators. The chief industrial establishments are royal manufs. of porcelain & carpets; & manufs. of paper, jewellery, silks, and hats, none of which are important. It was the birth-place of many kings of Spain, & many eminent men, among whom are Alonzo de Ercilla, Lopez de Vega, Calderon de la Barca, Nuñez, & the brothers Velasquez. Madrid occupies the site of the ancient Mantua Carpetanorum, called Majoritium, in the middle ages. Its importance only commenced when made cap. of Spain by Philip II. It was held by the French from 1808 to 1812, & here Napoleon placed his brother Joseph on the throne of Spain.

Androscoggin county was erected from parts of Cumberland & Kennebec counties, & the county of Sagadahoe from Lincoln, in the early part of 1854.

Physical features, &c.—Its shores are indented by deep bays, forming many excellent harbors, & its waters are studded with numerous islands of every variety of form & size, from the rocky islet to those of 150 square miles in extent. Near the coast the surface is level, but it rises on proceeding inland, & most part of the state is hilly, forming in many place a congeries of hills or elevated cones, several of which reach an elevation of 4,000 feet; & Mt. Katahdin rises to the height of 5,335 feet above the level of the sea. In the north-west an elevated ridge forms the water shed, dividing the waters of the St. Lawrence from those of the Atlantic, a lateral branch of this ridge of still less elevation separates the Kennebec & Penobscot rivers from the St. John.

The climate is healthy, but the winters are long and severe. The principal productions are Indian corn, wheat, barley, rye, flax, & grasses. The uncleared lands are of great extent, & furnish an immense amount of pine & other lumber. Marble & lime are extensively exported. On the sea coast large quantities of cod fish are dried & prepared for the market, & the rivers abound in excellent salmon. Ship building is extensively carried on.

There were in this state in 1850, 2,039,596 acres of land improved, & 2,515,797 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of land in farms, $54,861,748; and the value of implements & machinery, $2,284,557. Live Stock.—Horses, 41,721; asses & mules, 45; milch cows, 133,556; working oxen, 83,893; other cattle, 125,890; sheep, 451,577; swine, 54,598; value of live stock, $9,705,726.

Agricultural Products, &c.—Wheat, 296,259 bush.; rye, 102,916; Indian corn, 1,750,056; oats, 2,181,037; barley, 151,731; buckwheat, 104,523; peas and beans, 205,541; potatoes, 3,436,040; value of products of the orchard, $342,865; produce of market gardens, $122,387; pounds of butter made, 9,243,811; of cheese, 2,434,454; maple sugar, 93,542 pounds; molasses, 3,167 gallons; bees wax & honey, 189,618 pounds; wool, pounds produced, 1,364,034; flax, 17,081; silk cocoons, 252; hops, 40,120 pounds; hay, tons of, 755,889; clover seeds, 9,097 bushels; other grass seeds, 9,214; flax seed, 580 bushels; & were made 724 gallons of wine; value of home-made manufactures, $513,599; of slaughtered animals, $1,646,773.

Rivers, Lakes, &c.—It has been estimated that one-sixth part of the surface of Maine consists of water. There are numerous lakes, the largest and most noted of which are Moosehead, Sebago, Chesuncook, and Umbagog. A part of the waters of the latter extend into New Hampshire. Some of these lakes are justly celebrated for the picturesque beauties of their scenery. A steamboat has been built to ply on the waters of Moosehead lake. The Kennebec & the Penobscot are the two most important streams; the former is navigable to Augusta & the latter to Bangor. Their shores are adorned with villages, & the intervales along their margins are the most fertile & best cultivated in the state. The Saco, Androscoggin, and St. Croix rivers enters the Atlantic. St. John, & its confluents the Walloostook, Allagash, & Aroostook drain the northern part of the state. The St. John forms a part of the northern part of the state by the late treaty of Washington, & its waters are open to the free navigation of both nations. The principal bays are Casco, Penobscot, Machias & Passamaquoddy.

Manufactures.—There were in this state in 1850, 13 cotton factories, with a capital invested of $3,347,700, employing 849 males & 3,072 females, producing 33,168,556 yards of sheeting valued at $2,630,616; 45 woollen factories, with a capital of $644,200, employing 388 males & 390 females, manufacturing 2,926,320 yards of cloth, & 1,200 lbs. of yarn, valued at $934,923; 1 establishment, making pig-iron, with a capital of $214,000, employing 71 persons, producing 1,484 tons of pig-iron, &c., valued at $36,616; 25 establishments, with a capital of $150,100, employing 244 persons, & making 3,691 tons of castings, valued at $265,000; 163 flouring & grist m., 752 saw m.; 213 tanneries, with a capital of $732,447, employing 780 persons; value of products, $1,620,636;—45 printing offices, 4 daily, 3 tri-weekly, 4 semi-weekly, 48 weekly, & 1 monthly publication; aggregate number of copies published annually, 4,203,064. Capital invested in manufactures, $14,700,452; value of manufactured articles, $24,644,430.

There were Jan. 1854, 11 r. roads in this state; 417 m. completed & in operation, & 90 m. in course of construction. The only canal in the state is the Cumberland & Oxford, 204 m. long, connects navigation from Portland to Sebago, & by a lock in Saco r., navigation is extended to Long Pond, 30 miles farther.

The principal places in this state are Portland, the metropolis, Augusta, the capital, Bangor, Brunswick, Bath, Thomaston, Belfast, Hallowell, Castine, Houlton, & Waterville.

The imports of Maine, in 1852, of domestic produce, amounted to the value of $1,597,204; in foreign vessels, $71,070; of foreign produce in American vessels, $43,902; in foreign vessels, $5,642; total American & foreign produce, $1,717,818. Government, &c.—The government is vested in a governor, senate, & house of representatives, who are elected annually. The senate consists of 31, and the house of representatives of 151 members. Seven counselors are elected by joint ballot of the two branches of the legislature, to advise the governor on all matters pertaining to his legislative duties. The judiciary consists of a supreme judicial court, & the state is divided in 8 judicial districts; 7 justices are appointed by the governor & council, who hold their offices for 7 years, & are re-eligible until they attain the age of 70 years, or otherwise disqualified. Justices of peace & other judicial officers hold office for 7 years. The right of suffrage is possessed by every male citizen of the United States 21 years of age, (excepting paupers, persons under guardianship, & Indians not taxed,) who shall have resided in the state for three months next preceding the election.

The first permanent settlement in Maine was made about the year 1630, & in 1652 the inhabitants were placed under jurisdiction, & formed a part of the colony, subsequently the State of Massachusetts. It was styled the District of Maine until the year 1820, when it was admitted into the Union as an independent state. The constitution was formed in 1819, & to this several amendments have been added.

The town stands in a plain, & consists, with Salford, of a dense mass of buildings, extending about 2 m. from E. to W., by somewhat less from N. to S., and covering about 3,000 acres. The Irk & Medlock rivers join the Irwell close to the town, and with it are extensively made use of to impel machinery. The t. is irregularly laid out, & comprises at least 500 streets. Principal thoroughfares are Market Street, Piccadilly, & the London Road, Oldham & Great Ancoat Streets. Quay, Peter, Bond, & Morley Streets, & the Oxford & Chester roads.

Many of the newer public ways & open spaces are handsome, such as Portland Place, Grosvenor Square, Mosley Street, Ardwick Green, & Salford Crescent; & between the London & Oxford roads is Victoria Park, occupying 140 acres. The exchange, in the mkt. place, is a large semi-circular building, adorned with Doric pillars. The town-hall, of Ionic architecture, contains a noble public room. The corn exchange, royal infirmary, & lunatic asylum, athenæum, royal institution, news room, union club house, natural history society's hall, concert hall, assembly rooms, Salford & Chorlton town halls, asylums for the blind, & for the deaf & dumb, a royal & some other theatres, the barracks, Victoria bridge, & the numerous mills & warehouses, are among the most conspicuous edifices. The collegiate church (now erected into a cathedral) was founded in the 15th century. The see includes nearly all the co. Lancaster; bishop's revenue, 4,500*l.* a-year. Trinity church, at Salford, St. Luke's, Cheetham, & St. George's, Hulme, are the only other churches demanding especial notice. There are 122 churches,—3 Baptist, 1 Bible Christian, 32 Episcopal, 1 Friends', 1 Greek church, 19 Independent, 2 Jews' synagogue, 36 Methodist, 1 New church, 8 Presbyterian, 7 Roman Catholic, 4 Unitarian, & 2 isolated congregations. The grammar school, founded in 1520, has a rev. of upwards of 4,500*l.* a-year, & 16 exhibitions of 60*l.* a-year to the universities, 16 scholarships at Brazen-nose college Oxford, others at Cambridge, & additional privileges for its pupils at those seats of learning. Cheetham college, or blue-coat school, has 80 scholars, a library of 25,000 vols., & a museum. Manchester new college, removed from York in 1840, is the principal Unitarian college in England, & is in connection with the university of London. The royal school of medicine, Lancashire independent college, the royal Lancasterian school, which educates 1,400 children, & the Jubilee school for 80 girls, are among the chief public institutions. Scientific establishments are very numerous, & comprise the royal institution, literary & philosophical, statistical, geological, phrenological, architectural, botanical, & natural history societies, mechanics' institutions, a school of design, & the Victoria gallery. Charitable institutions are also numerous: among them are the infirmary, fever, lying-in, eye, & lock hospitals. It has a branch of the bank of England, 5 joint-stock banks, & 5 weekly newspapers. Mkt., Tuesday, Thursday, & Saturday. The proximity of an abundance of coal, the improvements introduced into spinning & weaving machinery by Hughes, Arkwright, Hargreaves, & Crompton, & the application of steam power, have raised Manchester to its eminence of monopolizing ⅗ds of the cotton manufacture of Great Britain. Its manufs. are mostly conducted in large mills or factories; of these in 1853, there were in Manchester & Salford—

MARIPOSA, co., Cal., in the central eastern part of the state. Area, 25,000 sq. m. Drained by the San Joaquin & tributaries, Merced & Mariposa rivers, & Chowchilla & Fresno creeks. East of the Sierra Nevada there are several small streams known to exist, & the waters of these are absorbed in the Moro lake. The country, except a small portion east of the Sierra Nevada, is an immense valley lying between the coast range on the west & Sierra Nevada on the east. It is composed of an extensive region of rich "Tulare plains," supposed to be of exhaustless fertility when properly drained & brought into cultivation, occupying both sides of the San Joaquin, extending into the hilly country, and even into the mountain gorges. It has extensive forests of red wood, cedar, & pine, 2 saw m., 6 quartz m. in operation, 60 quartz grinding machines. The extent of gold regions is the extreme width of county, & extending in the Nevada range. Mineral springs & marble exist. The name of the county signifies "butterfly." In the month of June, 1807, in one of their yearly excursions to the valley of rushes (valle de los tulares), with a view to hunt elks, a party of Californians pitched their tents on a stream at the foot of the Sierra Nevada, and whilst there, myriads of butterflies, of the most gorgeous and variegated colors, clustered on the surrounding trees, attracted their attention, from which circumstance they gave the stream the appellation of Mariposa. Hence the name of the county. Capital, Mariposa. Pop. 1850, 4,379; 1852, 8,969, of whom 4,533 are Indians.

MAROCCO, or MOROCCO (Arab. Moghrib-ul-Acsa, "the extreme west"), ancient Mauritania, a country of N.W. Africa, between lat. 28° & 36° N., & lon. 0° 40′ & 11° 40′ W., having E. & S.E. the Desert, N.E. Algeria, W. the Atlantic, & N. the Mediterranean Sea. Area estimated at 220,000 sq. m., (or a little larger than France), & pop. at 8,500,000, of whom about 3,550,000 are Moors, 3,750,000 Berbers & Shellocks, 740,000 Bedouins, & 339,500 Jews. Surface mountainous, covered with ramifications of Mount Atlas, but comprising many fine plains & valleys. Princip. rivers, the Mahala, flowing into the Mediterranean; the Sebu, Morbeya, Tensift, & Susa, entering the Atlantic; & the Draha, beyond the Atlas. Climate healthy. Temp. seldom beyond 85° Fahr. Soil in the valleys celebrated in antiquity for its great fertility; & yielding, in some places, three crops of corn in one year; but so little is agriculture understood, that large crops of corn are sometimes suffered to remain unreaped, & at other times many of the inhabitants die of famine. Princip. crops, fine wheat, maize, millet, & barley, dates, grapes, olives, sugar-cane, cotton, tobacco, the fruits of S. Europe, cork, & henna. Timber for building is not generally abundant, & is imported from Spain. The grass lands are rich, & feed a fine race of horses, the exportation of which is prohibited; besides large numbers of sheep, goats, oxen, & mules. Camels & asses are the principal beasts of burden. Mineral products comprise iron, copper, & antimony. The domestic manufs. comprise woollen & cotton fabrics. Leather is made in large quantities in most of the towns; red caps, silk fabrics, good saddlery, carpets, chip-baskets & earthenwares, are among the chief articles manufactured. A trade with the Levant is carried on by the Mecca & other caravans, & by feluccas coasting along the shores of Barbary; there is also a communication by caravans, with Timbuctoo & other places in Cent. Africa, where the Morocco traders exchange salt, dates, tobacco, cloth, caps, girdles, & daggers, for gold dust, ivory, rhinoceros' horns, assafœtida, ostrich feathers, & slaves. Exports to Europe, mostly to Leghorn, Marseille, & the Spanish ports, consist of wax, hides, skins, olive oil, gums, wool, dates, honey, indigo, shawls, carpets, &c. Government is more despotic than in most Mohammedan states, the rule of the sovereign being apparently all but unlimited. The empire consists of the kingdoms Morocco, Fez, & the territories Sus, Draha, & Tafillet; & is subdivided into 28 provs. Princip. cities & towns, Morocco, Fez, Mequinez, Rabat, Sallee, Tarudant, Titnan, Tesa, Mogadore, & Tangier, which, with other caps. of provs., are governed by military prefects. The towns are chiefly inhabited by Moors & Jews, which latter conduct the larger mercantile transactions; the Berbers & Shellocks form the bulk of the agricultural pop.; & the Arabs generally lead a wandering life on the plains, living in tents, & subsisting on the produce of their herds & flocks. Arts & science are at a low ebb; though, in most of the cities & towns are Mohammedan colleges, the princip. of which is at Fez. The standing army amounts to about 11,000 men, half of whom are negroes. Navy comprises only a few brigs and smaller vessels.

MAROCCO, (Arab. Marak'sh), the cap. city of the empire Marocco, is situated in a fertile plain, near the river Tensift, 125 m. E. Mogadore. Lat. 31° 37′ 20″ N.; lon. 7° 36′ W. Pop. estimated (1844), at 100,000. It is enclosed by a strong turretted wall 30 feet in height, & 6 m. in circ., in the interior of which are many large fields & open spaces strewed with ruins. city is ill built & filthy; most of its houses are constructed of only earth & lime, & those of a more substantial kind, together with its extensive aqueducts, are chiefly in decay. Princip. edifices, the Emperor's palace, separately enclosed by walls, & occupying, with its gardens, a space 3 miles in circ.: numerous mosques, several having much beauty, & one of which has a tower 221 ft. in height; a large bazaar, & an hospital, calculated for 1,500 patients. The city has 11 entrance gates, one of which, like many other public buildings, is richly ornamented with arabesque work. The streets are crossed by numerous arches & walls, & the several quarters are separated in a similar manner: that belonging to the Jews is 1¼ m. in circuit. Outside of the city are extensive cemeteries, & a quarter especially appropriated to lepers. Princip. manufs. are of leather & embroidery, & the chief export trade is in those articles & in salt. Marocco was founded in A.D. 1,073.

Mean temp. of year 57° .5; winter 45°; summer 74° .2 Fahr. It is composed of an old & a new town, the former on heights, with numerous crooked streets; the latter, which comprises two-thirds of its extent, has wide and straight streets. Marseille has few public buildings of architectural importance, except the hotel de Ville; its lazareto is the largest in the world. The harbor, though the receptacle of the filth of the city, is the most commercial in France, & capable of containing 1,200 vessels; its entrance, which admits only 1 vessel at a time, is defended by 2 hills, surmounted by fort St. Jean & fort St. Nicolas, & the road is defended by the fortified islands, Château d'If, Pomègue, and Ratonneau. It has a tribunal of commerce, a national academy of sciences, letters & arts, an academy of medicine, & many other learned societies; a national college, with a library of 45,000 vols.; a school of hydrography, an astronomical observatory, a botanic garden, many benevolent institutions, several museums, & a mint. There are numerous fountains in the old & new town, but the supply of water has long been very deficient; to remedy this, a canal has recently been cut from the Durance. Marseille has manufs. of all kinds, the chief are soap, chemical products, bonnets, shoes, perfumery, olive oil & liqueurs. It has also tanneries, sugar, sulphur, & salt refineries, & manufs. of tobacco. Its commerce in the wines & fruits of the South, cork & anchovies, which has flourished for 24 centuries, extends to all parts of the world. It is the birth-place of the astronomer Pytheas, the preacher Mascaron, & the sculptor Puget. Marseille, founded by the Phœnicians in 600 B. C., served as a refuge for them from the vengeance of Cyrus. It soon became the entrepôt for all the surrounding countries, founded many fine colonies, was long celebrated for the cultiv. of letters & arts, preserved its liberty under the Romans, & often acted as an independent republic. It communicates by railr. with Arles, Avignon, Nismes, & Lyon. Louis XI. united it to the crown of France in 1481. It suffered severe ravages from the plague in 1720.

Government, &c.—The state is divided into 3 districts, viz.: the eastern, the southern, & north-western. The governor is elected quadrennially by a plurality of the popular vote, from the districts alternately, so that each district is represented in the gubernatorial chair successively. The candidate for governor must have resided in the district which he represents for three years next preceding the election, & five years in the state. The senate consists of 22 members, elected for four years, one half of the number being elected every two years, & the senators must have resided in the county for which they are chosen for one year next preceding the election. The House of Delegates (number not to exceed 80), are elected by the people, and must have resided in the county for which they are chosen for one year next preceding the election. The judges of the court of appeals (4 in number) are elected for a term of 10 years, until seventy years of age; of circuit courts (8 in number), for a term of 10 years. In both cases they must have been a citizen of the state for five years. Every white male citizen, 21 years of age, who has resided in the state one year next preceding an election, & for six months in the county where he offers his vote, enjoys the right of suffrage.

The original charter of Maryland was granted to Lord Baltimore in 1632. It was first settled by Catholics in 1634 at St. Marys. In convention, April 28th, 1788, it adopted the constitution of the United States; yeas, 63; nays, 12. The first constitution of the state formed in 1776, which has been amended from time to time, until the adoption of the present one in 1851.

Physical Features.—This state presents three distinct zones. The first, toward the ocean, is a marine alluvion but little elevated above the sea, it is mostly sandy, & the least fertile & smallest in extent of the three sections. This plain is followed by a fine hilly tract which crosses the state from N. to S., elevated in some places 300 feet above the sea, from these elevations the rivers flow in every direction. The second or middle zone includes part of the beautiful valley of the Connecticut, & is followed by the mountainous but highly fertile county of Berkshire, which comprises the whole western part of the state. Through Berkshire pass two mountain ranges the Taghkanic, on the western border of the state & between the Housatonic & Connecticut rivers, the Green Mountain range here called Hoosick Mountains. Mount Holyoke, near Northampton, is near 1,200 feet above the level of the sea, & Wachusett Mountain in Princeton, is an elevated peak from 2,000 to 3,000 feet high. Saddle mountain in the Taghkanic range in the N. west corner of the state is 4,000 feet high, & Mount Washington in the same range in the S. west corner of the state, is about 300 feet high. The valleys of the Connecticut are fertile, as are also those of the Housatonic.

There were in this state in 1850, 2,133,436 acres of land improved, & 1,222,576 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms $109,076,347, & the value of implements & machinery $3,209,584. Live stock, horses, 42,216; asses & mules, 34; milch cows, 130,099; working oxen, 46,611; other cattle, 83,284; sheep, 188,651; swine, 81,119; value of live stock $9,647,710.

The principal rivers are—the Connecticut, a noble stream winding for 50 miles across the state. Housatonic which rises in Berkshire county, & flows through the W. part of the state, & Merrimac, which rises in New Hampshire & has a course of 50 m. in the N.E. part of the state, & enters the ocean below Newburyport. It is navigable for large vessels to Haverhill, 15 miles. Besides these there are Nashua, Concord, Taunton, & Blackstone rivers. Massachusetts has numerous good harbors. There are several important islands off the S. shore of this state to which they belong. The largest is Nantucket, 15 m. long & 11 broad, & which constitutes a county of its own name. Marthas Vineyard W. of Nantucket is 20 m. long & from 2 to 10 broad, which, with other small islands, constitutes Duke's county. The shores of Massachusetts are diversified by some bold promontories & capacious bays. Of the latter, Massachusetts bay, between Cape Ann on the N., & Cape Cod on the S., is about 40 miles in breadth. Buzzards bay is on the S.W. side of Cape Cod, & is 20 m. long. Cape Ann in the N. part of the state is a rocky promontary 15 m. in length. Cape cod is a peninsula in the S.E. part of the state, extending 75 m. long & from 2 to 20 broad, with a bend in the middle nearly at right angles. The peninsula of Nahant, a few miles north of the harbor of Boston, is connected with the mainland by Lynn-beach, two miles long. It has become, on account of its cool breezes & wild sea views, a place of fashionable resort during the summer months.

MEDITERRANEAN, Mare Internum, an inland sea, enclosed by Asia on the E., Africa on the S., and Europe on the N., & communicates with the Atlantic by the Strait of Gibraltar on the W., situated between lat. 30° 20′ & 43° N., & lon. 6° & 37° 30′ E. Within this space is included the Tyrhennian, Ionian, Adriatic Seas, & the Sea of the Grecian archipelago. The Sea of Marmora, the Black Sea, and the Sea of Azov which communicate with it by the strait of the Dardanelles, are considered as separate seas. The principal rivers which flow to the Mediterranean are the Ebro, Rhone, Arno, & the Tiber in Europe, and the Nile in Africa. The principal islands are Sicily (which divides the Mediterranean into an E. & W. portion), Cyprus, Crete, Malta, & the Ionian islands in the E.,

& Sardinia, Corsica, & the Balearic islands in the W. The most important gulfs are Taranto in Italy, Lepanto in Greece, Syrtis & Cabes in Barbary, in the E. portion; & Valencia in Spain, Lion in France, Genoa in Italy, & Tunis in Africa, in the W. The winds of this sea are very variable; the tides are little felt & very irregular. Fish is abundant in the Mediterranean, especially tunny, anchovies, pilchards, & mackerel, & the finest coral, sponge, & ambergris are procured. The Mediterranean was called by the Hebrews "the Great Sea." The Phœnicians are the first people known to have extended their commerce along its coasts; the Greeks afterwards disputed it with them. After the destruction of Carthage, the Romans were sole masters of its shores; in the middle ages, the Venetians monopolized its commerce, & at present, England, by the possession of Gibraltar, Malta, & the Ionian islands, possesses the greatest influence on its destinies. [Adriatic & Ionian Sea.]

MEXICO, or MEJICO (Aztec Tenochtitlan), a city, N. America, cap. Repub. of Mexico, & of the State of Mexico. It is beautifully situated in a vast plain, 7,400 ft. above the sea, enclosed by lofty mountains, & covered with broad meadows & lakes; lat. 19° 25′ 45″ N.; lon. 103° 45′ 53″ W. from Greenwich, England. Pop. 170,000. When taken by Cortes, in 1521, Mexico stood on several islands in Lake Tezcuco, & was approached by four great causeways, which extended through the lake, & met in the centre of the city. Owing to the drainage & more rapid evaporation produced by the removal of the forests & other causes, the lake has receded, & the present city, though occupying the same site, is now about 2½ m. W. from its shores. The distant view is therefore very different from that which Cortez has rapturously described; but still continues to strike all travellers with admiration. This admiration is not diminished, but rather increased, by a nearer approach. The city is built, with the utmost regularity, in the form of a square, is enclosed by lofty walls, & consists of a great number of spacious streets, either parallel or at right angles to each other, forming a series of square blocks of massive & uniform structures, & leading to a central square, which covers an area of from 12 to 15 acres, & is lined with public edifices of the most imposing description. The houses are almost all built of hewn stone, in a very pure style of architecture, are three or four stories in height, have flat terraced roofs, & are often not only provided with iron balustrades & gates ornamented with bronze, but covered with porcelain mosaic, of elegant patterns. The streets are well paved, but often badly cleaned, & being neither lighted nor watched, become unsafe for night passengers. The most remarkable edifice is the cathedral, built on the site of the great teocalli, or pyramid temple of the Aztecs, & occupying one entire side of the central square. It is 500 ft. long, by 420 ft. wide, & though not in strict conformity with any order of architecture, is remarkably imposing. The walls are built of unhewn basalt, but the front is covered over with the most laborious carving, while lofty pillars rise up against the wall for the support of its two lofty towers. The interior is gorgeous, almost beyond description, though the decorations are more remarkable for costliness than for taste. The choir is formed of rare carved woods, & elaborately covered with gilded images; the high altar, raised from the floor, on an elevated platform, exhibits a profusion of candlesticks, crosses, & other ornaments, of solid gold or silver, & is crowned by an image of the Virgin, decked in jewels, estimated at the value of more than two millions of dollars; & all the other parts of the church are a perfect wilderness of columns, statues, shrines, fonts, &c. Another side of the great square is occupied by the national palace, the residence formerly of the viceroys, & now of the president. It stands on the site of the palace of Axayacatl, in which Cortez was lodged by Montezuma; & is a quadrangular pile, of such enormous dimensions, that, besides accommodating the president & his family, it contains the principal government offices, the supreme court, the chamber of deputies, & that of the senate. Both these chambers, the only parts of the interior particularly deserving of notice, are very elegant. In the S.E. corner of the square, opposite the principal front of the cathedral, is the Casa Municipal or townhouse, partly occupied as an exchange. Immediately S. of the national palace, but without the square, is the university, which contains the national museum, & has, in its front, a magnificent modern market. At some distance W. of the square, is the Mineria, or school of mines, which occupies one of the most elegant edifices of the city, & in which lectures on the sciences connected with mining are occasionally given. Attached to it is a tolerably good mineral museum. In addition to the cathedral, Mexico contains from 50 to 60 churches & convents, few of them remarkable for architectural merit, but most of them possessed of considerable riches, & ostentatiously set off by gaudy decorations. One of the most elegant of the churches, is that of San Domingo, a light & airy structure, surmounted by a spire & dome, but somewhat injured in its effect by the proximity of the Inquisition. The antiquities of Mexico might naturally be expected to present objects of the greatest interest, but almost all of these have either perished or been removed from their original sites, & can now only be seen in the fragments collected within the national museum. The other edifices & objects particularly deserving of notice are the convents of St. Francisco, St. Augustine, & La Merced, all of them large & imposing structures, with numerous spires & cupolas, & the last particularly admired for the elegance of its interior; the magnificent aqueducts by which the city is supplied with water, the public fountains, the colossal equestrian statue of Charles IV., in the court-yard of the university; the acordada, or public prison, a large & substantial structure; the theatre, of considerable dimensions, but devoid of architectural merit; the Plaza de Toros, a large circular enclosure for bull-fights, with accommodation for about 3,000 spectators; two magnificent paseos, or promenades—the one, Passeo Nuevo, to the W. of the city, consisting of a broad avenue, shaded by rows of stately trees, & broken at intervals by fountains—the other, the Paseo de la Viga, on the opposite side of the city, skirting one of the canals leading to the Lake of Chalco, & very tastefully laid out; & the Alameda, a park of 10 or 12 ac., formed into labyrinths by magnificent forest trees; & the great place of public resort, particularly on festivals, when its carriage-ways become thronged by gay equipages, & from 8,000 to 10,000 persons of all classes often crowd its walks. The manufactures, of comparatively limited extent, include gold & silver lace, jewellery, & silversmith's work, woollen cloths, blankets, baizes, cotton goods, hats, soap, liqueurs, carriages, & tobacco; the trade is also very limited, the exports are almost entirely the produce of the mines; while the imports are chiefly manufactured goods from the United States & Europe, & silk goods, especially hosiery, from China. Mexico, originally Tenochtitlan, is said to have been founded in 1325, & occupied, as already stated, several islands of Lake Tezcuco, to which access was given by broad causeways. When first visited by the Spaniards, they were so struck with its magnificence, that their powers of description appear to have been baffled, & their language naturally assumes the form of hyperbole. But they had not long become masters, before their tyranny, & the opposition which it excited, brought all the miseries of war upon the city, & almost all its ancient splendor disappeared. A new city, however, soon arose, under the genius & indomitable perseverance of Cortez; & numerous edifices, vying in magnificence with the most celebrated structures of the old world, rose up, as if by magic, in every quarter. The lowness of the site, compared with the level of the surrounding lake, was a serious obstacle to its prosperity, exposing it not only to pestilential vapors, but to inundations, which caused fearful ravages. The additional evaporation, caused by the removal of the forests, so far remedied the evil, by curtailing the dimensions of the lake; but it was found necessary to adopt a more artificial process, & by means of an immense cut through the solid rock, 12 m. in length, 150 ft. deep, & 300 ft. wide, commenced in 1609, & completed in 1789, the waters of several lakes adjoining, which, from occupying a higher level than Tezcuco, discharged themselves into it, & often raised its level so as to threaten a complete submergence of the city, were diverted into the Panuco, which carries them directly into the Gulf of Mexico.

MEXICO (GULF OF), a large indentation, E. coast, N. America, washing the shores of the United States & Mexico; measuring about 1,000 m. E. to W., & 800 m. N. to S.; estimated area, 800,000 sq. m. It is partly formed by the projection towards each other of the peninsulas of Florida and Yucatan, nearly in a line between which lies the Island of Cuba, leaving a communication on its N. with the Atlantic, through the Florida Channel, & on its S. with the Caribbean Sea, through the Channel of Yucatan. The gulf is free from banks, and contains only a few small rocky islands on the coasts of Yucatan, with the Florida reef near its E. extremity. The shores are low, & generally lined with flat sandy isls., not far from the land, and numerous lagoons. There are few harbors; and the rivers which fall into it are obstructed by bars at their mouth, which render them all, except the Mississippi, nearly inaccessible for vessels of large draught. A current of water, entering the gulf from the Caribbean Sea, is soon divided into two portions, the one running E., along the coast of Cuba, the other W., in a curved line, through the middle of the gulf, round towards the Florida Channel, where it meets the other current, & the two united form the Gulf Stream (see ATLANTIC). The temperature of the Gulf of Mexico is 86° in summer, or 6° higher than that of the ocean in the same parallel. At high tide the Pacific rises several feet above the level of the gulf, & at low water it falls as far below it. (See Maury's Wind and Current Charts.)

MEXICO, REPUB. OF,* extends from 15° to 31° 47′ N. lat., over the entire width of the continent of America. Its boundaries are as follows: on the N. the U. S. of America, whose dividing line, according to the treaty of Guadelupe Hidalgo, & of the treaty concluded at the City of Mexico, Dec. 30th, 1853, between the two nations, begins in the Gulf of Mexico, 3 leagues from land, opposite the mouth of the Rio Grande; thence up the middle of that river to the point where the parallel of 31° 47′ N. lat. crosses the same; thence due west 100 ms.; thence S. to the parallel of 31° 20′ N. lat.; thence along the said parallel of 31° 20′ to the 111th meridian of lon. W. from Greenwich; thence in a straight line to a point on the Colorado riv., 20 ms. below the junction of the Gila & Colorado rivs; thence up the middle of the Colorado to the line separating Upper from Lower California; thence W. on said line to a point, one league (about 3 ms.) S. of the port of San Diego on the Pacific Ocean. Bounded on the S. by the Repub. of Guatemala; on the E. the Gulf of Mexico, & part of the sea of the Antilles; & on the W. the Pacific Ocean. The greatest extent or length of the territory, which is from N.E. to S.W., taking it in a direct line from the southern extrem. of the state of Chiapa to a league S. of the port of San Diego, in California, is 750 leagues of 5,000 varas; & the greatest breadth, on the 26th degree, is 424 leagues. The extent of the coasts on the Gulf of Mexico & the sea of the Antilles is 615 leagues, & 1,584 on the Pacific Ocean, & the Gulf of California or Cortes. The extent of the northern frontier is 660 leagues, & the southern 202. The total extent of surface is 115,426½ square leagues.

Mountains.—A large portion of the territory of the Republic being occupied by a part of the immense chain of mountains which traverse the American continent from the country of the Esquimaux, in 65° of N. lat., to the Strait of Magellan, Mexico contains a multitude of lofty eminences, being like all the interior of the country on the great table-land formed by that Cordillera, from 2,206 to more than 3,000 varas above the level of the sea. Above that elevated line, however, rise several colossal mountains, sometimes hiding their lofty heads in the clouds. The principal of these, and their respective elevations above the waters of the ocean, reduced to metres, are as follows:—

Names.	Metres.	States.
Popocatepetl	5,400	Mexico.
Peak of Orizava (Citlaltepetl)	5,295	Vera Cruz.
Yxtaccihuatl	4,786	Mexico.

vos, Guadelupe, San Bernardo, Santa Margarita, Tres Marias, & Revillagigedo in the Pacific; San Ignacio, Angel del Guardia, Tiburon, Salsipuedes, San Pedro, Tortuga, Lobos, Carmen, Santa Catalina, San José, Espiritu Santo, & Ceralvo in the Gulf of California. There are three Gulfs, that which bears the name of the Republic, formed by some of the waters of the Atlantic, that of California or Cortes, which separates Lower California from the state of Sonora; and that of Tehuantepec on the Pacific Ocean. The only bays which deserve the name are those of Acapulco, & Manzanillo, in the Pacific; those of Santa Marina, La Paz, Algodones, San Felipe de Jesus, Virgenes, Mulagé, Carmen, & Los Muertos, in the Gulf of California; Ascension, & Espiritu Santo, on the eastern coast of Yucatan. The most remarkable capes are those of San Lucas in Lower California; Cavientes, on the coast of the state of Zalisco; & that of Catoche, on the coast of Yucatan, at the entrance of the Gulf of Mexico.

Rivers.—Among the great benefits which nature has conferred on the Mexican soil, unfortunately there are not found such deep rivers as exist in other countries, & which, both by the waters they give to the fields, the convenience & facility with which transportation is effected by them, are so useful in producing commerce, and with it the other sources of national wealth. Although there are many small streams on both coasts of the republic, most of them are so insignificant as scarcely to deserve mention; and the only ones which may be noticed as having water sufficient for navigation to a certain degree, although but for small vessels, are the following: In the Gulf of Mexico.—The rivers Bravo del Norte, now the boundary between the Republic of Mexico & the United States, rises on the eastern slope of the Sierra Madre, and flows 548 leagues, till it empties into the Gulf of Mexico. The Montezuma, rising in the small lake of San Cristoval, in the valley of Mexico, not far from the capital, & soon uniting with the Panuco in the state of Tamaulipas, empties into the Gulf at Tampico. The Alvarado or Tlalralapan, which empties into the harbor of the former name, is formed by several small streams which unite a short distance from that place. The Goatzacoalcos is formed by two small streams flowing from the northern slope of the Sierra Madre, & afterwards uniting with two other smaller rivers, runs 55 leagues to the port of the same name. The Tabasco or Grijiola has its source near the town of Comit, in the state of Chiapas, & has for its principal tributaries the Usumacinta & San Pedro, flows 132 leagues and flows into the port of Tobasco. In the Gulf of California or Cortes.—The Yaque is formed by a stream from the western slope of the Cordillera, runs 137 leagues and empties near the harbor of Guayamas. In the Pacific Ocean.—The rivers Santiago or Serura has its rise in the small lake of the latter name, near the city of Toluca, flows west to the lake of Chapala, in the state of Jalisco, & continues its course under the name of Tololotlan or Santiago, to the Pacific, north of the port of San Blas, flowing a distance of 208 leagues. The Mescala flows from the neighborhood of the town of Cuautla-Amilpas to the little port of Zacatula, on the coast of the state of Guerrero. The river Verde rises on the western slope of the Cordillera, near the town of Cuicatlan, in the state of Oajaca, & runs 55 leagues to the coast of that state.

Lakes.—The most remarkable are those of Terminos & Bacalar, in the state of Yucatan; that of Santa Anna, on the boundaries of Vera Cruz & Tabasco; the Superior & Inferior in the isthmus of Tehuantepec, belonging to that of Oajaca; that of Tonalá, in Chiapas; those of Chalco, Tezcuco, Coyuca, Tecpan, Mestilan, Xochisnilco & Leoma in the state of Mexico; those of Yuviraputaro, Cuitzco, & Pátzcuaro, in Michoacan; those of Chapala, Etzalan & Mastilan, in Jalisco; those of Tamiagua, Mandiuga & Carcasonera, in Vera Cruz; those of Chaivel, Caosintero, Movales, San Bernardo & La Madre, in Tamaulipas; those of Tlahualila or Caiman, Del Muerto, Parras, De Sacy, Santa Maria, & Aqua Verde, in Coahuila; those of Palomas, San Diego, Santa Maria, Guzman & Patos, in Chihuahua; & that of Cozotlan, in the territory of Colima.

Of these lakes the largest are those of Camian, which is 178 square leagues; Tamiagua, 102; Terminos, 306; Chapala, 88; San Bernardo, 96; La Madre, 61; Tescuco, 12; Chalco, 64; Parras, 39; & Guzman, 48.

Form of the Land, and the different Climates.—The surface of the Mexican Republic presents a very irregular aspect. The central part, as before remarked, is on the immense plain formed by the Cordillera which traverses its whole extent from N.W. to S.E., from which elevation there is a descent to the coasts, both seas being more or less rapid in different parts, according to the varying declivity of the slope of the Cordillera. This singular configuration of the land, while it offers various obstacles, particularly to the construction of good roads in some parts of the Republic, on the other hand produces great advantages to the inhabitants; for, as the differences of climate in Mexico being much more owing to the greater or less elevation above the level of the sea, than to the distance from the pole towards the equinoctial line, these great elevations give it a benign climate, even in the part of territory which lies under the debilitating influence of the rays of the sun in the torrid zone. To this circumstance it is also owing, that, in Mexico, in certain places under the same parallel of latitude, & at short distances from each other, there is a great difference of temperature, from the coldest to the warmest. The climates of the republic are divided into three great classes, viz., cold, temperate, & hot. The cold climate generally is found on all the table-land of the cordilleras, which occupies about one-third part of the territory; the temperate, in the regions situated on the slopes; & the hot, in the low parts of the coasts. The places where the temperature is cold or temperate, enjoy a highly benignant climate; but such is not the case in the low parts of the coasts, where certain epidemic diseases prevail, as the black vomit & the yellow fever, which, over all the eastern coast, attack persons not co-naturalized with the burning climate; and faids, which are intermittent fevers, which are found on both coasts. In all parts of the country within the torrid zone, the changes of the four seasons of the year are perceptible in so small a degree, that the inhabitants can wear the same clothes in the heat of summer as in the depth of winter. In the temperate zone, the fact is somewhat different, as the farther we proceed in it towards the north, the seasons are more marked. The longest day in the year, in the most southern part of the republic, is 15 hours, 10 minutes; & the shortest, 13 hours, 30 minutes. In the most northern part, the longest day is 16 hours, 28 minutes, & the shortest, 12 hours, 19 minutes, all including the duration of the twilight at morning & evening, which is calculated at 2 hours, 24 minutes.

Natural Riches.—As it is not possible to present, in an article of this kind, a scientific or minute description of all the objects of natural history in the three great branches into which it is divided, viz., the animal, vegetable, and mineral, only those of the greatest use will be noticed, to give an idea, although a general one, of the great wealth contained in the soil of the republic. Beginning with the animal kingdom, the quadrupeds serviceable to man for food & other purposes, are so abundant, as the ox, sheep, goat, and swine, that, whether from the sparseness of the population, or the fact, that most of the people do not daily eat animal food, there is, perhaps, no other country in which the prices are so low. In equal quantity, also, are found venison, hares, rabbits, & other wild animals equally esteemed. Among the quadrupeds which are useful to man in other respects, are included the horse & the ass, which are found in excessive abundance in Mexico, as well as that hybrid race, mules, which last are commonly employed in drawing carriages, in labor in the fields & mines, &, in general, for all kinds of work. Of birds which serve as food, there are the turkey, hen, pigeon, goose, quail, chachalaca, crane, grouse, agachona, and many others no less exquisite, as the number of birds of this class in the republic exceeds sixty. Of birds which adorn nature by the beauty of their plumage or the melody of their song, there are, in Mexico, according to Clavigero, more than fifty-seven different species, some of which are common to Europe, & others peculiar to the country. There are several talking-birds, which imitate the human voice, as the parrot & huacamago. With regard to fishes, there is a great abundance and variety, as well in the waters near the Gulf of Mexico, as in those of the Pacific, & in the rivers & lakes. Besides the species in both seas, as the whale, dolphin, sword-fish, shark, manati, manta, sea-wolf, sea-dog, bonito, cod, bream, pargo, pollack, pampano, palo-meta, ray, chucho, barbet, humpback, ovate, flying-fish, guitavia, caboilla, needle-fish, lobster, sole, turtle, cuttle-fish, & crabs of different sorts, there are some peculiar to the Gulf of Mexico, as the salmonete, congrio, doncella, pegeveye, vombo, besugo, veomijuela, govrion, linterna, denton, lamprea, murena, eel, ray, tonina es medregal, gold-fish, ostion, cason, pege-lagarto, bulcay, & others which are peculiar to the Pacific, as the salmon, alun, cornudo, lenguado, silguero caballa, corbina, vieja, sardines, ojon, herring, bote, & others. In the rivers & lakes, in addition to three or four species of white fish, there are carp, trout, bobo, vobalo, barbos, ovate, corbilas, eels, and others. While speaking of fisheries, we should mention that of pearl-shell on the coast of Yucatan, which is both rich & abundant; and also of pearls, on the coast of Lower California, & in other parts of the Pacific.

With respect to the vegetable kingdom—as the variety of climate permits the growth of every species of plants, it is absolutely useless to give a description of each cultivated, or that may be cultivated, in Mexico. In the elevated parts of the country are produced all the fruits of Europe, & in the low, on the coast, those of the tropics. The fertility of the soil is very extraordinary; for, although in some parts, not in the torrid zone, these tracts are somewhat barren on account of the want of water, in general it may be said, that the soil of Mexico is one of the most fertile in the world, and that the laborer always obtains from it, with the least effort, a rich and abundant reward for his toil. There are some places where the reproduction is truly surprising; & the district of Leon, in the province of Guanajuato, may be mentioned as an example, where, according to the report of the General Direction of Industry, in 1846, 250 fanegas of maize are customarily obtained for one sown; & the same happens in many other parts of the republic. In equal variety & abundance are found all kinds of fruit & garden vegetables, as in the cold & temperate climates are easily cultivated all the trees & plants of Europe; & in the warm the delicious are found, which are peculiar to the intertropical regions. In Mexico, also, are found various trees yielding useful resins & gums, as the Hule, or elastic gum, copal, shellac, liquid amber, and others. There is also a multitude of medicinal plants, as well those which beautify the fields with flowers, among which, according to Clavigero, more than 1,200 are peculiar to the Mexican soil. The country is equally rich in timber; for, in spite of the neglect of the government in planting & preserving trees, there are found, both on the elevated lands & on the coasts, immense forests, abounding in woods of the most exquisite beauty & the greatest solidity. Beside those which serve for building, as the roble, ancino, fresno, pine, sabino, & others, there are also cedar, mahogany, ebony, rosewood, & other equally valuable, proving that in this point, as well as many others, Mexico is the part of the American continent most highly favored by Nature. Dye-woods also abound in some places, as the coasts of Yucatan & Tamaulipas, in the Gulf of Mexico, & those of Sinaloa, Jalisco, Guerrero, & Colima, in the Pacific. To the great variety & wealth which the republic possesses in the vegetable kingdom, which offers so brilliant a prospect to agriculture, whenever, abandoning the torpidity which has hitherto existed, she shall give signs of understanding her destiny, by freely opening her deserted fields to all men in the world disposed to enter & fertilize them by industry, to these are to be added the extraordinary mineral wealth which her soil contains. Besides gold & silver, the abundance of which places Mexico in the first rank of those which produce them, there are also copper, mercury, iron, tin, lead, zinc, antimony, arsenic, sulphur, alum, cobalt, coal, & some other minerals. Some precious stones are found in the republic, as opal, topaz, turquoise, agate, amethyst, cornelian, & certain green stones resembling emeralds, although very inferior to them. It is asserted that diamonds are found; but, although the Indians found them at the time of the Conquest, it is not now certainly known where they exist. Rock crystal occurs, of which, according to Clavigero, the ancient Mexicans made use. There are diffused over the republic immense strata of different kinds of stone, not only of the common building stones for houses, but also marbles most excellent for their solidity, & jaspers of the richest & most variegated colors.

Roads.—The condition of most of them is not good. Among the first rank of those few deserving the name, are two carriage-roads leading from the capital to the ports of Vera Cruz, constructed about the beginning of the present cent., which, although they might have been regarded at that epoch as works of merit, on account of the obstacles which they had to overcome, are rendered in some parts almost impassable, by the state of neglect to which they have for many years been abandoned. Of the cross-roads existing between the interior towns of Mexico, few owe anything to art, as nothing is to be seen in them except such grading as was necessary to a passage, and here and there a bridge, in places where it was impossible to cross in any other manner. Among the roads of this kind, which have recently received some considerable improvement, are that which crosses from the city of Toluca to Morelia; that part of the carriage-road near the entrance & exit of Zacatecas, on the road from Durango to Mexico; that which leads from that capital to Cuautla, and that from Morelia to Patzcuaro. For some time several states have been convinced of the indispensable importance of roads throughout the republic, to facilitate the progress of wealth; and movements are making for the opening of some, thanks to the efforts of the local authorities of those states, assisted by the general government of the nation. In Oajaca two carriage-roads are already far advanced, one of them from the capital of that state to the port of Huatulco, and the other from the same capital to Tehuacan. A good road is also making from San Luis to Tampico; one from Guadajara to Tepic, & San Blas; and improvements are going on in those leading from the capital of the Republic to Queretaro & the port of Decapulco. From the year 1843, a railroad has been constructing, which according to the contract formed by the empresarios with the government, is to form a line of 29,380 Mexican varas, from the city of Vera Cruz to the town of San Juan; but that work is not yet finished. The work is going on, & trains have run on the part which is completed, viz., from that city to Molino.

Population.—Although there are no certain dates to fix with precision the respective number of the different races into which the entire population of Mexico is divided, according to information and calculations given by some observing persons, who have travelled over a great part of the republic, & made various enquiries on the subject, we may confidently conclude that three-fifths of the inhabitants belong to the indigenous race, and of the remainder, a third part are pure European, and two-thirds mixed European and Indian, in which is found a very small portion of mixed African. This diversity of races composing the population of the Mexican republic, has been, and will be, until one of them shall govern the rest, the principal obstacle to its prosperity & aggrandisement, because society being thus diversified into factions of different origin, education, customs, and even languages, each has its own different tendencies, and they can never be brought to work together in union for one & the same object. The major part of this population dwell in 5,128 cities, towns, & villages, situated on the elevated regions & the slope of the Cordillera, so that, although a scarcity of inhabitants is observable in all parts of the republic, compared with what they are capable of supporting in the vast territory, this scarcity is most observed in the low lands near the coasts, where the population is so small, that some places still remain which have never been trodden by the foot of man. From the investigations made at different times concerning the proportion existing between the numbers of the two sexes, in the population of the Republic, it appears that, although in the states nearest the equator, the number of females exceed, the contrary exists in the northern, so that in the total results there is an excess of males, though small. With regard to the usual proportion of deaths & births, in spite of the difficulty of obtaining sufficient data, it seems certain that the former exceeds the latter by one half per cent., giving an annual increase of 114,000 individuals.

Languages.—All that part of the Mexican population which is of the European race, speak Spanish, which may be called the national language of the republic, as it is used by the preponderant part of the population. Among the Indians composing the remains of the tribes inhabiting the country before the conquest, which were the Taltecas, Chickemecos, Acolhuis,

Foreign residents in the Republic.—The number of those who took out letters of security from the minister of relations, in this year (1851), was 5,412, and they were of the following nations :—

Spanish	3,047	Swiss	45
French	803	Spanish American	33
English	504	Belgian	16
German	416	Hollanders	22
North American	397
Italian	129	Total	5,412

It cannot, however, be said that this is the number of foreign residents in the republic, because, although the laws which require the annual renewal of their letters of security are sufficiently severe, it is indubitable that a great part of them do not fulfil this requirement. Calculating their number at 2,000 or 2,300 it follows that not more than 7,700 foreigners now reside in the republic, who are in the proportion of one to one thousand inhabitants.

Agriculture.—This being limited to the production of what is necessary for the consumption of the inhabitants, the portion of the territory cultivated is devoted principally to maize, ferijol, & chile, which constitute in general the only food of the poor class; to wheat, rye, rice, potatoes, beans, garbanza, chicavo or grisante, albenjon, tobacco, indigo, pimento, anise, vanilla, sarsaparilla, vines, olives, flax, fruits, and garden vegetables, bees-wax and silk, may also be considered parts of this branch of wealth, important quantities of which are produced, particularly the latter, in the states of Michoacan, Jalisco, & Guanajuato. With respect to the value of the annual products of Mexico, information is so limited and incomplete, that it is difficult to form an estimate of them. The best statement, as it is the most general, is that found in the Memoir presented in 1817, by the secretary of the consulate of Vera Cruz, Don José M. Quires, which represented the agricultural products of New Spain as then $188,850,128 annually, including $4,997,496 in exports. That sum, in relation to the population, which was that year 5,810,005 persons, gave $24 for each. But this estimate, allowing its exactness at the time, cannot now apply, as there has been a steady though small increase, from that day to this, in agriculture as well as in the other branches of internal wealth in the republic. Taking now in the absence of better data, the present population, and calculating the quantity consumed necessary for their subsistence, at $25 a year for each, equal to half a real per day, it amounts to $191,550,000; and if to this is added the amount of grain for the food of cattle, the timber cut for building and other purposes, cotton, which equals 70,000 to 80,000 quintals, cochineal, which amounts to 35,000 or 40,000 arrobas, flax, silk, wax, and many other raw articles of less importance, the total must now be calculated at not less than $200,000,000 for the agricultural products of the whole republic.

Arts & Trades.—Although the state of the arts is far from prosperous, they have made considerable progress, if we consider the backwardness of the country when emancipated from Spain. Painting, lithography, bookbinding, drawing, sculpture, & engraving on metals, have recently undergone such improvements in Mexico, that they find little to envy among certain nations of Europe. The same may be said of the construction of certain kinds of furniture & carriages, so that the manufacturers of them in Mexico can compete, as well in the quality of the wood as in solidity & elegance, with the best made in the most advanced countries. In plating & jewellery, the Mexican artizans have always displayed much skill, & their work has been appreciated in Europe for its neatness, good taste, & finish. In iron work, brass, & jewellery, great progress has been recently made; & many articles are now made, which a few years ago were absolutely unknown in the country, or could be obtained only from Europe. Very great advances are also daily made in architecture, in ideas of convenience & good taste. In connection with this should be mentioned the cutting & working of all kinds of stone for the construction and adorning of houses. The moulding of wax into figures, representing national costumes, & all sorts of fruit, deserves equal praise. These are highly appreciated by strangers, who have taken numerous collections to Europe to be placed in public & private cabinets. In dyeing, although the art is not perfect, all kinds of dyes are applied to spun & woven cotton, silk, & woollen. In currying, the art of tanning & dressing skins of all kinds, is well known; &, although not with the perfection of other countries, those are prepared which are required in the country, for shoes, saddles, harness, trunks, the dresses worn by some of the country people, & other purposes. Other & minor branches of art have also made some progress under the system of entire liberty which allows foreigners of all classes to practice what kind they please, & great improvements are observable in shoes & clothing compared with what was known thirty years ago. It is true that most of the good establishments of artizans in Mexico are still under the direction of foreigners, but as all the workmen in them are Mexicans, those manufactories are so many practical schools, forming a nursery of the class of persons so important in every well-organized country, who devote themselves to the arts & useful trades, that yield enjoyments & utility to the community. For the study of the fine arts, besides the instruction in mathematics, drawing, & painting, given in some colleges of the states, & private institutions, there is the academy in the capital, named San Carlos, in honor of its founder Charles III., which sustains a high reputation. In it are 327 pupils devoted to the study of mathematics, drawing, painting, sculpture, & engraving; & it also supports five pupils in Europe, for the purpose of perfecting them in their studies, & to return & make themselves useful to the institution & their country. The academy has recently adopted the practice of giving annual exhibitions of all the works executed by the pupils, & there have been seen the great progress made by them with various works sent by different states of the federation.

Manufactures.—The principal products of Mexican industry are brandy, & sugar made from cane, mezcal, made from the juice of the maguey, oil, wine, & brandy made from grapes, earthen & glass wares, paper and spun and woven cotton, silk and woollen. Sugar is made in mills on all the estates where the cane is cultivated, and which are found chiefly in the states of Vera Cruz, Tabasco, Yucatan, Mexico, Guerrero, Michoacan and Guadalajara; & brandy by stills in most of them. Although the ancient & imperfect system is generally pursued, some improvements have begun to be introduced, of which may be cited the apparatus lately put up on the hacienda of La Puga, near Tepic, that of San Carlos, in the Cañeda of Cuautla, & in Silva, four leagues from San Juan Bautista de Tabasco, for sugar-making & distilling brandy. For the making of oil there are already in the capital forty-nine mills, besides those in Tacubaya, Toluca & Puebla. Not only oil is made in them from olives, which nearly supplies the consumption, but from ajonjote, linseed, rapeseed, colwort, higuerola, almonds, cacahuate, small nuts, and finally from calves' & pigs' feet, &c., to oil wheels & machinery. With respect to grape-wine & brandy, although there were vineyards in several states, they are manufactured only in those of Guanajuato, Coahuila, Lower California, Sonora, & Chihuahua, from the last of which are annually made more than 600 barrels of brandy, 300 of wine, & 200 tierces of raisins. For the manufacture of earthen vessels of all kinds there are establishments in the republic, where they are made with much skill, the best in Mexico, Guanajuato, and Guadalajara. In fine pottery, great improvements have been recently made in Puebla, where the business has been carried on from very remote times, in Salamanca, in the state of Guanajuato & lately in the capital a manufactory excels all the rest. There are four establishments for plain glass in the capital, & the states of Mexico and Puebla, the product of which exceeds the consumption. There are eight paper mills in the Federal District, & the states of Mexico, Puebla & Jalisco, which not only supply the demand for the press, but for other purposes, particularly writing-paper equal to that of other countries. The scarcity of linen rags requires most of the paper to be made of cotton, though some is made of linen, and also of the filaments of the maguey. Although many hand-wheel looms are used in making cotton fabrics, as rebozos, mantas and other ordinary articles, there are 62 large establishments moved by machinery, in the Federal District, and the states of Coahuila, Durango, Jalisco, Puebla, Mexico, Queretaro, & Vera Cruz. Although some pretty fine linens are made in them, they are but few, the chief part being hilazas & mantas, which in 1845 amounted to three millions of pounds of the hilazas & a million pieces of the latter. The manufactory of rebozos in the city of Zamora in the state of Morelia, is worthy of particular notice. For woollen fabrics, besides the numerous shops in which are manufactured ordinary cloths & various common articles, there are seen large establishments in the district & the states of Mexico, Queretaro, Zacatecas and the territory of Hoxcala, in which are made cloths, casimeres, carpets, baize, &c., which compete with those imported, both in quality & in price. In spinning & winding silk, more than sixty hand machines are in the capital, Puebla & Guadalajara, & the products are preferred to the foreign. In the capital is a machine by horse-power, on the French plan, which can spin above 100 lbs. a day. About 40,000 lbs. are estimated to be spun in Mexico annually. The only woven silk yet made are some rebozos & bands. All kinds of fancy trimmings are made in Mexico, as buttons, cords, braids, and many ornaments of cotton, wool, & silk; & the best factory is that of the Hopicio for the poor in the capital, where they are as well made as in Europe. Gold & silver thread of all kinds are made, & bugles, spangles, galloon, cords & belts of silver and gold, & bells of silver & copper. Oil-cloths are made, of qualities & patterns equal to foreign. Many other minor articles are also manufactured, to a considerable amount annually. An establishment for stearine candles has been commenced, under an exclusive privilege. According to the estimates of Señor Quiros in 1817, this branch of products amounted to $16,011,818; they are now, probably, not less than $80,000,000 or $90,000,000.

Mining—Gold & Silver.—The production of these precious metals in the republic has reached a degree of prosperity unknown in former times, & it would be further extended but for the high price of quicksilver, so necessary in their extraction. According to a report of the Secretary of the Treasury made to the Chambers, it appears that in the 18 months between Jan. 1st, 1848, & June 1st, 1849, the coinage of gold & silver in the mints, excepting that of Hermosilla, where no coining was then performed, was as follows:—

	Gold.	Silver.	Total.
Chihuahua	....	$332,238	$332,238
Guadalajara	$21,652	938,890	960,542
Guadalupe and Calvo	....	1,045,185	1,045,185
Guanajuato	861,480	10,661,600	11,523,080
Mexico	125,920	2,430,778	2,556,698
San Luis Potosi	....	2,052,268	2,052,268
Zacatecas	....	7,129,920	7,129,920
Durango	25,057	1,488,369	1,508,026
Culiacan	317,307	929,571	1,246,878
	$1,351,416	$27,003,989	$28,355,405

Adding to this amount nine or ten millions of dollars, for the six or six and a half millions which, according to certain data, annually remain to be coined, & which by permission so fraudulently are exported from the coasts of the Pacific or the Gulf of Mexico, & the total product of the mines in those 18 months, exceeded $38,000,000.

Quicksilver.—According to the statements made by the committee appointed by the Junta de Fomente in1844, it appears that there were there 25 sources or mines of this metal in the states Queretaro, Guerrero, Guanajuato, San Luis Potosi, Zacatecas & Jalisco; & several others have since been discovered. The annual product of those worked is calculated at 2,000 or 2,500 quintals, a quantity far below what is needed in working the mines of gold & silver which now consume 14,000 quintals annually. The richest of these mines is that of Guadalajara, in San Luis Potosi, which yields above 1,000 quintals a year. Copper.—Although many mines of this metal exist, the abundance of those of gold & silver prevent speculators from working them. The most profitable of those worked are those of Chihuahua, now abandoned on account of the frequent invasions of the savages; Santa Clara, in Michocaan; Mazapil in Zacatecas, & that of Zomelehuacan, in Vera Cruz. The richest of these are those of Mazapil, which yield from 4,000 to 6,000 quintals annually. Iron.—The principal veins of this metal known are in the states of Mexico, Guerrero, Michoacan, Durango, Jalisco, Oajaca, Puebla, & the territory of Tlaxcala. Forges have been established in different places, as those of San Rafael & Milaflores, near Texcuco & Chalco; that of Guadalupe near Zacualpan;

nat of Santa Maria, in the state of Dojuca; & those of Puebla, Durango & Tlaxcala. As for other mineral products, their value cannot be given for want of data. However, these, added to quicksilver, iron & copper, cannot exceed one million of dollars annually; & this sum, added to the product of gold & silver, makes the total product of the Mexican mines 26,000,000 a year.

Value of Real Estate.—From a report presented to the government by the general tax-office, it appears that the number of country estates in the republic was 13,000 in the year 1848, & their estimated value $720,000,000, while the value of the city estates was $635,000,000. The entire real estate therefore amounted to 1,355,000,000 of dollars.

Foreign Commerce.—The commerce carried on by the republic with other nations on the globe has been limited till now, to receiving those objects of European industry which suffice to satisfy the necessities, luxury or habits of using them, retained by a small part of the inhabitants, giving in exchange a large portion of the gold & silver taken from the mines, & some natural products of the soil; although the want of a regular annual report of the imports & exports, with their value, make it impossible to arrive at precise results. They may be approximately estimated from the exports, which can be most easily ascertained, as they must, in a term of a few years, balance the imports—a fact well known, as otherwise the commerce would be ruinous to one of the parties engaged in it.

The gold & silver exported from all the ports annually, in the prosperous state of the mines, & in view of facts known, may be set down at 21 or 22 millions of dollars; & if to this be added 4 or 5 millions, the approximate value of the exports of cochineal, vanilla, dye-wood, sarsaparilla, jalap, hides, coffee, anise, indigo (sugar on the Pacific), & other minor articles, it results that the entire commerce of the republic amounts to 50 or 52 millions.

Ports of Foreign entry.—(In the Gulf of Mexico.)—Vera Cruz, Tampico, Matamoros, Campeche, Sisal, and San Juan Bautista de Tobasco. (On the Pacific.)—Acapulco, San Blas, Huatulco, Manzanillo & Mazatlan. (In the Gulf of California.)—Guayamas & Altata. The ports for the coasting trade only are the Isle of Carmen, Goatzacoalcos, Alvarado, Tecoluta, Santecomassan, Soto-la-Marina & Tuspan, in the Gulf of Mexico; Tonala on the Pacific; Santa Movia in the Gulf of Tehuantepec; & La Paz in the Gulf of California.

National Mercantile Marine.—This branch of national industry being, in all nations, an unequivocal sign of prosperity or decay, it is not wonderful that it should be far behind in Mexico. From the best evidence, it appears that the entire number of vessels bearing the Mexican flag does not exceed fifty, of which 25 belong to residents of the state of Yucatan. Money.—Although in the republic the pesofuerte, or dollar, consisting of eight reals, is the regulator of transactions of all classes, as in other parts of Spanish America; there are also other pieces of silver, gold & copper, of the following values: Gold.—The onza, or ounce, $16; the media-onza, or half ounce, $8; the quarta de onza, or quarter of an ounce, $4; the octara, or eighth, $2, & the diez-y-seisava, or sixteenth, $1. Silver.—The peso-fuerte, or dollar, 8 reals; the toston, or Medio-peso (half dollar), 4 reals; the peseata, 2 reals; the real sencilla, the medio-real & quarto de real. Copper.—There is but one copper coin, worth an eighth of a real, or the sixty-fourth of a dollar. The law of coinage requires gold of 21 carats, & silver of 10 deneros, or penny-weights of 20 grains. To estimate the value of coin, therefore, it is necessary only to know, that pure gold is 24 carats of 4 grains, & pure silver 12 penny-weights of 24 grains.

Weights & Measures.—Weights.—The quintal is adopted in the republic generally, & it is divided into 4 arobas, of 24 libros or pounds, 16 ounces & 16 adarmes or drachms. Measures of length.—The vara regulates all these, & its length is taken from the Castilian vara of Burgos, according to the model deposited with the Ayuntamiento of Mexico, marked in the year 1721, which is divided into two halves, three-thirds, four-fourths, six-sixths, eight-eighths, thirty-six inches, & forty-eight decios or fingers. Each inch is divided into twelve lines, each finger into nine lines, & each line into twelve puntos, or points. Fifty varas form a measure called cordel, used in measuring land. The Mexican league contains 100 cordeles, or 5,000 varas. 119 33-100 Mexican varas equal 100 metres.

The media-fanega, of 24 cuartillos, is the most common measure for buying & selling seeds at wholesale. Four of these measures make a carga, & its dimensions are as follows, by the Vara of Burgos:—

MEDIA-FANEGA OF 24 CUARTILLOS.

	Pulgados.	Lineas.
Length at the mouth.....	24	2

Breadth " "	14	2

Measures of Weight.—The largest measure for brandy, wine, & other liquors, is the jarva, which contains 18 cuartillos, of 1 pound, or 16 ounces of distilled water at the temperature of its greatest density. Brandy barrels are distinguished into medidos & redoudos. The former contain 262 cuartillos, & the latter 160. The redondo barrel of wine contains 150 cuartillos. Oil is bought & sold at wholesale by weight; but at retail a particular cuartillo is used, containing 17 ounces & 9 drachms of distilled water. For olive oil the same cuartillo is used as for brandy, wines, &c. At the mines the marco is used for gold & silver. The gold marco is divided into 50 castillanos, of 8 tomines of 12 grains. The silver marco has 8 ochoods, of 6 tomines of 12 grains. Assayers, to determine the purity of these two metals, use the same marco. For gold, the castellano is divided into 24 quilates, of 4 granos de ley, each grano equivalent to 50 in weight. For silver, the marco is divided into 12 dineros of 24 granos de ley, each grano being equivalent to 16 in weight. Lapidaries, for the assay of precious stones, use the quilate, which is the tenth of an ounce. Apothecaries use the libra medicinal, which is divided into 12 common ounces of 8 drachms, of 3 scruples, of 24 granos.

Money in Circulation.—Baron Humboldt calculated, in 1803, the value of the money accumulated in Mexico at 55 or 66 millions of dollars; which sum, compared with the population then existing in New Spain, corresponded in proportion of ten dollars for each inhab. Taking this calculation for a basis, & considering the prosperity in mining from that time to this, there is no hazard in saying that the value of the money now in the republic, notwithstanding the great exportation past & present, amounts to 90 or 100 millions of dollars. Although this sum is doubtless sufficient for all the operations of the interior trade, which is very small, as well in agriculture as in manufactures & commerce, the circumstance of the greater part being confined to a few hands on the one side, & on the other the want of confidence, causes the frequent scarcity of the money in circulation, causing the rare phenomena of a country which produces gold & silver so abundantly paying a higher interest on money than in countries not yielding it.

Form of Government.—The form of government of the Mexican republic, established by the constitution and the act of reform, is the popular representative federal. The following states and territories are integral parts of the federation: the States of Chihuahua, Chiapas, Coahuila, Durango, Guanajuato, Mexico, Machoacan, Oajaca, Puebla, Guerrero, Queretaro, San Luis Potosi, Sonora, Sinaloa, Tobasco, Tamaulipas, Vera Cruz, Jalisco, Zacatecas, Nuevo Leon, & Yucatan; & the territories of Colima, Tlaxcala, Lower California, & the Federal District. The general government of the federation is divided into three supreme powers: the legislative, executive, & judicial. The legislative power is in the national congress, divided into two chambers of deputies & senators. The chamber of deputies is composed of members elected by the majority of citizens, & even by minorities, keeping for its basis of election the number of the population, so that for every 50,000 inhabitants, or for each fraction not less than 25,000, a deputy is eligible. To be a deputy it is only required to be 25 years of age, in exercise of the rights of a citizen, excepting only the President of the Republic, the members of the supreme court of justice, the secretaries, & the chief officers of the secretaryships, officers of the treasury whose powers extend throughout the republic, governors of states & territories, archbishops, bishops, provisors or vicars-general, circuit judges & commissaries-general of the treasury & war, for the states & territories in which they are employed.

The chamber of deputies is now composed of 144 members, chosen by the states and territories as follows:—

Chihuahua ..	3	San Luis Potosi.....	7	Yucatan	12
Chiapas.....	3	Sonora.....	2	Guerrero ...	5
Coahuila	2	Sinaloa	3	Federal Districts.....	4

To fill vacancies which may occur, a number of substitute deputies are chosen, equal to that of principals. This chamber is wholly renewed every two years.

Two senators are elected in every state by the people, two in the federal district, & an equal number with that of the states are chosen in turn by the senate, the supreme court of justice, & the chamber of deputies, which decides the election of such as do not obtain the votes of all three, but have been voted for some of them. The senate, therefore, now consists of 66 members. To supply vacancies, an equal number of substitutes are elected. To be a senator, 30 years of age is required, to be in exercise of the rights of a citizen, & besides to have been president or vice-president of the republic, or secretary of despatch more than 6 months, or governor of a state, or a deputy, or twice a state legislator, or a diplomatic agent more than 5 years, or minister of the supreme court of justice, or a judge or magistrate 6 years, or superior chief of the treasury, or general efectivo. This chamber is one-third renewed every two years. In each chamber a quorum is formed by one more than half of the members. The executive power is, by the constitution, vested in a president and four secretaries, elected by him for the despatch of the four principal branches of the public administration, viz., interior & exterior relations, justice & ecclesiastical affairs, the treasury, & war & marine. To be president, it is required to be a native citizen, 35 years of age, & a resident. The secretaries must be natives. The president is chosen every four years, & cannot be elected till after an interval of 4 years.

Judicial Power.—It resides in a supreme court of justice, in three circuit courts, & those of the district. The supreme court is divided into three halls, comprising in all eleven ministers & a fiscal. Besides, for civil & criminal trials of first instance, there are judges and constitutional alcaldes. To be a judge of the supreme court, it is required to be learned in the law, approved by the legislature of the state, a native citizen, or born in some part of America subject to Spain before 1810, & afterwards separated from her, & 5 years a resident. The ministers of the court & fiscal are perpetual.

State Governments.—The state governments, like the general government, are divided into three powers: the legislative, executive, & judiciary. The first is deposited in a legislature, the second in a governor, & the third in the courts established by the particular constitutions of the states. The interior government of the territories reside in a political chief, dependent on the general government of the nation, of a deputation elected by the inhabitants, & the inferior courts necessary for the administration of justice. For the interior administration, the states are divided into districts, counties, or departments & partidos, which are under the charge of prefects, sub-prefects, appointed by the governors. In all towns of any importance there are ayuntanientos, charged with the police of safety & good order, with jurisdiction over the neighboring villages & estates.

Requisitions of the Constitution and Acts of Reform to become citizens of the Republic, & rights enjoyed by them.—Every Mexican, by birth or naturalization, 21 years of age, with honest means of living, & who has not been condemned by a legal process for any infamous crime, is a citizen of the Mexican United States; and his rights as such can be suspended only by becoming a habitual drunkard or gambler, or a vagabond; or of the religious state, by legal interdiction, in virtue of a process for such crimes by which the right of citizenship is lost; & for refusing, without lawful excuse, to serve in public offices or appointment by the people. Every citizen has a right to vote at the popular election, to petition, to meet for the discussion of public business, to belong to the national guard—all according to law.

Personal securities granted by the Constitution to all the inhabitants of the Republic.—Every inhabitant has a right to write, print, & publish his political ideas, without the necessity of a license, revision, or approbation, anterior to publication, under the restriction & responsibilities of the laws. Also to prompt, complete, and impartial justice from the tribunals of the nation, according to the laws. No person can be condemned in the republic but by laws passed & tribunals established before the act for which he is tried. Consequently, all trial by special commission, & every retractive law, are forbidden. The punishment of infamy inflicted on any person, according to law, cannot pass to another person but that of the delinquent. The punishment of confiscation of property is forever forbidden. No one can be deprived of his property, or disturbed in its possession, use, or enjoyment, without indemnification. No one can be deprived of liberty by a governmental act for a larger time than 28 hours, when he must be placed at the dispositions of the competent judges or tribunals. No authority can apply tortures of any kind to an accused person, whatever be the nature or state of the trial. No person may be detained, unless there be probable evidence or indications of his guilt; & in case he has been arrested on indications, he cannot be kept in prison longer than 60 hours. No person shall be allowed to seize houses, papers, or other articles belonging to an individual, unless in cases expressly provided for by law, and in form prescribed. No one can be deprived of the right of having a case decided by arbitrators, whatever be the state of the trial in the tribunals. All the tribunals of the federation are under obligation to protect every individual in his constitutional rights against any attacks of the legislative or executive powers, whether of the federation or of the states. Persons belonging to the military or ecclesiastical class, besides the guarantees granted to all inhabitants, have, by the constitution, the privilege of being tried only by the special tribunals, composed of persons of their own classes.

Religion.—According to the 3d article of the constitution, the religion of the Mexican nation is, and shall perpetually be, the Catholic, Apostolic, Roman. The nation protects it by wise & just laws, & prohibits the exercise of any other.

National Legislation.—It is composed of all the laws & decrees given by the Mexican governments since the independence; of the dispositions of the Spanish government which do not form a code, and are therefore known under the title of Extravagantes; of the laws contained in the Newcot & the Newke compilation; of the Recompilation of the Indies; of all the Fueros, from the fuero-juzgo to the fuero-real; and finally, of the Partidas, which, because they have been published with the commentaries of Gregorio Lopez, some suppose them to be a legar legal. This part of the Spanish legislation is the only one which was in vigor in everything not opposed to its act of independence & form of government; the dispositions which it contains being the leyes escluisidas, without which no letrado nor judge was allowed to give a decision founded on the doctrine of interpretations, nor on any other disposition not comprehended in that catalogue, until the administration of Don Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, with regard to the bases of Tacubaya, at which time one of his ministers, in the exercise of the ample powers which he then held, determined that every sentence should always be founded on a law, canon, or doctrine, with which the jurisprudence of Mexico fell into the chaos of the decretals, & the endless labyrinth of treatises, expositors, & commentators, both of the national and canonical, & Roman law. Besides all these dispositions, which are generally regarded in all the republic, there also the Expedidas of the legislatures of the states, which form their legislation.

The clergy have their special legislations for themselves, consisting of the sacred books, the general and provincial councils, the decretals of pontiffs, and the doctrines of the holy fathers. The corporations of regular clergy have their private constitutions.

The army also has its own code, known as the Ordenanza, to which are added other explanatory or reformatory dispositions by the same. Besides that general Ordinaza of the army, the corps of engineers & artillery have their own particular Ordenanzas. Mining and commerce have also their Ordenanzas, which form their special codes.

The Army.—The whole number of individuals which composes the military class in general, which sustains the supreme government of the republic, may be divided into four great parts, as follows:—1st, the force under arms; 2nd, the generals, chiefs & officers occupied in various other branches of military service; 3rd, the chiefs, officers & troops retired, & on unlimited furloughs; & 4th, persons enjoying military pensions for various causes.

Armed Force.—The number of the force now under arms, including the military colonies, & that part of the national guard which sustains the general government is as follows:—Infantry of the line, 3,632 men; cavalry do., 1,507; active militia, 232; artillery, 658; sappers, 303; military colonies, 1,282; national guard, 1,295; total, 8,909.

The number of chiefs & officers employed in the service of the corps forming the preceding force, is as follows:—In the infantry of the line, 192; cavalry, 66; active militia, 12; artillery 68; sappers, 16; military colonies, 122; national guard, 44; total 520.

Generals, chiefs, & officers of the army in actual service.—Generals of divisions, 2; generals of effective brigades, 25; chiefs & officers of the plana mayor, &c., 32; chiefs & officers employed in the general command is of the states, 151; chiefs & officers of engineers, 25; chiefs & officers of marine, 19; total, 259.

Retired & on Unlimited Furlough.—Retired chiefs & officers, 967; do. with unlimited furloughs, 839; of retired soldiers, 763; total, 2,669.

Military Pensioners.—Widows, orphans, & other pensioners of the military class, is now 1,295.

The National War Marine consists of only one vessel, the brig-schooner Vera Cruz.

Fortresses & Fortified Places.—The fortresses of the republic are three:—the Castle of San Juan de Ulua, that of San Carlos de Perote, & that of San Diego de Acapulco. Although they are constructed with the greatest solidity, the neglected condition in which they have been left for many years, is the principal cause of their being in a ruinous state, particularly the first & last mentioned; so much so, that, according to the report of the minister of war two years ago, a million of dollars would not be sufficient to repair the castle of San Juan de Ulua alone. From his report of the present year it appears that the castle of Acapulco contains 21 pieces of artillery, of various calibre, that of San Carlos de Perote, 16; & that of Ulua 132. The only fortified places are Vera Cruz, & Campeche, whose fortifications consist of a surrounding wall, with a few bulwarks for artillery. The fortification of Campeche is very superior to that of Vera Cruz, on acccount of the superior height & thickness of the walls. According to the above-mentioned report, there are 109 pieces of artillery in Vera Cruz of different calibre, & in Campeche, 158. Some of those pieces, as well as some of those in Acapulco, Perote & Ulua, are dismounted.

National Guard.—Although in some states of the Federation, this institution established by the laws, to give the people the strongest guaranty of their independence & liberty, has not been properly organized, most of them, notwithstanding the obstacles presented by the general state of society, have carried it into practice as far as possible. According to accounts received, although incomplete, of the footing of this part of the armed force of the republic, it may be asserted that it is not less than 50,000 or 60,000 men, which does not seem an exaggerated number, when in the war against the revolted Indians, there have been 16,000 men under arms, & in actual service in the Federal district more than 5,000.

Officers of the General Government.—According to the detailed report of the general direction of rentas, accompanying the report of the minister of the treasury, published July 4th, 1848, the number of all the civil officers & clerks employed at the expense of the treasury, for the service of the offices & other public establishments, including the presidents of the republic, the four secretaries of dispatch, the individuals composing the chambers of congress, diplomatic envoys, consuls, &c., is 2,989. The number of retired officers with & without occupation, jubilados, widows & other pensioners in the civil department, is 958; total, 3,947.

Clergy.—The clerical government is divided among an archbishopric, which is that of Mexico, & eleven bishoprics, viz., those of Puebla, Michoacan, Guadalajara, New Leon, Oajaca, Durango, Yucatan, Chiapas, Sonora, Californias, and the Collegiate of Our Lord of Guadalupe, to which another is to be added in Vera Cruz, with the consent of the Pope. These mitres have 184 prebends. The total number of parishes in the republic is now 1,229, and that of ecclesiastics, 3,223. There are 146 convents of monks, 59 of nuns, & 8 colleges of the Propaganda fide. The monasteries contain 1,139 monks, & the nunneries 1,541 professed nuns, 740 girls, & 879 female servants; & the Propaganda colleges 238 individuals.

Revenues of the Clergy.—The general rents detained to the support of the clergy & of religious worship in the repub., may be divided into four great classes:—1st. Those which belong to the bishops & the canons forming the cabildos of the respective cathedrals; 2d. Those belonging to particular ecclesiastics or chaplains; 3d. Those of the curates and vicars; & 4th. Those of the different religious communities of both sexes. The first of these are principally composed of the taxes generally known by the name of Diezonos & Primiciers (tythes & first fruits), the product of which in former times was very large, as it consisted of the tenth part of all the products harvested in the republic, & the first-born of all the cattle; but this has been lately greatly reduced, as by a law passed on the 27th of October, 1833, it is not obligatory on the agriculturists to pay it. As, however, there are always many persons who, from conscientious motives or other reasons, continue to pay it, it produces a considerable sum every year. This portion of the clergy likewise receive the income of the monies which have been left by devotees, for the annual performance of functions known by the name of "Anniversaries," in which are expended the annual income of those sums. The Collegiate of Our Lord of Guadalupe has also two lotteries, which are drawn monthly, each with the sum of $13,000, several houses, & other capitals recognized by the government. The private ecclesiastics, or chaplains, are sustained with the product of several chaplaincies, which are certain functions performed with this object, by certain pious persons, and which commonly consist in a capital of $3,000, imposed on some property whose income is enjoyed by the chaplain, & of the alms given them by the faithful, that such & such a number of masses may be given to the objects of their devotion. The income of the curates consists of the taxes of the parish on the stole, which are those received for baptisms, marriages, and interments; those for sponsors, & functions ordered by the faithful to be made in churches; & finally the sales novenas, medals, scapulars, relics of saints, wax and other objects used by parishioners. The income of the monks, besides the money for alms received for masses, functions & interments, performed in their churches, comprises also real estates which belong to them. The nunneries, in like manner, are supported by the incomes of large estates, accumulated in the course of time, with the exception of two or three convents which have no property, & live on the charity of pious persons. Besides the rents above mentioned, which belong to the personal of the clergy, there are others in the cathedrals & parishes, proceeding from certain estates or foundations, made for the purpose of paying the expenses called Fuboica, consisting of all articles used in public worship. Although the want of publicity, usually observed in the management of the property & rents of the clergy, make it impossible exactly to fix the value of either, it may be very well calculated approximately, taking for the basis the data known to the public, viz., the total value of the products of agriculture; the annual movement of the population by births, deaths, & marriages; and, finally, the devout practices which still form a custom in the greater part of the inhab. By observing these data attentively, we may assert, without much danger of mistake, that the amount now annually collected by the clergy in the whole republic, from the incomes of tythes, parish taxes, alms, ecclesiastical functions, and the sale of various objects of devotion, amounts to at least eight or ten millions of dollars annually. With regard to the estates belonging to a portion of the clergy, some writers have pretended to fix it at half of all the real estates of the nation, & others at one-third; but much reliance cannot be given to such statements, because they are founded on no certain data. It may, however, be declared, that the amount of income of the clergy from foundations of chaplaincies, & other pious foundations, & rural and urban estates, which in whole or in part belong to the different religious corporations, including the Cofrodias & Archicofrodias (which, although they do not really form a part of the clergy, have for their object their support), rises at the present time to an enormous sum, in spite of the great reduction they are said to have suffered in late years. In the district of Mexico alone, whose estates cannot be estimated at less than 50 millions of dollars, more than half of them belong to the clergy. The product of these being added to the tithes, parish taxes, &c., we may be assured that the whole income of the clergy in the republic amounts to 18 or 20 millions annually.

Annual estimate of the government of the Republic.—According to the reports of the ministers' & other public official docum'ts, the expenses of the govt. in 1849 were:

Estimate of the ministry of war and marine		$6,280,449
" relations		870,004
" justice		426,220
" the treasury	$1,689,154
Annual payment on the foreign debt ($51,208,250), at 5 per cent.	2,560,412
Do., on the part of the home debt drawing interest, and which has funds assigned for its payment, not including the credit of the Mineria	1,300,000
	5,549,566
	$13,126,239

Note.—Here are not included the interest of the debt anterior to the independence, which, in its greater part, draws 5 or 6 per cent. per annum, & although the payment is not urgent, increases the total national debt to $600,000 or $700,000 a-year. A law has recently been passed, intended to reduce the payments of this part of the debt to three-fifths of the above sum.

Revenue.—As almost the whole income proceeds from indirect taxes, the amount cannot be ascertained, as they are exposed to changes; it may be set down as follows from the data of past years:

	$		$
Import duties	4,000,000	Mints	100,000
Export "	450,000	National lottery	60,000
Tonnage "	60,000	Stamped paper	150,000
1 per ct. increased imports	140,000	Pawnbrokers	30,000
2 per cent. average.	210,000	Taxes on the assay of silver in the districts and territories, imposed on inheritances, tolls, letters of security, patents of navigation, & other smaller branches.	229,000
International duties.	500,000
Duties on money at the ports	300,000
Contingents of the states	1,011,000
Rent of tobacco	650,000
Nuipes	20,000
Post Office	90,000
Direct taxes of the district and territories	450,000	Total	8,500,000
Alcabala on sales of real estate	50,000

It is therefore evident by comparing the amount of the receipts & expenses, that, even if there were no deduction in the former, the annual deficit of the public treasury would be about 5 millions of dollars.

The Revenues of the States, like those of the Republic, are composed of certain direct & indirect imposts; the former on persons, estates, & professions, & the latter on articles of consumption & the movement of the products of agriculture, & national & foreign industry, inheritances, the transfer of real estate, & the working of mines in the mineral states. Although these revenues, if well managed, might be sufficient to meet all the expenses of the respective states, the want of plan in the administration, & above all, the want of knowledge of statistics, which are the basis of every regular system of imposts, keep the state treasuries, as well as the national, in a very strict state of distress, & with few exceptions, as Oajaca & Mexico, make the incomes fall short of the expenditures.

National Debt.—The present national debt of Mexico amounts to $133,524,242. It is div. into the exterior & interior debts, as follows:—Exterior.—According to the conversion ordered by the government, March 5th, 1846, & admitted by the creditors, this part of the debt was reduced to a single denomination, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, from July 1st, 1846, on the capital of $51,208,250. Interior.—To the cultivators of tobacco, capital & dues to 1849, $1,019,971.

Public Instruction.—In spite of the efforts made in this department, by the state authorities & the municipalities, to improve & multiply establishments for this part of education in the republic, it is in a very sad condition, as it may be asserted, that at least three-fourths of the inhabitants are still ignorant that there is a thing in the world called a spelling-book. However, great improvements are visible within a few years; since, besides numerous establishments paid by the state governments & municipalities for the poor, there are many in all considerable towns, in which youth of the middle class are not only taught to read, write, & cipher, & Spanish grammar, & Padre Ripalda's catechism by memory; but they also acquire some notions of orthography, logic, ideology, mathematics, book-keeping, geography, universal history, drawing, & languages; notions which, although not sufficient for thorough education, prepare them to enter upon the study of each, or at least not appear entirely ignorant in society. The want of data prevents an accurate statement of the number of pupils; but an approximate idea may be formed from the condition of the capital, in which there are 129 establishments, with 7,151 pupils of both sexes, which is more than 4 per cent. of the population. Secondary Education.—The establishments dedicated to this branch consist of the conciliary seminaries, supported and directed by the clergy; the national colleges in the capital of the republic, supported, in part, by their own funds, and in part by appropriations made by the general government; & the colleges & institutes in the states, supported at the expense of their governments.

Of the first class mentioned, there are ten in the capitals of the bishopries; &, although by the laws of their institution, the principal studies are, Latin, philosophy, canonicals, Roman law, & scholastic & dogmatic theology, & morals, some of them have professorships of natural laws, the law of nations, civil law, & French & English languages. According to the report of the Minister of Justice, there were 289 students in these colleges in Mexico, in Puebla 409, Michoacan 556, Guadalajara 708, Nuevo Leon 120, Oajaca 372, Yucatan 224, Durango 176, Chiapas 170, & in Sonora an unknown number.

Of the second class of colleges, there are 6 in the capital: viz., San Ildefonzo, San Gregorio, San Juan de Letran, the School of Medicine, the College of Mining, & the Military College.

In the two first the following studies are pursued: course of grammar (Spanish, Latin, & French), course of philosophy, viz., ideology, logic, metaphysics, ethics, mathematics & elementary physics, chronology, cosmography, geography & political economy; course of jurisprudence, comprehending natural law, law of nations, public law, principles of legislation, elements of Roman, civil, criminal, & canon law; course of ecclesiastical science, comprehending ecclesiastical history, theological theses, Sacred writings, theology, study of the Fathers, & ecclesiastical discipline; & course of Humanities, embracing the ancient & general history of Mexico, the reading & analysis of ancient & modern classics, critical compositions on the same, & literary compositions on the respective professions of the students, all in conformity with the general plan of studies contained in the law of Aug. 8, 1843. In San Juan de Latran, the same courses are pursued, except that of ecclesiastical science. There are, besides, in the three colleges, professorships of English & drawing; in those of San Juan de Latran & San Gregorio, schools of first letters, & academies of gymnastics; & in that of San Gregorio professorships of Greek & Mexican, and an academy of instrumental and vocal music. In the School of Medicine are courses of physics, chemistry, anatomy, physiology, pathology, clinics, materia medica, surgical operations, obstetrics, legal medicine, and pharmacy. In the Mining College are courses of Spanish, French, English, & German languages, ideology and logic, painting, drawing, mathematics, physics, mechanics applied to mining, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, cosmography, geodesy, geography, botany, & zoology. In the Military College the courses are divided into two classes, military & facultative instruction. The first comprehends the study of the tactics of infantry, cavalry of the line & light artillery, instruction of guerillas in cavalry, general ordenanza of the army & horsemanship; and the second embraces mathematics, topography, analytical mechanics, experimental physics, permanent & field fortification, the attack & defence of places, military reconnoissances, castrametation, principles of artillery, astronomical, political, & historical geography, linear drawing of machines & architecture, & French & English languages. The number of alumni in these six colleges the present year, is as follows: San Juan de Letran 265, San Gregorio 550, San Ildefonso, 184, School of Medicine 162, College of Mines 290, Military College 105. Of the colleges supported by the state governments, there are, in Mexico 1, Puebla, 1, Oajaca 1, & 2 of preparatory studies in Tlaxcala and Tehuantepec; in Vera Cruz 2, Yucatan 2, & a nautical school in Campeche; in Michoacan 1, & 2 of preparatory studies in Patzcuaro & Zamora; in Guanajuato 1, & 2 preparatory studies in Celaya & Acamburo; in Zacatecas 1, Guadalajara 1, San Luis Potosi 1, & Queretaro 1. Besides these, there are several colleges in different parts of the republic, in which nearly the same branches are taught as are required by the plan of Aug. 18, 1843.

Public & Private Libraries.—Of the former there are in the capital 3, viz., that of the Cathedral, containing more than 13,000 books & manuscripts; that of the University, with above 9,000; & that of San Gregorio, with more than 4,000. Besides these, there are several libraries and reading-rooms belonging to private persons, the books in which may be read by the public, on paying subscriptions. In Puebla is also a public library, supported by the government, which has been ranked with the fine library of Bishop Vasquez. Although the number of public libraries is small, it is not so with private ones, containing from 200 to 1,000 volumes; so that it may be said, that in all Spanish America, there is no other country containing so many & so rich collections of books & instruments for the study of the sciences. Among the libraries designed for the use of colleges, that of San Juan de Letran deserves notice. It contains from 11,000 to 12,000 volumes; that of San Ildefonso containing 8,361.

Scientific & Literary Academies.—The Mexican Geographical & Statistical Society is in the capital, as is the Society of Chemists. In Guadalajara is the Society of Sociedad Filvoatrica. Of Literary Societies there are in the capital the Lyceum of Natural History, and the Literary Academy of San Juan de Letran. In Guadalajara the Falange de Estrudo, & in Yucatan the Academy of Science & Literature. There are others also in Queretaro & Morelia.

National Museum.—This is in the university of the capital of the republic, & was established in 1822, and occupies two large saloons & a part of the patio of that edifice. Although it has not received the aid, which in all civilized nations is given to establishments of this kind, & neither of the rooms offer all the conveniences necessary to the proper display of the multitude of objects which it contains, it embraces many various collections of natural history, antiques, & the arts & manufactures. Among the antiques, besides statues, heads, relievos, ornaments, models, & instruments of music & war, found by digging, there are numerous manuscripts in hieroglyphics anterior to the conquest, worthy of the attention & study of antiquaries. Among the objects in the fine arts, the colossal equestrian statue of Charles 4th, deserves particular mention, being highly appreciated by all intelligent travellers who have visited the republic, & reflecting great honor on Mexican sculpture.

Criminal Statistics.—For the want of data the number of criminals annually apprehended in the republic cannot be given, though so important to the state of morals & education. Some idea, however, may be formed from the state of the capital, where, according to the report of the minister of justice in 1849, 21,505 persons of both sexes were taken to the public prisons, of whom 4,944 were set at liberty as innocent, 7,850 were sentenced, 121 sent to their respective quarters, & 8,590 to the ex-acordada, without decisions. Of these 6,017 were for quarrels, 3,023 theft, 2,892 excesses, 3,097 drunkenness, 1,135 vagabonds, 2,167 violating police laws, 726 incontinence, 181 wounding, 241 swindling, 389 suspicion, 121 rape, 140 fugitives, 230 homicide, 27 coiners, 22 pandering, 40 adultery, 511 carrying arms, & three others for smaller crimes. The 3,023 arrested for theft do not show the number of new thieves in the capital, for there is a famous band of robbers, who direct their robberies even from the prisons, on other cities and the highways, whether through defect in the laws, or want of energy in the judges, or the abandonment of the prisons, they escape from them & repeat their crimes.

Chronological Notice of the different Governments which have existed in Mexico since the Conquest to the present time.—When the conquest of the Mexican empire had been completed by Don Fernando Cortes, after the occupation of the capital on the 13th of August, 1721, that celebrated chief devoted himself to the establishment of public administration in the conquered countries, governing them with the title of captain general & governor, which was granted him by Charles V., on the 15th of October, 1522, & confirmed in 1525, with the addition of Adelantado of the southern coast of New Spain. In 1527, the Licentiate Luis Ponce de Leon, arrived in the colony, with the office of resident judge, & resumed beside that of governor, leaving to Cortes that of captain general; but on his death, which happened sixteen days after his arrival, the charge of the government & residence passed to the Licentiate Marcos de Aguilar, who also died in seven months, leaving the royal official treasurer, Alonzo de Estrado, nominated to succeed him. Although he at first took Captain Gonzalo de Sandoval as his associate, he afterwards remained alone with the approbation of the court of Spain, & administered the government until the year 1528, when the first Audiencea arrived with Nuño de Guzman. This first Audiencêa governed until the year 1531, when the second arrived, presided by Don Sebastian Ramirez de Fuen-Leal, archbishop of Santo Domingo, which had charge of the government until the year 1735, when the vice-royal authority was established in the colony.—First Viceroy. Don Antonio de Mendoza, Count of Tendille, governed from 1535 to 1550.—2. Don Luis de Velasco, gentleman of the house of the Constable of Castille, from 1550 to 1564, when he died.—3. Don Gaston de Peralta, Marquis of Falces, from October 1566, to March 1567. The Audiencêa governed interim during eight months. —4. Don Martin de Enriquez de Almanza, from November 1568, to 1580.—5. Don Lorenzo Xuarez de Mendoza, Count of Coruna, from October 1580, to June 1583, when he died. The Audiencêa governed till Sept. 35th 1584.—6. Don Pedro Moya de Contreras, Archbishop of Mexico, from September 1584, to October 1585.—7. Don Alonzo Manréque de Zúñiga, Marquis of Villa-Manrique, from October 17th, 1585, to Feb. 1590.—8. Don Luis de Velasco (son of the second viceroy), from Feb. 1590, to Nov. 1595.—9. Don Gaspar de Zúñiga y Acevedo, Count of Monterey, from Nov. 5th, 1595, to Oct. 27th, 1603.—10. Don Juan de Mendoza y Luna, Marquis of Montesclaro, from Oct. 27th 1603, to July 2d, 1607.—11. Don Luis de Velasco (for the second time, when he received the title of Marquis of Salinas), from July 2d, 1607, to June 19th 1611.—12. Don Fray Garcia, of the order of preachers, Archbishop of Mexico, from June 19th, 1611, to Feb. 22d, 1612, when he died. The royal Audiencêa governed eight months.—13. Don Diego Fernandez de Cordova, Marquis of Guadulcâzar, from Oct. 25th, 1612, to March 14th, 1621, when he went to Perie. The royal Audiencêa governed three months.—14. Don Diego Carrillo de Mendeza y Pimental, Marquis of Galves, Count of Priego, from Sept. 21st, 1621, to Nov. 1st, 1624.—15. Don Rodrigo Pachêo y Osorio, Marquis of Cerraloo, from Nov. 3d, 1624, to Sept 16th, 1635.—16. Don Lope Dias de Almendaviz, Marquis of Cadereyta, from Sept. 16th, 1635, to Aug. 28th, 1640.—17. Don Diego Lopez Pacheo Cabrera y Bobadilla, Duke of Escalona & Marquis of Villena, from Aug. 28th, 1640, to June 10th, 1642.—18. Don Juan Palafox y Mendoza, Bishop of Puebla, from June 10th, 1642, to November 23d, of the same year.—18. Don Garcia Sarmiento de Sotomayor, Count of Salvatierra, Marquis of Sobroso, from November 23d, 1642, to May 13th, 1648.—20. Don Marques de Torres y Rueda, Bishop of Yucatan, from May 13th, 1648, to April 22d, 1649, when he died. The Royal Audiencêa governed fifteen months.—21. Don Luis Euveque de Guzman, Count of Aloa de Liste, from June 28th, 1650, to Aug. 15th, 1653.—22. Don Francisco Fernandez de la Crera, Duke of Albuquerque, from Aug. 15th, 1653, to Sept. 16th, 1660.—23. Don Juan de Seyba y de la Sevda, Marquis of Seyba & of Ludvada, & Count of Baños, from Sept. 16th, 1660, to June 29th, 1664.—24. Don Diego Osovio de Escobar y Slamas, Bishop of Pueblo, from June 29th, 1664, to Oct. 15th of the same year.—25. Don Sebastian de Toledo, Marquis of Manceva, from Oct. 15th, 1664, to Dec. 8th, 1673.—26. Don Pedro Nuño Colonde Portugal y Castro, Duke of Veraguas, Marquis of Jamaica, from Dec. 8th, 1763, to the 8th of the same month & year, when he died.—27. Don Fray Puyo de Revera Enriquez, of the order of St. Augustin, Archbishop of Mexico, from Dec. 13th, 1673, to Nov. 30th, 1680.—28. Don Tomas Antonia Manoique de la Cerda, Marquis of Sugunor, & Count of Panedes, from Nov. 30th, 1680, to Nov. 1686.—29. Don Melchior Portocurrero Sazo de la Lega, Count of Monclova, from Nov. 30th, 1686, to Nov. 20th, 1688.—30. Don Gasper de la Cerda Sandoval Silva y Mendozo, Count of Galve, from Nov. 20th, 1688, to Feb. 27th, 1690.—31. Don Juan de Ortega Montuñez, Bishop of Michoacan, from Feb. 27th, to Dec. 18th, 1696. —32. Don José Saomiento y Villadaves, Count of Montezuma & Tula, from Dec. 18th, 1696, to Nov. 4th, 1701. —33. Don Juan de Ortega y Montañez (the second time), from Nov. 4th, 1701, to Nov. 27th, 1702.—34. Don Francisco Fernandez de la Cueva Enriquez, Duke of Albuquerque, from Nov. 27th, 1702, to Jan. 15th, 1711. —35. Don Fernando de Alencastre Novoña y Silva, Duke of Linares, from Jan. 15th, 1711, to Aug. 15th, 1716.—36. Don Juan Ruiz de Apodeca, (afterwards Count Venadilo), Sept. 20th, 1816, to July 5th, 1821, his death.—62. Don Francisco Novella, Brigadier of the royal troops, July 5th, 1821, to Sept. 24th, 1821.— 63. Don Juan O'Donagu, who arrived at Vera Cruz, July 21st, 1821, to receive the government as viceroy, but having made a treaty with Don Augustin Iturbide on the 24th of August following, in the city of Cordova, by which he accepted the plan of independence proclaimed by him in Iguala, he did obtain possession of his office, although he made his entry into Mexico on the 26th of September, where he died on the 8th of October following. The capital being occupied the 27th Sept., 1821, by the army under Generalissimo Don Agustin Iturbide, a junta was called of notable persons, who the following day published a solemn act, solemnly declaring the independence of the nation, to be governed according to the basis established in the plan of Iguala & the treaties of Cordova. That important act having been recognized & approved, which placed this ancient colony of Spain among free and sovereign nations, the supreme executive power of the nation, under the different forms of government which it has adopted to the present time, has been successively exercised by the following individuals.

Regency.—The first which bore this name was composed of Generalissimo Iturbide, Juan O'Donaju, Manuel de la Bárcena, Isidro Yañez, & Manuel Velasques de Leon. It governed from Sept. 28th, 1821, to April 11th, 1822, when two of its members were exonerated from the offices by the first general congress. The second, composed of Generalissimo Iturbide, Isidro Yañez, Miguel Valentin, Count de Casa of Henas, & Brigadier Nicolas Bravo, held power from April 11th, to May 18th, 1822, on the night of which Iturbide was proclaimed emperor by a part of the people of the capital.

Empire.—Generalissimo Iturbide proclaimed Emperor under the title of Augustin I., governed from May 19th, 1822, till March 19th, 1823, when he abdicated the crown, in consequence of the revolution which proclaimed the republican government.

Provisionary Government.— While they proceeded to form the new constitution of the republic, the power was deposited in a junta called the supreme executive power, composed of Generals Bravo, Guadalupe Victoria, & Pedro C. Negrete as principals, & Don J. Mariano Michelena, & Don Miguel Dominguez as substitutes. It governed from April 1st, 1823, till Oct. 10th, 1824.

Federal Republic.—General Guadalupe Victoria, as constitutional president, under the constitution sanctioned & published Oct. 4th, 1824, governed from the 10th of that month till April 1st, 1829.—General Vicente Guerrero, president from that time till Dec. 18th, that year, when he took command of the army.—Don José María Bocanegra, president ad interim, Dec. 18th to 23d, 1829.—Don Pedro Velez, president of the supreme court of justice, associate of Don Luis Quintanar & Don Lucas Alaman, 23d to 31st Dec., 1829.—Gen. Anastasia Bustamente, as vice-president from Dec. 31st, 1829, to Aug. 14th, 1832, when he retired to take command of the army.—Gen. Melchor Muzquiz, president ad interim, Aug. 14th, to Dec. 24th, 1832.—Don Manuel Gomez Pedraza, president from Dec. 24th, 1832, till April 1st, 1833.—Don Valentin Gomez Farias, vice-president from April 1st, to June 17th, 1833.—Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, president from June 17th to July 5th, 1833, when he took command of the army.—Don Valentin Gomez Farias, vice-president, July 5th to Oct. 29th, 1833.—Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, president, Oct. 27th to Dec. 15th, 1833.—Don Valentin Gomez Farias, vice-president from Dec. 15th, 1833, to April 24th, 1834.—Gen. Santa Anna, president, April 24th, 1834, to Jan. 28th, 1835.—Gen. Miguel Barragan, president ad interim, from Jan. 28th, 1835, to Feb. 27th, 1836, when he left the presidency on account of a severe disease, of which he died March 1st, following.—Don José Justo Corro, president ad interim, Feb. 27th, 1836, to April 19th, 1837.

The eight following counties have been organized since 1850, viz.: Cheboygan, Emmett, Grand Traverse, *Marquette, *Midland, *Montcalm, *Newago, & *Tuscola. The other 24 counties are still unorganized, viz.: Alcona, Arenac, Alpena, Antrim, Calcaska, Charlevoix, Clare, Crawford, Delta, Gladwin, Iosco, Isabella, Lake, Manistee, Mecosta, Missaukee, Montmorenci, Oceola, Ogemaw, Otsego, Oscoda, Presque Isle, Roscommon, and Wexford.

Physical Features, &c.—The surface of the lower or southern peninsula is generally level, having few elevations which may be denominated hills. The interior is gently undulating, rising gradually from the lakes to the centre of the peninsula. This central region may be regarded as a table land, elevated about 300 feet above the level of the lakes, covered with fine forests of timber, oak plains & prairies. Along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan are sand hills thrown up by the winds into fantastic forms generally quite barren & naked. The part lying between Lake Huron & Saginaw bay is low & swampy. No part of the United States is better supplied with fish, aquatic fowl & game.

There were in this state in 1850, 1,929,110 acres of land improved; & 2,454,780 of unimproved in farms; cash value of farms, $51,872,446, & the value of implements & machinery, $2,891,371. Live Stock,—horses, 58,506; asses & mules, 70; milch cows, 99,676; working oxen, 55,350; other cattle, 119,471; sheep, 746,435; swine, 205,847; value of live stock, $8,008,734.

Agricultural Products, &c.—Wheat, 4,925,888 bush.; rye, 105,871; Indian corn, 5,641,420; oats, 2,866,056; barley, 75,249; buckwheat, 472,917; peas & beans, 74,254; potatoes, 2,359,897; sweet potatoes, 1,177; value of products of the orchard, $132,650; produce of market gardens, $14,738; pounds of butter made, 7,065,878; of cheese, 1,011,492; maple sugar, 2,439,794; molasses, 19,823 gallons; bees wax & honey, 359,232; wool, pounds produced, 2,043,283; flax, 7,152; silk cocoons, 108; hops, 10,663 pounds; of tobacco, 1,245; hay, tons of, 404,934; clover seeds, 16,989 bushels; other grass seeds, 9,285; flax seed, 519 bushels; and were made, 1,654 gallons of wine, value of home-made manufactures $340,947; of slaughtered animals $1,328,327.

Of the northern peninsula, Mr Schoolcraft says,—"Portions of it are the mere development of sublime scenery which pertains to that comparatively elevated portion of the continent. Mountains & lakes, plains, rivers, & forests, spread over it with a boldness of outline which may be said to constitute almost a peculiar type of North American geography. This division embraces the mineral region. It is of little value for the uses of agriculture. The interior abounds in small lakes. On the shore of Lake Superior are several large bays & good harbors. Recent explorations here have discovered immense deposits of rich copper ore; on the southern shore of Lake Superior is a series of lofty bluffs & isolated rocks, having the appearance of ruins, tottering walls, & caverns. La Chapelle or the Arched Rock is a beautiful specimen of this character, as are the Pictured Rocks, &c. There are also several picturesque cascades."

The southern peninsula of Michigan is drained by several large rivers & numerous smaller streams, which, rising in the interior, pass off in easterly, westerly, & northerly directions into the lakes. Raisin & Huron rivers flow into Lake Erie, Rouge river into Detroit Strait, Clinton & Black Rivers into the strait of St Clair, Saginaw river formed by the junction of Titibawasse, Flint & Cass rivers enters Saginaw bay. Thunder bay, Cheboigan river, & some smaller streams fall into Lake Huron. St. Joseph, Grand, Kalamazoo and Maskegon rivers flow into Lake Michigan. Many small lakes of pure water, stocked with fish of fine quality, are found in the interior. This state borders on 4 of the great lakes, viz., Erie, Huron, Michigan, & Superior. The principal rivers of the Upper peninsula, are Ontonagon, Huron, Menomonee, Montreal, St. Mary, Eagle, Cedar, White Fish, Black, Sturgeon, Rapid & Manistie. The principal islands are Drummond, Sugar, St. Joseph, Bois Blanc, Mackinaw, Manitou & Beaver islands, in Lakes Huron & Michigan; Isle Royale & the Apostles, in Lake Superior.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in this state in 1850, 15 woollen factories, with a capital of $94,000, employing 78 males & 51 females, manufacturing 141;570 yds. of cloth, valued at $90,242; 1 establishment making pig iron, with a capital of $15,000, employing 25 persons, producing 660 tons of pig iron, &c., valued at $21,000; 63 establishments with a capital of $195,450 employing 337 persons, & making 2,070 tons of castings, &c., valued at $279,697;—231 flouring & grist m., 477 saw m., 45 tanneries; 57 printing offices, 58 newspapers, 3 daily, 2 semi-weekly, 47 weekly, 2 semi-monthly, & 3 monthly publications. Aggregate number of copies published, 3,247,736. Capital invested in manufactures, $5,764,645; value of manufactured articles, $10,407,285. There were, Jan. 1854, 4 railroads, having 601 miles in operation.

The principal places in the state are Detroit, the metropolis, Monroe, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Adrian, Jackson, Marshall, Kalamazoo, Lansing the capital, St. Josephs, Mackinac, Grand Haven, & Sault St. Marie. There were in 1854, 6 banks & 1 branch, with an aggregate capital of $1,084,718. Exports (1852) in American vessels of domestic produce, to the value of $100,436; in foreign vessels, $81,930; of foreign produce in American vessels, $4,338; in foreign vessels, $8,448. Total value, $145,142. Imports in American vessels, $191,976; foreign vessels, $4,264. Total value, $196,240. Tonnage, 1853, 4,591,284.

Education, &c.—University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, St. Phillip's college near Detroit, & the seminary of St. Thomas. The whole having, in 1850, 308 students. There were also 37 academies, 1,619 pupils; 2,714 schools, 110,455 scholars; 417 libraries, aggregate number of vols., 107,943. There is a state normal school at Ypsilanti. An asylum for the blind, deaf and dumb at Kalamazoo, and for the insane at Flint. The state prison is at Jackson.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 66 Baptist churches, 2 Christian, 29 Congregational, 10 Dutch Reformed, 25 Episcopal, 1 Free, 7 Friends, 12 Lutheran, 119 Methodist, 1 Moravian, 72 Presbyterian, 44 Roman Catholic, 3 Union, 7 Universalist, & 1 other sect, the whole having 399 churches. Total value of church property, $723,600.

Government.—The governor is elected by a plurality of votes, & a lieut.-governor is chosen in the same manner. The senators, 32 in number, are chosen for two years. The representatives, 72 in number, are chosen for the same time, & are, with the senators, apportioned among the counties according to the number of white inhabitants. The judges of the Supreme Court are elected for the term of six years. Judges of inferior courts are elected by the people for four years. Every white male citizen over 21 years of age, who has resided three months in the state, & ten days in the district next preceding an election, has the right of suffrage. The legislature meets bienially at Lansing.

The French built a fort, & made a settlement at Sault St. Marie in 1647, & subsequently at Mackinac. By the treaty of peace between Great Britain and France in 1763, this country came into the possession of the English. The post at Detroit was resigned to the United States by the English in 1789. In 1805 this state was erected into a distinct territory, & in 1836 admitted into the Union. The original constitution was formed in 1835, & the present one in 1850.

MICHIGAN, Lake Michigan, Ind. and Wisconsin. One of the five great lakes of North America. It lies between 41° 38′ 58″ & 46° N. lat., & between 84° 41′ & 87° 8′ W. lon. In the northern parts it communicates with Huron by the straits of Michilimackinac or Mackinac, about 4 ms. in width in its narrowest part, & by which & its northern part it separates the two peninsulas of Michigan. Michigan lake is the largest lake that lies wholly within the United States, being 330 miles long, & on an average 60 miles broad, containing 16,981 square miles, or 10,868,000 acres. It has Green bay, a large branch on the N.W.; & on the E. Grand Traverse bay, & Little Traverse bay. It is estimated to be on an average 900 feet deep, & is elevated about 300 feet above tide-water. It has few good harbors. On the W. side are those of Chicago, Milwaukee, & Greenbay. On the E. side are Michigan city, St. Joseph, at the mouth of St. Joseph river, & Grand Haven, near the mouth of Grand river. It is navigated by many large vessels, & several steamboats, which ply from Buffalo to Lake Erie & Chicago, stopping at the intermediate places. It affords great facilities for transportation. The lake has pure & clear water, and abounds with excellent fish. There are several islands in its N. part. It has 23 light-houses & 4 beacons on its islands & coasts. The Illinois and Michigan canal connects the navigable waters of the Illinois r. with Lake Michigan.—(See Lakes, Commerce of.)

Italy, cap. of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, in a wide fertile plain, between the Olona & Saveso rivs. Lat. of observatory 45° 28′ 1″ N., lon. 9° 11′ 20″ E. Elevation above the Adriatic 394 feet. Mean temp. of year 55° .2; winter 36°; summer 73° Fahr. Pop. 161,966, including a garrison of 8,000 men & 17,000 strangers. It is the residence of the viceroy, the seat of government, & a bishop's see. Milan is nearly of a circular shape enclosed on three sides by a wall, surrounded by broad ramparts, nearly 8 m. in circumference, & entered by 10 gates. It has 6,000 houses & 79 churches. Chief objects of interest, the cathedral, an imposing Gothic structure of white marble, in a square near the centre of the city. It was begun in 1386, & is still unfinished: it is adorned by upwards of 5,000 statues, & for the delicacy of its carved work, is unrivalled in the world; length 485 feet, breadth 252 feet, height of dome 355 feet. The church of St. Ambrogio, in which the Emperors of Germany were crowned; the refectory of the old Dominican convent, attached to the church of Sta. Maria della Gracia, in which is the famous "last supper" of da Vinci. The palace of the viceroy, the city hall, archbishop's palace, & the mint. Among the many benevolent institutions are an hospital with 2,300 beds, open to the sick poor of all nations, lunatic, orphan, & foundling asylum, deaf & dumb schools, work-houses, & a general loan bank. The finest gate is the Arco della Pace, a modern sculptured marble arch, at the end of the Simplon road; near it is the Piazzi d'Armi, an open space for the exercise of troops, and extensive barracks; an amphitheatre, and many private palaces. The favorite promenade is the Corso; there are 9 theatres, including the famous opera house, La Scala. The chief Scientific & educational establishments are the royal academy of arts & sciences, formerly palace of the Brea, with a library of 100,000 vols., valuable MSS., & pictures; an astronomical and magnetical observatory, and botanic garden; the Ambrosian library with 60,000 vols. & 15,000 MSS., the Trivulzio library, 20,000 vols. & 2,000 MSS., four gymnasia, a normal school, school of medicine and surgery, several learned societies, and a military geographical institute which publishes excellent maps. Milan is the largest book mart in Italy; from its position on the great routes across the Alps, and its connection by canals with the principal rivers in Italy, it is favorably situated for trade. It is connected by r. r. with Venice. Treviglio, 20 m. E.N.E, and Monza, 9 m. N.E. Its manufs. comprise silks, velvet, ribbons, lace, cotton, carpets, jewellery, glass paper, and porcelain; it has a royal tobacco manufactory. Milan is very ancient, it was founded in 400 B.C., & was inhabited & embellished by many of the Roman emperors. Virgil studied here, & it is the birth-place of many popes & eminent men. It was cap. of a republic in 1056; in the end of the 14th century it was made cap. of the duchy of Milan; it passed successively under the dominion of Spain & Austria; was taken by the French in 1796 & 1800. In 1805 they made it cap. of the kingdom of Italy. It was restored to Austria in 1815. Pop. of prov. 1850, 604,512.

MILWAUKEE, city, & capital of Milwaukee co., Wis., 83 E. Madison, 805 W. Situated on both sides of the Milwaukee r., near its entrance into Lake Michigan, & at the starting point of the Milwaukee & Mississippi r. r., & of several others, forming an extensive system. In front of the city is a bay or indentation of the lake, extending 6 ms. from the N. to the S., and from 2 to 3 m. in breadth, affording a safe anchorage in all cases, except in strong easterly gales. The harbor is now being improved, & will doubtless become one of the best on the lake. The river affords an extensive water power, capable of giving motion to 200 run of mill-stones. The city is built upon beautiful slopes, descending toward the river from the E. & the W., & the buildings are put up with much taste, the material employed is mostly a cream-colored brick of superior quality, which are manufactured here in large quantities. The city contains a court house, city hall, a U. S. land office, the university institute, Milwaukee female college, 3 academies, 30 churches,—2 Baptist, 2 Congregational, 3 Episcopal, 1 Lutheran, 6 German Protestants, 5 Methodist, 5 Presbyterian, 5 Roman Catholic, & 1 Universalist,—3 orphan asylums, extensive ranges of stores, a bank, several insurance offices; 10 printing offices, issuing 7 daily, 9 weekly or tri-weekly newspapers, & 2 monthly publications. Value of manufs. exceeds $2,000,000 annually; tonnage 1853, 10,009 tons. Its exports of agricultural produce, lumber &c., is immense. The city is lighted with gas, & is well supplied with good water. Near the N. line of the city, & at the head of river navigation, a dam has been built, & 5 large flouring mills erected; a woollen fac., an oil m., pail fac., & extensive machine shops. Milwaukee was incorporated in 1846, & divided into 5 wards. Pop. 1838, 700; 1842, 2,700; 1846, 9,655; 1847, 14,061; 1850, 20,061, & in t. 1,351 additional. Pop. 1854, about 30,000. The growth of this city has been most astonishing. In 1834, its site was a mere wilderness; 2 log houses, occupied by hardy pioneers, were the only cleared spots, where is now a large city numbering over 30,000 inhabs. Truly may it be said, under the starry banner of the Republic, the wilderness is made to blossom like the rose.—(See Lakes, Commerce of.)

Wahnata	5	26	160	..
Washington	48	161	1,056	4
Total			6,077

Since 1850, two of the above counties have been discontinued, & 11 new ones erected, viz.: Blue Earth, Cass, Chisago, Fillmore, Goodhue, Hennepin, Le Sueur, Nicollet, Pierce, Scott, & Sibley, mostly organized in 1853.

Physical Features.—Minnesota is an elevated tableland, with a surface but little varied, being mostly a rolling prairie, abounding with lakes of pure water, & streams which flow in all directions, excepting towards the west. The soil is a fertile sandy loam, easily cultivated, & well adapted to agricultural purposes. The Mississippi riv. rises centrally in the territory, in Itasca lake, a beautiful sheet of water. The river flows first in an eastern, thence in a southern direction, to the confines of the territory, in its course to the ocean. It is also drained by the Missouri & its numer. tributaries, the Red river of the north, whose waters pass off to Hudson Bay, & the St. Louis entering Lake Superior on the E. border of the territory. Forests of pine and other valuable woods for timber, border the principal streams, & lead & copper ore have been found to some extent, & iron ore on the shore of Lake Superior. There were in the territory in 1850, 5,035 acres of improved land, & 23,846 acres of unimproved land in farms. Cash value of farms, $161,948; & the value of implements and machinery, $15,981. Live Stock.—Horses, 860; asses & mules, 14; milch cows, 607; working oxen, 655; other cattle, 740; sheep, 80; swine, 734. Value of live stock, $92,859. Agricultural Products.—Wheat, 1,401 bush. produced; rye, 125; Ind. corn, 16,725; oats, 30,582; barley, 1,216; buckwheat, 515. Value of the products of market gardens, $150; pounds of butter made, 1,100 lbs.; maple sugar, 2,950; beeswax and honey, 80; tons of hay, 2,019; potatoes, 21,145 bushels; wool, 85 lbs.; sweet potatoes, 200; peas and beans, 10,002. Value of slaughtered animals, $2,480. The common travelling roads and military roads are the only improvements yet constructed. The route of the Great Northern Pacific r. r. has been explored across the terr. Education.—The legislature in 1851 incorporated the University of Minnesota at the Falls of St. Anthony, and it was organized in the following October, & the preparatory department opened in November. It is endowed with 2 tnshps. of land. For the support of common schools, sections 16 & 36 are reserved in each township.

The penitentiary is located at Stillwater.

St. Paul is the capital and principal place in the territory.

Government.—The governor is appointed by the President of the United States. The legislative assembly consists of a Council (of 9 members, elected for 2 years) & a House of Representatives (of 18 members), elected annually. All white male inhabitants, 21 years of age, citizens of the United States, are legal voters.

The French were the first Europeans to explore the region now comprised in Minnesota, & the Mississippi r. was explored by the Jesuit fathers, even beyond the Falls of St. Anthony, at a very early period. The first American military post was established here in 1819, and called Fort Snelling. This county has formed a part of several territorial governments, the last were Iowa & Wisconsin. It was formed into a territory with its present name (in 1849), which it derives from the original Indian name of St. Peters river.

MIRAMICHI, a bay & river of New Brunswick, the bay on its E. coast, lat. 47° 10′ N., lon. 65° W., being the estuary of the river which expands into it after a N.E. course of 75 m. The towns Newcastle & Chatham are on the banks of the river, & opposite the mouth of the bay are Fox & Passage islands. This bay & the coast in the vicinity abounds with various species of fish. The whole line of the New Brunswick coast, from Shediac to Escuminac, around the bay of Miramichi, & thence along the shores, from Tabusintac to Shippegan & Miscon, offers the greatest facility for prosecuting either the in-shore, deep-sea, or Labrador cod-fishery. There are numerous harbors, creeks, coves, lagoons, & inlets, on this line of coast, well sheltered, with sufficient water for boats & vessels of every size & description. The beaches are admirable for drying fish, & there is abundance of wood for the construction of stages & "fish flakes." The soil, too, is generally excellent, & owing to the flatness of the coast, the shore is everywhere easy of approach.

MISSISSINEWA, r., Ia., rises in the state of Ohio, and running in a N. W. direction, it falls into the Wabash r., a little above Peru. In its upper parts it furnishes good mill sites, & in its lower parts it is navigable for boats of 10 tons, in time of high water.

MISSISSINEWA, t., Darke co., O. Drained by Grenville creek and Wabash r. Pop. 1840, 127; 1850, 378.

MISSISSIPPI, an immense river of the United States, derives importance from its great length; the vast and fertile regions which, with its tributaries, it drains, and the extent to which it is navigable. It rolls a mighty volume of water to the ocean, bearing to its destined market a vast amount of produce of one of the most fertile regions on the globe, & returning to these regions the productions of other portions of the U. S., & of foreign countries, which they need for their convenience and comfort. The most probable derivation of its name is Missi Sepe, which, in the Algonquin Indian language, which prevails in its upper parts, means Great River. Its extreme source, according to the explorations of Schoolcraft, July 13th, 1832, is Itaska lake, 47° 10′ N. lat., & 95° 54′ W. lon., at an elevation of 1,500 feet, & the distance of 3,160 miles above the Gulf of Mexico. Itaska lake is a beautiful sheet of water, lying among hills surmounted by pines. The outlet of the lake is 10 or 12 feet broad, and from 12 to 18 inches deep. Its course is then northwardly & northeastwardly, & it passes through lakes Irving & Travers, and it then passes eastwardly & southeastwardly, and through some small lakes to Lake Cass. This lake is of considerable extent, & contains a large island, 182 m. below its source, & its surface is elevated 1,330 feet above the Gulf of Mexico. Its course is W. to Lake Winnipec, then S.W. through Little Winnipec lake, until it receives Leech lake fork, the outlet of a considerable lake of the same name. The most northern point attained by the river is a few minutes short of 48°; it then pursues a winding course eastwardly, passing through some small lakes, until it attains a southwardly direction. The average descent of the Mississippi, from its source to its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, is a fraction over 5 inches per mile. The region about the source of the Mississippi is an elevated table land, abounding in small lakes of pure water, & fed chiefly by springs. The first considerable falls in the river are those of Peckagama, where it descends 20 feet in 300 yards. There is no perpendicular fall, but a rapid which entirely obstructs navigation. The river is compressed to the width of 80 feet, & is precipitated over a rugged bed of sandstone, the rocky channel being inclined at an angle of from 35° to 40°. The surrounding view is wild and picturesque. An island, covered with spruce and cedar, divides the channel nearly in the middle, at the commencement of the fall. The next considerable falls in the river, are those of St. Anthony. The river here has a perpendicular descent of 17 feet, and a formidable rapid above and below. An island, at the brow of the precipice, divides the current into 2 parts, the largest of which passes on the W. side of the isl. The rapid below the chute is filled with large fragments of rock, in the interstices of which some alluvial soil has accumulated, which nourishes a stinted growth of cedars. The rapid above the falls has a descent of about 10 feet in the distance of 300 yards. The rapid below the falls extend half a mile, in which the river descends 15 feet. The entire fall, in three-fourths of a mile, is 65 feet. Without the grandeur of Niagara, these falls are extremely picturesque & beautiful. But during the Spring floods, they become grand as well as beautiful. The width of the Mississippi, for 12 miles above the falls, is half a mile; below, it is contracted to 200 yards. A little below the falls of St. Anthony enters the St. Peter's river, from the W., which is the largest tributary of the Upper Mississippi. For 200 miles above its entrance, it is 100 yards wide, with a great depth of water. About lat. 44° the St. Croix enters the Mississippi from the E., which is said to be navigable for boats 200 ms. About 15 ms. below the entrance of St. Croix r., the Mississippi expands into a beautiful sheet of water, called Lake Pepin, 25 ms. in length. At its termination, the Chippewa river enters the Mississippi, after a course of about 300 ms. In 42° enters the Wisconsin from the E., forming an easy communication with Lake Michigan. Near 40°, on the W. side, the Des Moines enters, 150 yards wide. A few miles above the mouth of this river are rapids, 9 miles in length, forming an impediment to navigation, when the river is low. In 39° the Illinois enters from the E., 400 yards wide, and navigable for boats more than 350 miles. A little below 39° enters the majestic Missouri from the W., which is longer, and discharges more water than the Mississippi; and had it been as early explored, it would probably have been regarded as the parent stream. Its waters are turbid, and changes the appearance of the Mississippi. In 38° the Kaskaskia enters from the E., and is navigable for more than 100 miles, passing through a beautiful country. Between 37° & 36°, 1,040 miles above New Orleans, the "Belle River," or the beautiful Ohio, enters from the E., & is much the largest eastern branch; & the most important tributary of the Mississippi. Between 35° & 34° enters the St. Francis from the W., 200 yards wide, & navigable from 200 to 300 miles. White river enters on the same side, in about 34°, about 800 miles long. The Arkansas, from the W., enters between 34° & 33°, 618 miles above New Orleans & is 500 yards wide, & 2,000 miles long. The Yazoo enters on the E., side, between 33° & 32°, & is from 200 to 300 yards wide. At 31° the Red river comes in from the W. It is as large, & discharges as much water as the Arkansas, & is navigable for steamboats. Here the Mississippi carries its greatest volume of water, as immediately below this, and at intervals, it divides into several large outlets. From an old bed of the river, which communicates with both the Mississippi & Red rivers, the Atchafalaya discharges a great amount of water into the Gulf of Mexico. A little below Baton Rouge, on the E. side, the Ibberville goes off, & passing through lakes Maurepas, Pontchartrain, & Borgne, enters the Gulf of Mexico. Between Atchafalaya & New Orleans, pass off Plaquemine & Bayou Lafourche, on the W. side, the former joining the Atchafalaya, & the latter entering the Gulf of Mexico. The average width of the Mississippi, below the Missouri, is about a mile; but the large rivers which enter it greatly increase its depth. Its medial current is about 4 miles an hour. At the head of the Delta, the depth is from 75 to 80 feet; at New Orleans it is 100. At the distance of 105 miles below New Orleans, by the course of the river, but 90 in a direct course, this majestic river enters the Gulf of Mexico, by several mouths, the principal of which are called the Balize, or Northeast Pass, in 29° 08′ 30″ N. lat., & 89° 01′ 24″ W. lon., & the Southwest Pass, in 28° 58′ 30″ N. lat., & 89° 20′ W. lon. Draining a country of over 1,000,000 sq. ms. in extent, it would naturally be expected that its spring floods would be vast; & in consequence of them, it overflows its banks at that season to a great extent. From the sources to the mouth of the Missouri, the flood commences in March, and does not subside before the last of May, at an average height of 15 feet. From the Missouri to the Ohio, it rises 25 feet; & below the Ohio, for a great distance, 50 feet. At every flood it overspreads a country, chiefly on its western side, from 10 to 30 ms. wide, 500 miles from its mouth. This river is extremely winding in its course, and sometimes a bend will occur of 30 miles in extent, in which the distance across the neck will not exceed a mile. This circumstance undoubtedly impedes the current, and thus favors navigation. The mighty volume of water often carries away a large mass of earth, with its trees, from a projecting point, & frequently endanger vessels. Trees also are often bedded in the mud, projecting their tops, producing snags & sawyers, as they are called, dangerous to navigators. The whirls, or eddies, which are produced by the tortuous course of the river & its projecting points, render the navigation to a degree difficult & dangerous. Vessels are often from 5 to 30 days in ascending from the mouth of the river to New Orleans, though with a favorable wind, they will often descend in 12 hours. Before the introduction of steam boats, it required 8 or 10 weeks to go from New Orleans to the Illinois. Boats of 100 tons ascend the river to near the falls of St. Anthony, 2,049 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. The use of steamboats has entirely changed the navigation of the Mississippi; & they have nearly superseded all other vessels for ascending the river. Large flat-bottomed boats, denominated arks, which are not designed to return, are extensively used for transportation down the river. The first steamboat on the western waters was built at Pittsburg, in 1811; there were, 1851, 601 steamboats, with an aggregate tonnage of 235,661 tons burden, & employed 14,272 persons. Large ships seldom ascend above Natchez, but Memphis is considered the head of ship navigation, & the United States Government have established a navy yard there. There are no tides in the Mississippi. The basin of the Mississippi embraces about a million of sq. miles, or 640 millions of acres, (which is equal in extent to a square territory, 1,000 miles long & as many broad, & of which it is estimated two-thirds, or 666,666 sq. miles, are good arable land, capable of yielding abundant harvests. If, as in the populous parts of agricultural Europe, it had 110 inhabitants to each mile (or 640 acres) of the two-thirds of good land, the valley would contain 73,333,260 persons; or if filled with a manufacturing or commercial people, to the extent that Britain & Ireland are filled, its population would be nearly 150 millions. Statement of the tonnage, & the value of merchandise sent from & received at seaboard, by the way of the Mississippi river for the year 1851. Downward, 1,292,670 tons; value of products, merchandise, &c., sent, $108,051,708. Value of merchandise sent upward, $38,874,782.

There are three lighthouses at the passes, and one at the head of the South Pass, viz.: the one at the N.E. is a fixed light, elevated 78 feet above the surface of the Gulf, & visible 13½ nautical m.; at the South Pass is a revolving light on a tower 54 ft. above the sea, & at the S.W. pass is a fixed light elevated 60 ft. above the surface of the Gulf, & visible 12 nautical m.; & one with a fixed light at the head of the South Pass, built of iron in 1852,—it shows a fixed light.

MISSISSIPPI, river of Ottowa river, Canada W., Frontenac & Lanark counties. The N. branch rises in a chain of lakes, & flows about 30 m., where it is joined by the south branch, & after a short distance expands into the Mississippi lake, from which it takes a course almost due north, & enters the Ottawa just below Lake Chats. Large quantities of lumber are cut in the vicinity and sent through its channel to the Ottawa.

MISSISSIPPI, county, Mo. Situated in the S.E. part of the state. Area, 380 sq, ms. The Mississippi r. forms its E. boundary. Surface level, some portions liable to be submerged. Federal representative population, 482,596.

Physical Features, &c.—The southern part of the state, for about 100 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, is mostly a sandy level pine forest, interspersed with cypress swamps, open prairies, & inundated marshes, & a few hills of a moderate elevation. This region is generally healthy, & by cultivation produces cotton, Indian corn, sugar, indigo, &c. As you proceed further north, the country becomes more elevated & agreeably diversified, & the soil is a deep rich mould, producing abundantly cotton, Indian corn, sweet potatoes, indigo, peaches, melons, & grapes. The natural growth of timber consists of poplar, hickory, black walnut, sugar maple, cotton wood, magnolia, lime, & sassafras. The country in the north of the state is healthy and productive, & the lands watered by the Yazoo through its whole course in the north-west is very fertile.

There were in this state in 1850, 3,444,358 acres of land improved, & 7,046,061 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $54,738,654; & the value of implements & machinery, $5,762,927. Live stock—horses, 115,469; asses & mules, 54,547; milch cows, 214,231; working oxen, 38,485; other cattle, 436,254; sheep, 304,929; swine, 1,582,734; value of live stock, $19,403,662.

The Mississippi river, with its various windings, forms the entire western boundary of the state, and its margin consists of indulated swamps, covered with a large growth of timber. Back of this the surface suddenly rises into what are called bluffs, and behind them the country is a moderately elevated table land with a diversified surface. Cotton is the principal production of the state. The Yazoo is the largest river that has its whole course in the state. It rises in the N.W. part, & after a course of 250 miles, enters the Mississippi. The Pascagoula river, after a course of 250 miles, enters the Gulf of Mexico. At its mouth it widens into a bay. It is navigable for a considerable distance for small vessels. The Big Black river, after a course of 200 miles, enters the Mississippi just above Grand Gulf. It has a boat navigation of 50 miles. Pearl river rises in the central part of the state, and passing through it to the south, forming in its lower part the boundary between this state & Louisiana, enters Lake Borgne. Its navigation is much impeded by sand bars & obstructions of timber. The Homochitto is a considerable river which enters the Mississippi. Besides these, there are a few other small rivers & creeks. A chain of low sandy islands, 6 or 7 miles from the shore, enclose several bays or sounds, the largest of which are Mississippi Sound, Pascagoula Sound, and Lake Borgne.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 2 cotton factories, with a capital invested of $38,000, employing 19 males & 17 females, producing 171,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $30,500; 8 establishments, with a capital of $100,000, employing 112 persons, and making 924 tons of castings, &c., valued at $117,400; 157 flouring & grist m., 266 saw m., 130 tanneries, 53 printing offices, 56 newspapers, 2 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weekly, & 52 weekly publications. Capital invested in manufactures, $1,835,395; value of manufactured articles, $2,962,038. There were, Jan. 1854, 4 railroads in the state, 155 miles completed, & in operation, and 436 in course of construction.

The principal places in the state are Jackson, the capital; Natchez, Grand Gulf, Washington, Vicksburg, Columbus, Aberdeen, & Holly Springs. On the 1st of Jan., 1854, there was 1 bank, with a capital of $240,165. Total tonnage of the state 1853, 2,509,018 tons.

Education, &c.—Oakland College, Claiborne co.; University of Mississippi at Oxford; Mississippi College at Clinton; Jefferson College at Washington; and the college for females at Hernando: the whole having, in 1850, 862 students. There were also 171 acad., 6,628 pupils; 782 schools, 18,746 scholars; 117 libraries, aggregate number of vols. 21,737. School monies to the amount of $300,000 is distributed for the support of common schools throughout the state. There is an institution for the blind, & a lunatic asylum at Jackson.—The state penitentiary is at Jackson.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 385 Baptist churches, 8 Christian, 13 Episcopal, 3 Free, 454 Methodist, 143 Presbyterian, 9 Roman Catholic, and 1 Union, the whole having 1,016 churches. Total value of church property, $755,542.

MISSOURI, a large river in the United States rises in the Rocky mountains, & takes this name after the union of three branches, denominated Jefferson, Gallatin, & Madison, in 45° 10′ N. lat., & 110 W. lon. The spring sources of the Missouri & those of the Columbia, which flows W. to the Pacific, are not more than a mile apart. At the distance of 411 miles from the extreme point of navigation of its head branches, the Missouri passes through the Rocky mountains by what is denominated the Gates, the view of which is exceedingly grand. For a distance of 6 miles, the rocks rise perpendicularly from the water's edge to the height of nearly 1,200 feet. The river is compressed to the width of 150 yards, & rushes impetuously through this great mountain passage. 110 miles below this, & 521 from its source, are the great falls, 2,575 ms. above its entrance into the Mississippi. The river descends 357 feet in 18 miles, by a succession of falls. The greatest fall is 87 feet perpendicular, & the next is 47. The width of the river is here about 350 yards, & these falls, next to Niagara, are probably the grandest in the world. The Yellowstone river, 800 yards wide at its mouth, enters the Missouri from the S.W., 521 miles from its source, & 1,880 miles from its mouth. The Chienne, 400 yards at its mouth, enters it on the S. W., 1,310 miles from its mouth. The White river, 300 yards wide, enters it on the S.W., 1,130 miles from its mouth. The James & the Big Sioux enter it from the N.E. The Platte, 600 yards wide, enters it from the S.W., 2,496 miles from its source, & 600 from its mouth, in lat. 41° 4′ N. The Kansas, 233 yards wide, enters it from the S.W., 340 miles from its mouth, in lat. 39° 5′, 2,756 miles from its source. Grand river enters it from the N. E. 240 miles from its mouth, & is 190 yards wide. La Mine river enters it from the S. W. Osage river, 397 yards wide, enters it from the S. W., 200 miles from its mouth, 2,963 miles from its source, in lat. 38° 45′. The Gasconade also enters it from the S.W. The Missouri enters the Mississippi 3,096 miles from its source, which added to 1,395 ms., the distance to the Gulf of Mexico, makes its whole length 4,491 miles. Through this vast length there is no substantial obstruction to the navigation, excepting the great falls. Its principal tributaries are each navigable from 100 to 800 miles. Through the greater part of its course the Missouri is a rapid & turbid stream. The fertile land on its margin, & on those of its tributaries, is not very broad, & back of this are prairies of vast extent. The river is half a mile wide at its entrance into the Mississippi, but through the greater part of its course it is much wider. (See Mississippi r.)

MISSOURI, one of the Western United States, is situated between 36° & 40° 36′ N. lat., & between 89° & 95° 30′ W. lon. It is 287 miles long & 230 broad, containing 65,037 sq. ms. Pop. in 1810 was 19,833; in 1820, 66,586; in 1830, 140,074; in 1840, 383,702; and in 1850, 682,043. The state is divided into 100 counties in 1850. The following table gives the number of dwellings, inhabitants, cultivated farms & manufacturing establishments in each:

Federal representative pop. 647,074.

Bollinger, Dent, Pemiscot, Stone & Vernon counties have been erected since the census of 1850.

Physical Features, &c.—This state presents a great variety of surface & soil. Alluvial or bottom land is found on the margin of the rivers; receding from them the land rises in some places gently, & in others very abruptly, into elevated barrens or rocky ridges. In the interior, bottoms & barrens, naked hills & prairies, heavy forests & streams of water, may often be seen at one view, presenting a diversified & beautiful landscape. The south-east part of the state has a very extensive tract of low, marshy country, abounding in lakes, & liable to inundations. Back of this a hilly country extends as far as the Osage r. This section is rich in minerals. The lead region covers an area of more than 3,000 sq. ms. In St. Francis county is the celebrated "Iron Mountain," elevated 300 feet above is the surrounding plain, and a mile & a half across its summit, & 80 per cent. of its mass pure iron. Five miles distant is the Pilot Knob, 1,000 feet high, & with a base a mile & a half in circumference of the same species of rich ore. Between the Osage & Missouri rivers is a tract of country very fertile, & agreeably diversified with woodland & prairie, & abounding with coal, salt, &c. The country north of the Missouri is emphatically "the garden of the West." There is no part of the world where a greater extent of country can be traversed more easily when in its natural state. The surface is for the most part delightfully undulating & variegated, sometimes rising into picturesque hills, then stretching away into a sea of prairies, occasionally interspersed with shady groves & shining streams.

There were in this state in 1850, 2,938,425 acres of land improved, & 6,794,245 of unimproved land in farms: cash value of farms, $63,225,543, & the value of implements & machinery, $3,981,525; live stock, horses, 225,819; asses & mules, 41,667; milch cows, 220,150; working oxen, 112,168; other cattle, 449,173; sheep, 762,511; swine, 1,702,625; value of live stock, $19,887,580.

Agricultural products, &c.—Wheat, 2,981,652; rye, 44,268; Indian corn, 56,214,537; oats, 5,278,079; barley, 9,681; buckwheat, 23,641; peas & beans, 46,917; potatoes, 939,003; sweet potatoes, 335,505; rice, 700 pounds; value of the product of the orchards, $514,711; produce of market gardens, $99,454; pounds of butter made, 7,544,350; of cheese, 203,572; maple sugar, 178,910; molasses, 5,634 gallons; bees wax and honey, 1,328,972 pounds; wool, 1,827,164 pounds produced; flax, 527,160; silk cocoons, 186; rice, 4,130; tobacco, 17,113,784; hay, 116,925 tons; hemp, 16,028 tons; clover seeds, 619 bushels; other grass seeds, 4,346; flax seed, 18,696; & were made 1,[illegible] gallons of wine. Value of home-made manufactures, $1,674,705; of slaughtered animals, $8,307,100.

The Mississippi winds along the entire eastern boundary of the state for a distance of 400 miles, and receives in its course the waters of the Great Missouri, which indeed deserves to be regarded as the main stream. Through the central & richest part of the state the Missouri rolls its immense volume of water, being navigable for 5 months in the year for steamboats 1,800 miles from its entrance into the Mississippi. The La Mine, Osage & Gasconade on the south, & the grand & Chariton on the north side, are navigable tributaries of the Missouri. Maramec r. runs through the mineral district, is a navigable stream, & enters the Mississippi eighteen miles below St. Louis. Salt riv., which is also navigable, enters the Mississippi 85 ms. above the Missouri. The White & St. Francis drain the S.E., & the tributaries of Neosha the S.W. part of the state.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 2 cotton factories, with a capital invested of $102,000, employing 75 males & 80 females, producing articles valued at $142,900; 1 woollen fac., with a capital of $20,000, employing 15 males & 10 females, manufacturing 12,000 yards of cloth, & 6,000 pairs blankets, valued at $56,000; 5 establishments making pig iron, with a capital of $619,000, employing 334 persons, and producing 19,250 tons of pig iron, &c., valued at $314,600; 6 establishments, with a capital of $187,000, employing 297 persons, & making 5,200 tons of castings, &c., valued at $336,495; 2 establishments, with a capital of $42,100, employing 101 persons, manufacturing 963 tons of wrought iron, valued at $68,700; 75 flouring & grist m., 338 saw m., 219 tanneries; 56 printing offices, 5 daily, 4 tri & semi-weekly, 45 weekly, & 7 monthly publications. Capital invested in manufactures, $9,194,999; value of manufactured articles, $24,250,578.

The principal places in this state are St. Louis, Jefferson City, the capital, St. Charles, Palmyra, Columbia, Liberty & Lexington. There were in January, 1854, 1 bank with 5 branches, with a cash capital of $1,215,405. There were 6 railroads in the state; 50 miles of road completed, & 963 in the course of construction. Tonnage 1853, 45,441 tons.—(For Commerce, see St. Louis its Port.)

Education, &c.—University of St. Louis, at St. Louis; Missouri University, at Columbia; St. Vincent's College, at Cape Girardeau; Masonic College, in Marion co.; St. Charles College, at St. Charles; Fayette College, at Fayette; Medical Department of St. Louis University, at St. Louis, & Medical Department of Missouri University, at Columbia. The whole having in 1850, 1,009 students. There were also 204 academies, 8,829 pupils; 1,570 schools, 51,754 scholars; 97 lib., aggregate number of volumes, 75,056. School fund, $1,275,657. There is an asylum for the deaf & dumb at Fulton; an institution for the education of the blind at St. Louis, & a lunatic asylum at Fulton.

The penitentiary is at Jefferson city.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 300 Baptist churches, 57 Christian, 11 Episcopal, 13 Free, 1 Jewish, 21 Lutheran, 1 Mennonite, 250 Methodist, 3 Moravian, 125 Presbyterian, 65 Roman Catholic, 11 Union, 2 Unitarian, 1 Universalist, & 19 other sects, the whole having 878 churches. Total value of church property, $1,561,610.

The constitution of the state was formed in 1820. The governor is elected by plurality of the popular vote for four years, but is ineligible for the next succeeding four years. A lieutenant-governor is chosen at the same time, & for the same term, who is president of the senate. Every county is entitled to send one representative, but the whole number can never exceed 100. The senators (33 in number) are elected every four years, one-half retiring every second year. The elections for senators & representatives are held biennially in August. The legislature meets once in two years, in the month of November, at Jefferson city. Every white male citizen over 21 years of age, who has resided one year in the state, & three months in the county in which he offers his vote, has the right of suffrage. The judges of the Supreme Court, & the chancellor, are elected every other year, & hold their offices for a term of 6 years, or until 65 years of age.

Missouri was originally a part of Louisiana, which was purchased from France in 1803. It was admitted into the Union as an independent state in 1821.

Mobile is situated on a beautiful & extended plain, elevated 15 feet above the highest tides, open to refreshing breezes from the bay, & commanding a beautiful prospect. It is lighted with gas, & supplied with pure water brought from "the spring" near Spring Hill, a distance of 8 miles, & distributed throughout the city in iron pipes. Vessels drawing more than 8 feet water pass up Spanish r., 6 miles, around a marshy island into Mobile r., & then drop down to the city. It is, next to New Orleans, the greatest cotton mart of the south; 575,104 bales were exported in the year 1852. The exports amount to from 12 to 16 millions of dollars annually. Tonnage of the port 1853, 176,-949. It is defended by Fort Morgan, formerly Fort Bowyer, situated on a long, low, sandy point, at the mouth of the bay, 30 miles below the city. Near Dauphin island is the anchorage for large class vessels, where may be seen at times a fleet of 50 or 60 sail. It was surrendered to the Americans by Spain in 1813, chartered as a town in 1814, incorporated as a city in 1819. It has suffered severely by fire; 170 buildings were burned in 1827, & 600 in 1839. But it has been rebuilt, with additional beauty & convenience. At Spring Hill, 8 miles W. of the City, is Spring Hill College, under direction of the Jesuits, founded in 1830, & has a principal & 20 instructors, 206 students, 250 alumni, & 7,000 vols. in its libraries. At Summerville, 3 m. from Mobile, is the Roman Catholic convent of the Visitation, under the direction of the sisters.

It is situated on the Vermont central railroad. 47 miles from Burlington, & 205 from Boston, & on an alluvial plain of moderate extent, at the junction of the N. & S. branches of Winooski or Onion r., surrounded by elevated hills, some of which rise abruptly—38 E. S. E. Burlington, 60 N. Windsor, 150 N.N.E. Albany, 160 N.N.W. Boston, 97 N.N.W. Concord, N.H., 516 W. Pop. in 1830, 1,792; 1840, 3,725; 1850, 2,310. The surface is uneven; soil very fertile. Drained by Winooski r. & its branches. At the centre is a small village, containing a Methodist church. The principal vill. is situated in the S. W. part of the t., & about 10 ms. N.E. of the geographical centre of the state. It became the capital of the state in 1805. Onion r. & its branches here afford good water power. The t. was chartered in 1780, & first settled in 1786, on the present site of the village. The road through the Green mountains, which passes through this place, encounters no high hills, & constitutes Montpelier a great thoroughfare. The village was incorporated in 1818, & contains a court-house, jail, an academy with a valuable library & philosophical apparatus, 7 churches, — 2 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, & 2 Universalist,—20 stores, 2 banks with an aggregate cap. of $200,000, a piano forte fac., an iron foundry, 2 fulling m., a starch fac., 5 printing offices, each issuing weekly newspapers, & 2,000 inhabs. Among the public buildings is the state house, an elegant granite edifice, 150 feet long; the centre, including the portico, 100 feet deep; & the wing, 72 feet deep. The front in the centre has a fine Doric portico of 6 columns, 6 feet in diameter at the base, & 36 feet high. The edifice is surmounted by a dome, 100 feet high at the top, from the ground. In the interior are convenient state offices, & spacious & elegant rooms for the senate & house of representatives. [See E. Montpelier.]

MONTRA, p-o., Shelby co., O.

MONTREAL, a city and river port of entry, Canada East, and the largest and most populous city and chief seat of commerce of British America. Situated on the left bank of the St. Lawrence, 142 m. in a direct line S.W. Quebec. Lat. 45° 30′ W., lon. 73° 25′ N. Pop. 1810, 27,297; in 1852, 57,716; 1854, 65,000. The site is not so commanding as that of Quebec, but it is in every other respect superior to that city. It is not so crowded, & some even of its older streets are of tolerable width. Notre Dame street, which is the principal seat of the retail trade, is nearly a mile in length, and has many elegant shops. Great St. James street is elegant and spacious, and is occupied principally by the banks & insurance offices. St. Paul street is the chief seat of the wholesale business. Water street, Commissioners' street, & Common street, face on the St. Lawrence the entire length of the city, and exhibit a splendid frontage, principally of cut stone warehouses, which has a very imposing effect. There are other handsome streets and squares, with many beautiful private residences and villas, particularly on Beaver Hall, which is considered the fashionable part of the city. From whatever side the city is approached, the scene is one of much interest; if from the St. Lawrence, the splendid towers of the cathedral, the tall spires of Christ Church, St. Patrick's church, and the elegant front of Bonsecours Market, & the long ranges of cut stone buildings which front the river, form at once a tout ensemble which is unequalled.

The most remarkable public edifice is the Roman Catholic Cathedral, opened in 1829. It is superior to any other church in British America; is built in the Gothic style of architecture, is 255¼ feet in length by 134¼ in breadth. It is faced with stone & roofed with tin, and has six towers, of which the three belonging to the main front are 220 feet in height. On the roof is a promenade 76 feet in length by 20 in breadth, elevated 120 feet. The principal window is 64 feet in height & 32 in breadth. The interior is capable of accommodating from 6,000 to 7,000 persons, who may disperse by numerous outlets in five or six minutes. It comprises seven chapels and nine spacious aisles. There are several other Roman Catholic churches, mostly belonging to the order of St. Sulpice, to the members of which Montreal chiefly owed its foundation, and who still hold the seigniory of the island on which it stands. The seminary of St. Sulpice, a large and commodious building adjoining the cathedral, occupies three sides of an oblong area, 132 feet in length by 29 deep, and is surrounded by spacious gardens. A handsome additional building, 110 feet by 45 feet, has been lately erected, at an expense of 10,000*l*. In these establishments, students in most of the higher branches of learning are taught at very moderate charges. The Episcopal cathedral is a handsome edifice, 132 by 80 feet. It was erected in 1804, & will seat 3,000 persons. Trinity Church is a neat cut stone building, erected in 1824; it is 75 by 44 feet, & is handsomely fitted up. St. Georges Church is a neat building, erected in the style of the 13th century. The interior is fitted up in a chaste and elegant manner, & it has an excellent organ. There are four other Episcopal churches, 2 Church of Scotland (Presbyterian) churches, one of which (St. Andrews), is a beautiful specimen of the Gothic style of architecture. It is 70 by 65 feet, & will accommodate about 1,000 persons. Two Free churches, 3 Methodist, the most elegant being the Great St. James street church, built in the Florid Gothic style. It is 111 by 73 feet, & will seat 2,500, & cost 12,500*l*. There are also 2 Congregational, 1 American Presbyterian, 1 Secession, 1 Baptist, 1 Unitarian, and 1 Jews' synagogue. The Sœurs Noires have an extensive convent, founded in 1659. Its inmates consist of a superior and 60 nuns, whose duties are directed to the education of young girls. The Montreal general hospital, erected in 1821–2 by voluntary subscription, a large & well-built edifice, is said to be one of the best regulated institutions of the kind in America. The court house & prison are substantial buildings, occupying the site of the former college of the Jesuits. The government house, 5 banks, barracks, ordnance office, and 4 market houses, are among the remaining public buildings. In one of the squares is a colossal statue of Nelson, placed on a Doric column, the pedestal of which has bas reliefs representing naval actions. Besides the educational establishments noticed above, Montreal has 4 colleges. M'Gill college is beautifully situated at the base of the mountain. It owes its origin to the late Hon. James M'Gill, who bequeathed the estate of Burnside and 10,000*l*. for its endowment. The Roman Catholic college on College street, St. Marys (Jesuit) college, between Bleury & Alexander streets; the Baptist College, at the west end of Dorchester street. Montreal has a penitentiary, a house of industry, a theatre-royal, water works, a savings' bank, a natural history society, a mechanics' institution, a central auxiliary society for promoting education & industry; Bible & tract, agricultural & horticultural societies, a board of trade, custom house, several public libraries, and an excellent news-room, &c. There is published 3 daily, 7 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weekly, 9 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, & 4 monthly publications, and 5 other periodicals. There are in Montreal several fine public squares, viz.: the Champ de Mars, the Place d'Armes, Jacques Cartier square, Dalhousie square, & Richmond square; and there is a rural cemetery recently laid out, called Mt. Royal Cemetery, well worth a visit from the stranger. Montreal is supplied with water from the St. Lawrence, raised by steam power into 3 reservoirs, of the aggregate capacity of about 5 millions of gallons, at a cost of 72,787*l*. The new works derive their supply from the St. Lawrence above the La Chine rapids, & is brought from thence in an aqueduct 5 m. in length to the settling pond, from whence it is forced up by power derived from a portion of its surplus waters into reservoirs, of an aggregate capacity of 20 millions of gallons, elevated 200 feet above the surface of the river; estimated cost, 150,000*l*.

The position of Montreal, at the head of the ship navigation of the St. Lawrence, & near its confluence with the Ottawa, as well as its situation with respect to the city of New York, necessarily makes it one of the greatest emporiums of Canada. The harbor, though not large, is secure, & vessels drawing 15 ft. water may lie close to the shore. Its general depth of water is from 3 to 4¼ fathoms. Its chief disadvantage consists in the rapid St. Mary, about 1 mile below the city wharves, which vessels often find it difficult to stem. To obviate the obstructions in the navigation above Montreal, the Lachine canal, 9 m. long, 20 feet wide, & 5 feet deep, was undertaken in 1821, & completed at an expense of 130,000*l*. The communication with the opposite sides of the river is carried on by several steam & other vessels; & during the summer, a regular steamboat communication is kept up with Quebec. At this season vast rafts of timber come down and pass the city of Quebec; & scows, batteaux of about six tons, & Durham boats, bring to Montreal the produce of Upper Canada. Neither is the trade of Montreal suspended in winter, like that of Quebec. Numerous sledges may be seen coming in from all directions with agricultural produce, frozen carcases of beef & pork, firewood and other articles. Montreal is the centre of the commerce between Canada & the U. States, carried on by Lake Champlain & the Hudson, & not only is it the depôt of all the adjacent country, but most of the business done in Quebec is carried on by branches from the Montreal houses. (See Exports of Canada, page 853.) The imports in 1853 amounted to 3,693,306*l*., and the net amount of duties, 447,089*l*. In the same year, 4,885 vessels entered the port, 491,928 tons burden. The wharves of this city are constructed in a manner unequalled upon this continent. The entire line of which is over two miles in length, & considerable additions, to meet the rapidly increasing trade of the city, will be speedily commmenced. The Lachine Canal, with its locks & basins, is another of those Public Works of which the city may well be proud. The Champlain & St. Lawrence Railroad, commences at Brewsterville, opposite the city, & connects with the lines to New York & Boston, at Rouse's Point, a distance of 49 miles. This road is now completed, & the cars run daily. The Lachine Railroad connects the city, by a line of road nine miles in length, with the village of that name. The continuation of this road from Caughnawaga till it connects with the Ogdensburg road at Moers, is now complete, & the whole line is known as "The Montreal & New York Railroad." The St. Lawrence & Atlantic Railroad, connects Montreal with the city of Portland a distance of 292 miles is now complete. A line from Quebec to Melbourne, a distance of 100 miles, is also in course of construction, & will be completed in 1854. The Grand Trunk Railroad, to connect Montreal with Kingston, Toronto, &c., is now in course of construction. The entire length of the road from Trois Pistoles to Sarnia, will be 1,112 miles, & it will probably be completed in 1856. The Montreal & Bytown Railroad will pass through a fine district of country, &, is in progress of construction. The length will be about 121 miles, & will be opened in 1856. The Victoria Bridge.—This splendid & useful structure, is to cross the St. Lawrence from Point St. Charles to the South shore, a total length of 9,437 feet, or somewhat over a mile & three quarters. It is to be built on the tubular principle, & will have a track for railroad cars in the centre, while on the outside of the tube there will be a balcony on each side, with a foot path for passengers. The bridge will rest on 24 piers & two abutments of limestone masonry, the centre span being 330 feet long, & 60 feet high from summer water level. The iron used in its construction will be the best boiler plate T iron, & the total cost of the work is to be 1,500,000*l.* sterling, or $7,500,000. Formerly this city was the head quarters of the fur trade, but its interest in it has greatly declined. It has establishments for the manufacture of cotton goods, India Rubber, steam engines, railroad cars, axes, &c., cast iron foundries, distilleries, breweries, soap, candle, & tobacco manufactories, several ship building establishments, &c., various articles of hardware, linseed oil, floor cloth, &c., are made in the city. The markets are abundantly supplied with flesh, fish, poultry, fruit, vegetables, &c. About three-fourths of the population are of French descent, the remainder consisting principally of emigrants from Great Britain. Montreal, originally called Ville Marie, was taken from the French in 1760. The city is divided into 9 wards, & governed by a mayor & common council.

MONTRÉAL is the largest & most fertile island belonging to Canada. It is 32 miles in length, & 10 m. broad; and is considered the garden of the Lower Province. Area, 197 sq. ms. Soil is in most parts excellent, & it produces nearly every kind of grain, fruit & vegetable in perfection. Surface level, with the exception of the Mountain near the city; it is, however, diversified by several gentle ridges, having a tendency from N.E. to S.W., which are designated Coteaux. Mount Royal, or the Mountain, which overlooks the city consists of two distinct hills, between which one of the leading avenues into it passes. There are roads also by which the circuit of either or both mountains can be made, & which, from the very picturesque scenery they present, are beautiful drives. The base of the Mountain is adorned with many elegant villas, and the choicest orchards of Lower Canada are those which are situated around it, the fruit being of the most delicious flavor, & greatest luxuriance of yield. The island is divided into two Ridings, viz., the East Riding, or "Hochelaga," & the West Riding, or "Jacques Cartier," each of which returns one Member to the Provincial Parliament. It is also divided into ten parishes, viz: The parish of the City of Montreal, which comprehends the city proper, the Côtes de la Visitation, St. Joseph, Notre Dame des Neiges, & St. Pierre, together with parts of St. Paul & St. Catherines; the isle of St. Paul, at the mouth of River St. Pierre, & the Isle aux Hérons. Côte des Neiges is a neat thriving village, containing several tanneries & stores, & a chapel. The Parish of St. Laurent comprehends Côtes St. Laurent & St. Michel, with part of Notre Dame des Vertus. The handsome village of St. Laurent contains a number of stores, & a large Parish Church. The parish of Sault au Recollet, situated on the Back River, or Rivière des Prairies, contains a neat village of the same name, a fine church, & several valuable saw & corn mills. The parish of St. Geneviève is situated at the extreme N.W. of the Island, opposite Isle Bizard, & has nothing remarkable to speak of. The Parish of Lachine contains the large & thriving village of that name; it is an extensive parish, extending nearly eight miles along the St. Lawrence, & has many excellent farms, orchards & gardens. The Parish of Pointe Claire, extends from the Parish of Lachine, along the river, & includes part of Isle Perrot. The Parish of Longue Pointe commences at the Eastern boundary of the Parish of Montreal, & extends to that of Pointe aux Trembles, with a depth back to the centre of the Island; there are many rich farms in this parish. The Parish of Pointe aux Trembles extends from the last named to the upper end of Isle Thérèse, & includes the whole of the lower part of the island, which fronts the St. Lawrence. The village of the same name is a neat place of 70 or 80 houses, & is much frequented by visitors from the city. The Parish of Rivière des Prairies, contains the whole of the Côte St. Joseph, and, as its name implies, fronts on the river of the same name. The Parish of St. Anne embraces the whole upper end of the island, & also the upper part of Isle Perrot; it contains the pleasant village of St. Anne, & possesses many good farms and orchards. The city of Montreal sends three, & the remainder of the island two members, to the Provincial Parliament. The county is co-extensive with the island, and had in 1852, neat cattle, 15,613; sheep, 7,676; swine, 8,938; horses, 8,239;—wheat, 121,810 bush. produced; rye, 105; Indian corn, 14,904; buckwheat, 18,805; barley, 32,065; oats, 248,818; potatoes, 310,398; peas, 66,876; tobacco, 18,489 pounds; wool, 19,429;—7 grist m., 1 saw m., 18 tanneries. 2 carding & fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 1 ashery. Manufs. extensive and very varied, embracing woollen, cotton & silken fabrics, carpets, gold & silver wares, paper, &c., employing upwards of 85,000 hands in 1,150 factories, & at least 120 steam engines. Next to Moscow the principal towns are Kolomna and Dmitrov.

MOSCOW (Russ. Moskwa), a city of Europe, former cap. of Russia, & now of the gov. Moscow, near its centre, on the Moskwa, 397 m. S.E. St. Petersburg, in lat. (Ivan Veliki) 55° 45′ 13″ N., lon. 37° 37′ 54″ E. Pop. 350,000; elev. 781 feet. Mean temp. of year 40°; winter 15°; summer 64° Fahr. It covers a large circular area, & consists of the Kremlin, or citadel, surrounded by other quarters, enclosed by walls, beyond which are several suburbs. Since 1812, it has been rebuilt on a regular plan, but it is still mostly of wood. The principal edifices were the Kremlin, the ancient residence of the Czars, & now replaced by a magnificent structure, the new Kremlin, completed in 1850, comprising several palaces, and ornamented with the finest statuary and sculpture; the orphan hospital, bazaar, cathedral, & the church of the Annunciation, in which the sovereigns of Russia are re-crowned; the church of Ivan Veliki, with a belfry 269 feet high. The great bell of Moscow, the largest ever founded, 21 feet high, 20 feet in diameter, & weighing 1,600 tons, long buried under the soil, was raised & placed on a pedestal in 1836. Moscow is the residence of the wealthiest & most anc. noble families, the seat of a section of the senate, of a military governor-general, & of a regency, or council of administration. It has an arsenal, containing arms for 1,000 infantry & 1,000 cavalry, & an immense hall for exercising the troops in bad weather. The university, founded in 1705, had, in 1846, 100 professors, & 1,099 students. Moscow has a large public library, an observatory, botanic garden, & numerous scientific & literary institutions. It is the most industrious city of the empire, & is called the Manchester of Russia; its manufs. comprise cottons, woollens, & silks, in which steam machinery is emp. It has also manufs. of carpets, jewellery, & trinkets. From its central situation and its communication by water with all the principal cities and ports of the empire, its trade is immense. A railroad connects it with St. Petersburg. Moscow, founded in the middle of the 12th century, was sacked by the Moguls in 1233 and 1293. From the middle of the 14th century, it was considered the cap. of Russia. It was taken by the Poles in 1611. In 1703, Peter the Great transferred his residence to St. Petersburg; but Moscow was still regarded by the Russians as the cap. of their empire. It was occupied by the French in 1812; but after the battle of Borodino, the Russian general set it on fire, & thus compelled the French to commence their disastrous retreat.

MOUNT VERNON, Va., is on the right bank of the Potomac, 15 miles from Washington. A recent traveller thus describes the spot & his visit: "After a few miles of riding through the forest, with occasional openings & cultivated spots, my friend pointed out a stone sunk in the ground by the road-side, which, he said, marked the beginning of the Mount Vernon estate. Still we rode on for a couple of miles, before the gate & porter's lodge came in sight. After passing the gate, we had still a distance of half a mile before us, & the simple carriage-path led us over a surface much diversified, while the trees were most grand & forest-like. We crossed a brook, passed through a ravine, & felt ourselves so completely in the midst of aboriginal, untouched nature, that the sight of the house & the cluster of surrounding buildings, came like a surprise upon me. The approach to the house is towards the west front. The door from the piazza opened directly into a large room, which we entered. It was no mere habit that lifted the hat from my head, & I stepped lightly, as though upon hallowed ground. . . . The rooms of the house are spacious, & there is something of elegance in their arrangement; yet the whole is marked by great simplicity. All the regard one could wish, seems to have been shown to the sacredness of these public relics, & all things have been kept very nearly as Washington left them. Let every American, & especially every young American, visit this place, & catch something of its spirit. It will make an impression on him which may endure through life. . . . At a short distance from the house, in a retired spot, stands the new family tomb, a plain structure of brick, with a barred iron gate, through which are seen two sarcophagi of white marble, side by side, containing the remains of Washington & his consort. The old family tomb, in which he was first placed, is in a more picturesque situation, upon a knoll, in full view of the river; but the present one is more retired, which was reason enough to determine the wishes of a modest man." NANKIN, or NAN-KING ("court of the South"), a city, & the ancient cap. of China, cap. prov. Kiang-su, near the Yang-tze-Kiang, about 20 m. from its mouth. Lat. 32° 2′ N., lon. 118° 49′ E. Pop. estim. at 400,000. Its ancient walls can be traced over hill & dale for 35 miles, but Nankin has so greatly declined since the transference of the seat of empire to Peking by Kublai-khan in the 13th century, that the modern walls are of much less extent, & the city scarcely occupies 1-8th part of the surface enclosed by them, & it is commanded by hills especially on the E., & otherwise ill-calculated for defence. It is divided, as usual in Chinese cities, into a Chinese & a Tartar town, separated by walls & gates. Streets less broad than those of Peking, but handsome, clean, & well-paved. Principal objects of interest are the famous porcelain tower of 9 stories & 200 feet in height, completed in 1432 at a cost, as stated, of about $3,500,000; & the "tomb of kings" (supposed to be of the Ming dynasty, A.D. 1328 to 1621), leading to which is a fine-paved road with an avenue of gigantic armed figures. The governor's palace, & an observatory, are worthy of notice. Here are important manufactures of crape, satin of the finest quality, paper, artificial flowers, China or Indian ink, & nankeen, which hence derives its name, but is also made throughout the whole prov. It is the centre of a very extensive trade, & by the great canal which crosses the Yang-tze-kiang, about 50 m. E.ward, it communicates directly with Peking, to which city a good deal of fish is sent hence, among other articles. It is also the place of a grand viceroy, with authority over the Kiang provs., of a great military depôt, & the chief seat of literature in the empire.

Total population of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies 1850, 8,704,472. [See SICILY (ISLAND OF).]

The coasts are high and bold, especially on the W., and greatly indented. Chief capes, Sorrento, Gaeta, Baia, Vaticano, Nau, and Leuca. The principal gulfs are those of Gaeta, Manfredonia, Salerno, Policastro, St. Eufemia, Gioja, Squillace, and Taranto, which surround the two peninsulas of Otranto and Calabria. Surface in general mountainous, but includes extensive valleys, especially the plain of Capitanata and that of Terra di Lavoro (the Campania felice of the Romans). The Apennines traverse the country nearly throughout its entire length. In the Abruzzi, where it attains its greatest height, the chain separates into three lateral ranges, which re-unite near Isernia; at Monte Caruso it again divides into two branches, the most elevated of which traverses Calabria. The culminating point of the whole is Monte Corno, 10,154 feet. The chief isolated mountains are the volcano of Vesuvius, & Monte Gargano near the Adriatic. Soil volcanic, well-watered, & extremely fertile. Chief rivers, the Garigliano and Volturno, which flow W. to the Tyrrhenian sea, the Pescara, Biferno, Candelaro, and Ofanto, flowing E. to the Adriatic; the Bradano, Basiento, and Crate, to the Gulf of Taranto; the only large lake is that of Celano or Fucino. On the shores of the Adriatic are many salt lagoons. Climate divided into three regions according to elevation; in the lower region the temperature is so mild that vegetation is never interrupted; in the middle region snow occasionally falls, but soon disappears; in the elevated regions of the Abruzzi, cold is sometimes severe and long continued, snow lies on the Monte Corno nine months in the year. Naples is unhealthy in the marshy districts, and during the prevalence of the sirocco from July to September, when the heat is excessive. The value of human life is reckoned lower here than in any other country of Europe. The flora has, in addition to the plants common to Italy, several tropical products, including cotton, the sugar cane, pistachio, and dates. The wild boar, porcupine, and game of all kinds abound in the forests, and the coasts have always been celebrated for fish. Domestic animals comprise sheep, goats & pigs: cattle are not numerous; horses are of a small breed, but active; buffaloes pasture in herds in the marshes: sheep are extensively reared in the plains of the Capitanata, & hogs & goats are numerous on the shores of the Adriatic. Agriculture, which is in a very backward state, occupies the greater portion of the pop. The chief crops are wheat, maize, cotton, melons, rice, oil, wine, hemp, lint, tobacco, and fruits. The olive is extensively cultivated in Otranto, Bari, & Calabria. The wines of Naples, which are the best in Italy, are inferior to those of France and Spain, with the exception of the celebrated Lagrimæ di Cristo, a red wine grown in vineyards on the flanks of Vesuvius, which belong to the crown. Oranges & lemons are grown in the Capitanata, saffron in Basilicata, the Abruzzi & Calab.-Ult; lint and hemp are generally raised to a considerable extent. Manna is an important product of Calabria, & is monopolized by the government. Silk is an important product, especially in the T. di Lavoro, the Prin-cipati, & Calabria. The tunny, anchovy, mullet, and coral fisheries employ many of the inhabitants of the coasts, but the produce is not exported. Manufs. are unimportant, the chief are silks, linens and woollens at Naples, Sora, & Isola, and paper, glass and cutlery to a small extent. Commerce is mostly concentrated in the cap. Chief exports, olive oil, silk, hemp, wool, wine, grain, macaroni, and coral. Imports colonial & manuf. goods, iron and cutlery. Previous to 1837, the 2 kingdoms of Naples & Sicily had each a species of provincial council called Consulta, but these have been since united in the Consulta generale common to both kingdoms, as all the other political institutions are. The religion of the state is Roman Catholic; convents and nunneries are very numerous. It is calculated that there is one monk for every 250 of the population. Public instruction is entirely in the hands of the priests, and all classes are deplorably ignorant. A constitutional form of government was granted in 1848; and, on procuring liberty of the press, several journals were published, but in the end of 1849, they were entirely suppressed. Public revenue $15,000,000. The army is comprised of 64,237 men; and the naval force, 2 ships of the line, 5 frigates, 2 corvettes, 5 brigs, 1 goelette, & 12 steamers, agg. power, 3,850 horses. [Sicily.]

NAPLES (Ital. Napoli, anc. Neapolis), a city of Italy, cap. of the kingdom of the two Sicilies, & of the prov. and dist. of Napoli, on the N. side of the bay of Naples, at the foot of Vesuvius, 118 m. S.E. Rome. Lat. of observatory, 40° 51′ 8″ N., lon. 14° 15′ 5′ E. Pop. 1851, 416,475. Mean temp. of year 59° .6; winter 47°.6; summer 73°.1 Fahr. Naples, celebrated for its excellent climate, is beautifully situated at the bottom of the vast and picturesque bay of the same name. It rises in the form of an amphitheatre, is surrounded by walls, & defended by fort St. Elmo on the N.W., fort del Carmine, & the Castello-Nuovo, between the royal palace and the sea, and the Castello del Ovo, on a rock projecting into the Mediterranean. Streets narrow & ill-paved, except the Strada di Toledo, which is elegant. The finest promenades are the Chiaja, which extends from the Castello del Ovo to the tomb of Virgil, & the Mole. Chief edifices, a gothic cathedral, built on 100 granite columns which belonged to the temple of Apollo; the churches of the holy Apostles, built on the ruins of a temple of Mercury; San Paulo, Filipo Neri, Spiritu Santo, & San Martino; the royal palace, a vast building splendidly ornamented; the old palace used as a record office; the Palazzo degli Studii Publico, which contains the Borbonica library, museum of antiquities, &c. Outside of the walls is a royal residence called the Capo di Monte. Naples is the usual residence of the sovereign, seat of an archbishop, and of the central administration of the kingdom, & has a commercial tribunal, arsenal, and cannon foundry, ship building yards, & a royal marine hospital. Its university, founded in 1224, had in 1841, 1,559 students. It has an episcopal lyceum, medico-chirurgical school, veterinary school, deaf and dumb institution, royal military school, schools of design and music, an observatory, a botanic garden, a mint, several learned societies, five public libraries, one of which, the Borbonica library, has 165,000 vols. and 3,000 MSS., and many public schools; but education is of the lowest kind, & not generally diffused; an exchange, ten theatres, among which the opera San Carlos, is one of the largest in Italy. Three of the minor theatres are devoted to the exhibition of Polincello (Punch). The charitable establishments comprise hospitals for the sick, aged, & foundlings, but notwithstanding its streets are infested with mendicants of all ages & both sexes. That portion of the pop. called Lazzaroni, live without domiciles, in a state of the most degrading filth, poverty, & wretchedness. The chief manufs. of Naples are maccaroni, silks, embroidery, cloths & flannels, carpets, & chemical products; it has royal type foundries, and iron and glass works. It is the first port of the kingdom; its harbor is formed by a mole which extends from the centre of the city into the bay. Chief exports, agricultural produce. Imports, manuf. goods and colonial produce. Naples was founded by the Greeks, who called it Parthenope. Virgil studied here; the city, enlarged by Adrian and Constantine, was sacked by Belisarius in 536; peopled successively under the Normans, the emperors of Germany, and the kings of Spain. It has often suffered from earthquakes, and from eruptions of Vesuvius. The French took it in 1799, and again in 1805. Joseph Bonaporte was made king of Naples, but was replaced by Murat in 1808, and the latter was driven from it by the Austrians in 1814. Naples was the scene of a most disgraceful outrage in May 1848, when it was plundered by the Lazzaroni, and 1,500 lives were lost. Among the numerous objects of interest in the vicinity of Naples, are Vesuvius, Pompeii, & Herculaneum, & the isle of Capri, in its bay. A railroad to Nocera, 21 m. S.E., with a branch to Castellamare, & one to Capua, 19 m. From the latter a branch extends E. 10 miles, to Nola. Pop. of the prov. of Naples 1851, 822,142.

The suburbs abound with picturesque scenery, enriched with beautiful groves of cedar. The city was originally laid out in lots of one acre each, with a reservation of four acres for public buildings. The boundaries have since been enlarged. It contains a state house, court house, jail, a market house, a lunatic hospital, the state penitentiary, the halls of Nashville university, several academies, 3 banks, with an aggregate cap. of $6,191,500, 9 printing offices issuing 5 daily, 7 weekly, and 2 monthly publications. The churches are mostly large & elegant structures, 15 in number, belonging to the Baptists, Campbellite or Reformed Baptist, Episcopal, Methodists, Presbyterians, & Roman Catholics. The state house is built on a square plot of ground consisting of 4 acres, in the centre of the city, & elevated 197 feet above the river surface. Its architecture is of the Grecian order, with a Doric base supporting on the four sides porticos of the Ionic order. The whole structure is composed of fossillated limestone, hewn from the quarries in the neighborhood of the city. The hall of representatives is 70 by 100 feet, height 42 feet; the senate chamber is an oblong, 35 by 70 feet, & the library 35 by 35 feet. The building is a parallelogram, 140 feet by 270, surrounded by a terrace 17 feet in width, & 6 ft. in height. Nashville university was founded in 1806, has a president, 7 professors, 432 alumni, 75 students, & 10,200 volumes in its libraries. The commencement is on the first Wednesday in October. The buildings are four in number within the college compani, consisting of 8 acres of ground, tastefully laid out. The mineralogical cabinet has 20,000 specimens; & the apparatus for illustrating the experimental sciences is very complete. The medical department was founded in 1850, has 11 professors & 152 students. Lectures commence on the first Monday in November. Nashville is the centre of a vast railroad system, radiating in all directions. Its commerce is very extensive; the tonnage in 1852, was 4,682 tons, entirely composed of steamboats navigating the Cumberland river, & engaged in the conveyance of passengers, & the traffic of goods & produce.

NEBRA, a town of Prussian Saxony, reg. & 19 m. W.S.W. Merseburg, on the Unstrut. Pop. 1,746.

NEBRASKA, ter., as erected by the late act of Congress, is bounded as follows, viz.: N. by the 49th parallel of lat., separating it from the British possessions; S. by the 40th parallel a few miles below the north-west corner of the state of Missouri, E. by the Missouri river, the western line of Missouri & the western line of Minnesota, & W. by the main ridge of the Rocky Mountains. Area, 275,000 sq. ms. Surface of the country from the Missouri river westward to the base of the mountains, is rolling prairie, but little diversified in its aspect save by the intersection of its streams. The soil, for a space varying from 50 to 100 miles W. of the Missouri river & the state line, is nearly identical with that of Iowa & Missouri. The highlands are open prairies, covered with grasses; the river bottom a deep rich loam, shaded by dense forests. From this first district to about the mouth of L'eau qui Court (Running Water River), it is one boundless expanse of rolling prairie, so largely intermixed with sand as to be almost unfit for ordinary agricultural purposes. The prairies are, however, carpeted with succulent grasses, affording an inexhaustible supply for herds of cattle & sheep. The third district, extending in a belt of many miles E. & W. of the Mandan village, on the most northern bend of the Missouri river, and southward across the southern boundary of the territory, is a formation of marl & earthy limestone. Soil very productive, especially adapted to wheat, rye, barley, Indian corn, & oats. It is in this district that what are called buttes by the Canadian French and cerros by the Spaniards, are profusely scattered. Here & there the traveller finds surfaces varying in diameter from a hundred feet to a mile, elevated from fifteen to fifty feet above the surrounding surface. They are not hills or knobs, the sides of which are more or less steep, & covered with grass. Their sides are nearly perpendicular, their surfaces flat, & often covered with mountain cherries & other shrubs. They have the appearance of having been suddenly elevated above the surrounding surface by some specific cause. This marl & limestone formation is, in many localities, worked into fantastic or picturesque forms by the action of the elements. In one place, especially, called by the traders La Mauvaise Terre (the bad ground), & about thirty miles in diameter, it has assumed a marvellous variety of singular forms. From one point of view it assumes the aspect of an extensive & frowning fortification; from another, the appearance of an oriental city crowned with domes & minarets; and from a third, the appearance of a sterile, broken, and unattractive congregation of incongruous elements. These delusive appearances are produced by distance & the position of the sun. The wrecks of the diluvian period of geology are spread all over this region, and most profusely on that portion north of the Missouri r. Detached masses of rock, some of them hundreds of tons in weight, wholly unconnected with the adjacent geological formations, & evidently allied to those of the northern Rocky Mountain region, dot the whole country. The district lying north of the Missouri riv. & west of Minnesota, is a succession of undulating plains, the soil of which is quite fertile but rather dry. These plains are covered with a thick grassy sward, which sustains innumerable herds of bison, elk, and deer.

The district at the base of the Black Hills, between that range & the Rocky Mountains, includes the valley of the Yellow Stone, of the Maria's river, & a variety of other small valleys, circumvallated by an amphitheatre of mountains & gorgeous mountain scenery. The valley of the Yellow Stone is spacious, fertile, and salubrious. The streams are fringed with trees, from whence the valley expands many miles to the mntns. The traveller can almost imagine himself upon the Danube, for the valley is sprinkled over at long intervals with cyclopean structures of granite closely assimilated in appearance, from a distant view, to the stern & solitary castles with which Europe was covered & guarded during the middle ages. But these structures exceed those of Europe in magnitude & grandeur, & the woods & waters are disposed with a taste and beauty which the highest art must ever toil after in vain. It is encircled by a rich girdle of heights and mountains, the bases & darker sides of which are obscured in shrubs, & the summits tufted with noble forest trees. And here is to be the seat of a populous & powerful community in the far future. The Missouri river was ascended by Lewis & Clarke, in canoes, a distance of 3,000 miles. It has been navigated by steamboats to the foot of the Great Falls, 2,500 miles. From the point where the Nodoway (a Missouri stream) enters it upward, the northern bluffs recede, leaving a broad, open, rolling plain. On the S. bank the highlands skirt the stream closely. Above Council Bluffs, opposite Kanesville, Iowa, the bluffs on both sides recede, & there is little or no timber save only bunches of cotton-wood. From the mouth of Jacques river the river valley continues to become narrower to the base of the mountains. The river valley is the only rich alluvion—the highlands being intermixed with sand largely, & unfit for agriculture except in the third district already described. Down as low as the Mandan village the water is as clear as the Ohio. From thence, onward to its mouth, it is impregnated by its tributaries with marl & sand, & always looks as muddy as if in a freshet. The spring freshet usually occurs about the 1st of June. Except during this freshet, the ascent above Council Bluffs, by boats of 50 tons, is arduous & difficult, & its descent by such boats nearly impossible, on account of the number & shifting character of the bars. There is a difference of 7 degrees in the specific gravity of the waters of the Missouri at the mouth of the Kansas river and the waters of the latter stream. The former has many more tributaries running through marl & quicksand. The average rapidity of the waters of the Missouri is nearly twice that of the Upper Mississippi. The Orinoco only exceeds it in velocity. The Missouri on the 41st parallel is more than 500 feet above the Mississippi on the same line. After leaving the Great Falls, the tributaries of the Missouri are not numerous, & none of them above Council Bluffs are navigable for anything but canoes. The large space intervening between it & the great Platte (or Nebraska) is destitute of streams, & nearly so of springs. Hence the grass on the larger portion of this immense tract becomes withered & stunted very early in the season. Its chief tributaries are the Platte, the Sioux, the Jacques, the L'eau qui Court, the White, the Hart, & the Yellow Stone.

The Platte or Nebraska rises near the 40th degree of latitude, & longitude 106°, in the Rocky Mountains, & flows thence northward & eastward to its outlet, receiving the South Fork in lat. 41°, & lon. 100°. At the junction of the two forks the river is over 5,000 feet in width, & thence onward varies from one to two miles in width. It is so shallow & so capricious, in consequence of its quicksands, that it may be considered as almost useless for purposes of commerce. Were its waters confined to a channel of a thousand feet in width it would be one of the noblest streams in the world; but this may be considered impossible. The valley is from eight to fifteen & twenty miles in width. It is generally a dead flat, elevated only from eighteen to twenty-six inches above the surface of the stream, & the greater portion liable to inundation. It is entirely destitute of timber, but produces a luxuriant growth of the richest grapes.

Of the Sweet Water r., an affl. of the Nebraska, Fremont says, "It is 120 miles long, heading in the South Pass. It is a handsome mountain stream, with a well-defined valley, in general sandy, & five miles wide. The immediate river bottom is a good soil, with abundance of soft green grass." Again, of the ascent to the Great South Pass, he says, "The ascent had been so gradual that with all the intimate knowledge possessed by Carson, who had made this country his home for seventeen years, we were obliged to watch very closely to find the place at which we had reached the culminating point. Approaching it from the mouth of the Sweet Water, a sandy plain, 120 miles long, conducts, by a gradual and regular ascent, to the summit, about 7,000 feet above the sea; & the traveller, without being reminded of any change by toilsome ascents, suddenly finds himself on the waters which flow to the Pacific Ocean." Of his ascent to one of the highest peaks of the Rocky Mountains, from this pass, he thus speaks: "We were now approaching the loftiest part of the Wind river chain; winding our way up along a ravine, we came unexpectedly in view of a most beautiful lake, set like a gem in the mountains. The sheet of water lay transversely across the direction we had been pursuing; and, descending the steep, rocky ridge, where it was necessary to lead our horses, we followed its banks to the southern extremity. Here a view of the utmost grandeur burst upon our eyes. With nothing between us & the base to lessen the effect of the whole height, a grand bed of snow-capt mountains rose before us, pile upon pile, glowing in the bright light of an August day. Immediately below them lay the lake, between two ridges, each covered with dark pines, which swept down from the main chain to the spot where we stood. Here, where the lake glittered in the open sunlight, its shores of yellow sand & the light foliage of the aspen groves contrasted well with the gloomy pines. Aug. 15th. Reached the peak after five days' exertion. At break of day we set out, having secured strength for the day by a hearty breakfast. We soon had the satisfaction to find ourselves riding along the huge wall which forms the central summits of the chain. There, at last, it rose by our sides, a nearly perpendicular wall of granite, terminating two or three thousand feet above our heads, in a serrated line of broken, jagged cones. Here were three small lakes of a green color, each of perhaps a thousand yards in diameter, and apparently very deep. Having divested ourselves of all unnecessary clothing, & put the mules on a bench, about a hundred feet above the lakes, where there was a patch of good grass, we commenced the ascent of the wall, to reach its highest peak, sitting down when we found the breath beginning to fail. At intervals springs rushed from the rocks; & at 1,800 feet above the lakes, we came to the snow line. From this point our progress was uninterrupted climbing. Reached the summit, a narrow crest. We mounted the barometer in the snow of the summit, & fixing a ramrod in a crevice, unfurled the national flag to wave in the breeze, where never flag waved before. The barometer stood at 18,-293, the attached thermometer of 44°, giving 13,570 ft. for the elevation above the Gulf of Mexico. Fields of snow lay far below us, boundless mountains stretched before us. A stillness the most profound, & a terrible solitude, forced themselves constantly on the mind, as the great features of the place."

The Yellow Stone has its sources in the Rocky Mountains, but their exact location has never been explored. It flows north-eastwardly to its mouth. It has been navigated for eighty miles by steamboats, & may be rendered usefully available for other craft two hundred & fifty miles. This valley is the garden spot of Nebraska. It is finely timbered & watered. In the future, commercial intercourse will be carried on between this valley & that of Clarke's branch of the Columbia. Gen. Clarke found a fine wagon road connecting them in 1806, & Major Stephens has recently discovered an open gap through the Rocky Mountains. These two valleys, embracing the sources of the two greatest rivers on the continent, which will bear their products to the two great oceans, surrounded by other smaller but no less rich ones, will be the future Switzerland of America. Vegetation in Iowa is some weeks later than in Missouri. In Eastern Nebraska it is some weeks later than in Iowa, and in the vicinity of the mountains some weeks later still. From the city of St. Louis, travelling either northward or westward, the climate becomes colder about in the same degree—the difference of elevation travelling west being about equivalent in its effects to the difference of latitude travelling north. Snow falls at the foot of the mountains about the 1st September, and at Council Bluffs about the 1st November. Coal has been found in the north-western counties of Missouri, & it is probably may be found in the south-east portion of Nebraska.

Forming the W. extremity of the great plain of N Europe, the territory is perfectly flat, with the exception of a few low hills which traverse the provs. of Gelderland, Overyssel, & Utrecht; a considerable portion of it is formed of alluvium, or rescued by human industry from the sea, below the level of which much of it is situated. From the point of the Helder to the Hoek van Holland, at the mouth of the Maas, 75 miles, the coast is partly protected by natural downs, about 40 feet in height, composed of fine sand upheaved by the sea, & fixed by plantations of sea grass (arundo arenaria); on the other parts of the coast, especially in Zeeland, Friesland, & Gelderland, the sea is confined by enormous artificial dykes. The principal gulfs of the German Ocean, on this coast, are the Zuyder Zee, the Lauwer Zee, & the Dollart. The principal rivers are the Rhine, Maas, & Scheldt; on entering the Netherlands, the Rhine separates into two branches, the S.most of which, called the Waal, flows W. 45 m., & joins the Maas near Gorcum; whilst the other, called the Rijn (Rhine), flows N.W. 6 m. to near Westervoort, where it again divides; the New Yssel on right, flowing N. 65 m. to the Zuyder Zee, & the Beneden Rijn on left, flowing W. 30 m. to Wykby-Duurstede. Here the Rhine again separates; the main stream called the Leek, or Lek, after a W. course of 35 m., joins the Maas 7 m. E. Rotterdam, while a branch on right called the Kromme Rijn, flows N.W. to Utrecht; here the Rhine splits for the fourth time, the rt. branch called the Vecht, flowing N. to the Zuyder Zee, & the left, called the Old Rhine, W. past Woerden & Leyden, 35 m. to Katwyk on the German Ocean. [Meuse—Scheldt.] The chief lakes are those of Haarlem (now being drained), & the Y. Marshes are numerous, & some of them, as the Bourtagne and Peel morasses in the E. are very extensive. The isls. form two principal groups; one situated in the estuary of the Scheldt & the Meuse. comprises N. & S. Beveland, Walcheren, Tholen, Schouwen, Over Flakkee, Voorn, Beyerland, Ysselmonde, &c.; the other, at the entrance of the Zuyder Zee includes the Texel, Vlieland, Ter-Schelling, & Ameland. There are several smaller islands in the Zuyder Zee. Climate less extreme than in N. Germany. Mean temp. of year (at Amsterdam) 49°.8, winter 35°.6, summer 64°.4 Fahr. Snow not very abundant. The canal from Amsterdam to the Helder is frequently frozen for 3 months in the year, & the Zuyder Zee is frequently frozen over. Atmosphere humid, especially in the W. provs. Winds generally strong, & tempests frequent in winter & spring. Prevailing winds N. & N.E.; when W. & N. winds are violent, they cause inundations by accumulating the waters of the sea upon the coasts, or by repelling that of the rivers. The great amount of stagnant water, would render the country uninhabitable but for the strong winds which purify the atmosphere. The soil is argillaceous, has no minerals except a little bog iron, but immense deposits of turf and potters' clay. No stone of any size is to be found in the soil; & though generally speaking, not a wooded country, large trees are by no means rare in Holland. The most fertile provs. are those of the S., & the least so those of the N., a large tract of the formerly barren heath on the E. has been brought under culture by the pauper colony of Frederick's Oord; 3-4ths of the land are in pasture. Corn raised is insufficient for home consumption. The chief crops are rye, buckwheat, barley, & oats; wheat is cultivated chiefly near Utrecht, in Friesland, & Zeeland; vegetables, madder, millet, & horse-radish, in the last 2 provs.; flax is extensively cultivated in the S. provinces; tobacco in Utrecht & Gelderland, & the vine in Luxemburg; potatoes, hemp, rape-seed, chicory, mustard, hops, and beet root, are cultivated generally. The flora resembles that of other European countries situated in the same latitude, but aquatic plants are more varied & extensive. Horticulture has long been a favorite employment of the Dutch, especially at Haarlem, which still exports a considerable number of tulip & other flower roots. Rabbits are very abundant, as well as water-fowl and reptiles in the marshes. Storks are numerous, & almost superstitiously revered in some districts, and means are taken to prevent the destruction & augment the number of these useful birds. The coasts abound in cod, turbot, sole, & other flat fish. The cattle of Holland are much esteemed, & the draught horses are excellent. Dairy work is the chief branch of rural industry; butter & cheese are in great repute, & form objects of extensive commerce. The fisheries formed the origin of prosperity in the Netherlands, & the herrings prepared by the Dutch still maintain their superiority. In 1842, 1,603 boats, manned by 8,280 men, were employed in this fishery. The whale fishery in the sea of Spitzbergen, has been profitably carried on since the 16th century. The manufacturing industry of the country is very active, Holland having long been celebrated for its linens, velvets, & paper; & during the 17th & 18th centuries, its typography enjoyed a well-merited reputation. The absence of coal, & the prevalence of strong winds, have led to the adoption of the wind-mill as a motive power, & it is universally employed in all kinds of work. The chief manufs. are linen of the finest quality, woollens, silks, & velvets, paper, leather, cordage, hats, ribbons, saltpetre, & tobacco. The manuf. of cotton has been recently introduced. There are numerous distilleries of "Geneva" (rather jenever, from the juniper berry, with which the gin is flavored), or "Hollands," & extensive bleach-fields, brick and tile works. Holland presents the appearance of an immense net-work of canals, which form the usual access not only to towns & vills., but even to private mansions. The most important is that of N. Holland, between Amsterdam & the Helder, the finest work of the kind in Europe, 50 m. in length, 125 feet broad at the surface, & 21 feet in depth. By means of this important work, ships bound for Amsterdam avoid the danger & delay of navigating the Zuyder Zee; it is spacious enough to admit 2 frigates abreast. Since not only the surface but the bed of many of the canals is above the level of the land, the drainage of the polders or meadows, through which they pass, is an object of great solicitude; it is effected by means of pumps worked by wind mills. In a country where human industry is engaged in a continual struggle with the sea, from the domains of which it has been conquered, the management of dykes, canals, & roads, is a special object of attention on the part of the government. The roads, which are always formed on the dykes & bordered by canals, are excellent. In 1849 lines of railroad were completed from Amsterdam W. to Haarlem & S. to Leyden, the Hague & Rotterdam, & S. & E. by Utrecht to Arnhem. The principal imports consist of colonial products & manuf. goods, corn, wines, cotton, wool, & leather; valued in 1851 at 303,993,224 florins. Chief exports are butter, cheese, dried fish, gin, the manufs. of the country & colonial produce; valued at 242,744,806 florins. With few natural resources, the inhabitants of Holland were driven to commerce as a matter of necessity. At the end of the 16th century, they gained possession of the Molucca islands, & secured a monopoly of the spice trade: at the end of the 17th entury, nearly half of the shipping of Europe belonged to Holland, but in consequence of the wars in which she was at that time engaged, & the increase of the mercantile navies of other countries, she soon lost her commercial pre-eminence. Holland took an active share in the wars against Louis XIV. It was conquered by the French at the commencement of the revolution, & in 1795 formed the Batavian republic; in 1806 it was made the kingdom of Holland, which Napoleon reduced to a dep. of France in 1810. After her incorporation with the French empire, Holland was deprived of all her colonies in the eastern seas. At the establishment of peace in 1814, these colonial possessions were restored, & a period of commercial posperity succeeded. Holland & Belgium were then united into a single kingdom; but this union of two countries, betwixt which no sympathy existed, was broken by the revolt of Belgium in 1830. By the treaty of London, 19th April 1839, Belgium ceded to Holland a portion of Luxemburg & Limburg. The Dutch occupy the country of the ancient Batavi & Frisii; their language is a dialect of the German. Flemish is still spoken in the S. The greater number of the inhabitants are Protestants, viz., 1,834,924; Roman Catholics 1,161,148, Greeks & Armenians 49, Jews 58,518, not connected with any church, 1,369. The Reformed Church (by far the most numerous body, & of which the reigning family are members) is Calvinistic in point of doctrine, & its form of government is Presbyterian. The greatest toleration has always existed in regard to religion. The Roman Catholics are under the bishops of Utrecht. Education is well conducted & very generally diffused. The teachers are placed under the guardianship of 70 inspectors, who act under an inspector-general, depending on the minister of the interior; they grant licenses for the estab. of schools, & present to the government, 3 times a-year, an account of the state of public instruction. In 1846 there were in Holland 3 universities, at Leyden, Groningen, & Utrecht; 2 athenæums, & 68 latin schools. For elementary instruction, there were 70 district, 2,125 communal, & 630 private schools. The ecclesiastical schools comprised 6 Roman Catholic & 2 Protestant seminaries; 1 Jewish school; there are 3 military, 1 naval, & 1 veterinary school, & numerous academies of the fine arts; 2 institutions for deaf mutes, & one for the blind. The proportion of attendance at school is 1 in 8 of the entire country; while in Drenthe & Overyssel the proportion is 1 in 6. The benevolent institutions comprise numerous hospitals for the sick & infirm, & for orphans; societies of public good, & several pauper colonies. Mendicity is interdicted throughout the kingdom. The people are remarkable for the extreme cleanliness of their streets & dwellings. The government is a constitutional representative monarchy, the title of the sovereign is King of the Netherlands, Prince of Orange Nassau, Grand Duke of Luxemburg & Duke of Limburg. The usual residence of the king is at the Hague. The Dutch afford a very remarkable example of industry & perseverance; to a country almost floating on the waters, they have given a firm foundation; without stone, & with comparatively little timber, in their dominions, they have built spacious cities; & though nearly destitute of arable land, their towns have often been granaries for surrounding states. With a territory not much larger than Wales, this people have maintained an army, a fleet, & a commerce, ranking high among the states of Europe. The standing army in 1853 consisted of 1 reg. of grenadiers, 8 reg. of infantry, 4 regs. 2 squadrons of cavalry, 3 bat. of artillery, & a corps of engineers & a bat. of sap. & miners. Navy, 1st July, 1853, consisted of 97 vessels, with 2,000 guns, & 49 gun-boats with 174 guns. Public rev. 1853, 71,685,772 florins, of which amount nearly half is raised by direct taxation & excise duties. Expenditure, 70,085,078 florins. National debt 1,206,493,330 florins. The marine force in actual service on 1st July, 1852, comprised 6,087 men, exclusive of those in the colonies. The merchant marine is comprised of 2,000 vessels, aggregate burden 20,000 lasts. The following table shows the extent & pop. of the colonial possessions of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, in 1849:—

The Netherlands is a name, which, for several centuries, was applied to the countries now forming the kingdoms of Belgium, & the Netherlands, & part of the N. of France (deps. Nord. & Pas-de-Calais). This country belonged almost entirely to Charles V. United to Franche-Comté, it formed the circle of Burgundy. From this 7 of the N. provs. separated themselves in 1579, & formed the Republic of Holland, or the United Provs. Part of the low country was conquered by Louis XIV., & called the French Netherlands; the rest, first under the dominion of Spain, passed in 1714 to that of Austria, & was called Spanish Netherlands, Austrian Netherlands, or Belgium.

NEUCHATEL, or NEUFCHATEL, a frontier canton of Switzerland, in the N.W., having S.E. the Lake of Neuchâtel, & on other sides France & the cants. Bern & Vaud. Area, 281 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 70,679, of whom 64,952 are Protestants. The Jura mountains intersect it from S. to N., & the river Doubs bounds it on the N.W. Pastures occupy most part of the surface. Along the lake are numerous vineyards, & good wines are exported to the adjacent Swiss cantons. Except in wine, kitchen vegetables, & hay, the vegetable products are insufficient for home consumption, & corn is imported from the cants. Bern & Basle. Many cattle are reared, & cheese is an export of consequence. From 18,000 to 20,000 hands are more or less employed in watchmaking, in both the urban & rural districts, & from 100,000 to 120,000 watches, of which 35,000 were of gold, were estimated to be annually produced, & sent to all parts of the world. The capital engaged in this manufacture is estimated at $1,930,000. Cotton fabrics for export to Holland, Prussia, Belgium, & Italy; hosiery, cutlery, & metallic wares generally, are other chief manufs. Until 1848 Neuchâtel acknowledged the sovereignty of Prussia, but a revolution having then occurred, it is now a democratic member of the Swiss confederation, in which it holds the 21st place. Principal towns are Neuchâtel, Chaux-de-Fonds, Valengin, & Le Locle.

NEUCHATEL (Germ. Neuenburg), a town of Switzerland, on the N.W. shore of the Lake Neuchâtel, 25 m. W. Bern. Pop. 5,300. It has an anc. castle, the former residence of the dukes of Neuchâtel, a cathedral, of the 12th century, a town hall, with a public library, an orphan asylum, founded in 1722, several hospitals, a college, & a collection of natural history. It is the chief entrepôt of the cant., & has considerable trade in wine, corn, cattle, watches, lace, cotton stuffs, &c.

NEUCHATEL (LAKE OF), one of the larger lakes of Switzerland, in the W., 18 m. N. the Lake of Geneva, enclosed by the cants. Neuchâtel, Vaud, Freiburg, & Bern. Length 24 m., average breadth 4 m. Estimated area, 90 sq. m., height above the sea 143 feet, & depth 426 feet. It receives several rivers; the Broye brings to it the surplus waters of Lake Morat, & it discharges its own N. by the Thiel through the Lake of Bienne into the Aar. Its scenery is less sublime than that of the other Swiss lakes, but its banks are pleasant, & on them are the towns Neuchâtel & Yverdun, between which a steamer plies daily.

NEWARK, city, port of entry, and capital of Essex co., N. J., 9 m. W. New York, 49 N.E. Trenton, 215 W. It is in 44° 45′ N. lat., & 74° 10′ & 2° 49′ W. lon. from W. Situated on the W. side of Passaic river, between 4 & 5 miles by the course of the river from its entrance into Newark bay, & on the New Jersey r. r., 9 miles from New York, & 80 from Philadelphia. It is the most populous & flourishing place in the state. Population in 1820, 10,950; in 1840, 17,290; in 1850, 38,894; in 1854, 45,000. The Passaic river is navigable to this place for vessels of 100 tons burden. There is a communication almost hourly with the city of New York by railroad. The Morris canal passes through it. The city is regularly laid out with broad and straight streets, with two large & elegant public grounds, bordered with lofty trees, & bounded by the principal avenues. The ground is elevated 30 or 40 feet above the level of the river, & is open & airy. The city is abundantly supplied with pure water from a spring 2 miles distant, in pipes laid by a joint stock company, and seven miles of iron pipes have been laid for the distribution of the water to the inhabitants; and it is well lighted with gas. The city is generally well built, mostly of wood, but a considerable number of brick & stone. The court-house is a large edifice, in a commanding position in the W. part of the city, built of brown freestone, in the Egyptian style of architecture. The New Jersey r. r. company have a large and fine building for a depot, which is an ornament to the place. There are 29 churches,—1 Associate Reformed, 1 Baptist, 1 Bethel, 1 Dutch Reformed, 3 Episcopal, 9 Methodist, 8 Presbyterian, 4 Roman Catholic, and 1 Universalist. Several of them exhibit much architectural beauty. There are 4 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,708,650, & 3 insurance offices. There is an apprentices' library, a circulating library, a mechanics' association for scientific & literary improvement, who have a library & philosophical apparatus, & a mercantile literary association, who support public lectures, several seminaries & high schools. The commerce of Newark is considerable and increasing. A whaling company was incorporated in 1833, who are successfully prosecuting the business. The tonnage of the port in 1853 was 8,470 tons. The manufactures of Newark consist of leather in various styles, carriages, railroad cars, India-rubber goods, machinery, various articles of cast & wrought iron, steel, & brass; jewellery, cutlery, paints, &c., & employing a capital of $4,336,348, and producing articles valued at $10,882,662. There are 4 printing offices issuing 3 daily & 2 weekly newspapers. This town was settled in 1666 by a company from Guilford, Branford, Milford, & New Haven, Conn. It is therefore eminently New England, & Puritanic in its origin. They purchased the territory, including several neighboring towns, of the Indians, for 1300 New England currency, 12 Indian blankets, and 12 guns. They formed a government, & administered it, often disputing the claims of the proprietaries, by holding to an original & superior right derived from purchase from the natives. Robert Treat, Esq., afterwards governor of Connecticut, was chosen the first recorder or town-clerk.

NEW BEDFORD, city, port of entry, & semi-capital of Bristol county, Mass., 55 ms. S. of Boston; 28 E. of Newport; 49 S.E. of Providence; 226 E. New York; 434 from Washington; in 41° 38′ 10″ N. lat., & 70° 55′ 16″ E. lon. Pop. in 1830, 7,592; 1840, 12,087; 1850, 16,443; 1851, 18,044; 1854, 20,000. New Bedford was set off from Dartmouth & incorporated as a town in the year 1787; was incorporated as a city in the year 1847. It is delightfully situated on the west side of Acushnet river; directly opposite is the flourishing town of Fairhaven, one mile distant, to which it is connected by a bridge & ferry. The land rises gradually from the river to a considerable height; the approach to it, in sailing up the harbor, is not excelled in beauty by that of any town in the country. It is laid out with much regularity; the streets crossing each other at right angles; much taste is manifested in the construction of its public buildings & dwellings; many of the private dwellings are elegant, and completely embosomed in trees & shrubbery. It contains a city hall, built of granite, 100 feet long, 61 feet wide, & three stories high; a court house built of brick, & a custom house, a handsome granite building; four banks with an aggregate capital of $1,900,000; an institution for savings, with deposits to the amount of $1,200,000; 23 churches, two of which are fine granite buildings,—2 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 4 Orthodox, 5 Christian Baptist, 5 Methodists, 1 Roman Catholic, 2 Unitarian, & 1 Seamen's Bethel; 1 academy; 32 public schools, one of which is a high school, a fine large brick building. In these schools are educated at the public expense 3,499 children at an annual cost of $30,000, besides 21 private schools, in which are taught 600 scholars. These schools are of a high order, and justly the pride of the citizens. The fire department is one of the most efficient in New England. There are 33 manufactories of all sorts; the most important of which is, 15 for oil & candles, the product of the whale fishery; one large cotton factory, called the Wamsutta mill, propelled by steam, containing 12,500 spindles, 288 looms, employing 230 hands, & turns out daily 4,800 yards of cotton cloth, which has obtained several medals for its superior quality; one cordage factory, with an invested capital of $75,000, employing 100 hands, & producing annually 1,000 tons of cordage, celebrated for being of the best quality; a large paper hanging manufactory which turns out 400,000 rolls of paper annually; also a rivet factory worked by steam, & two iron foundries; 4 printing offices, issuing 2 daily, 3 weekly, & 1 monthly publication; & 186 mercantile stores. There are two marine railways, one of them capable of taking up large ships. Railroad cars leave three times daily for Boston & Providence, and every afternoon for Fall River & Stonington to connect with steam boats at those places, running to New York. There are two cemeteries, each containing about 8 acres, called the Rural, & Oak Grove; the latter is pleasantly situated & tastefully laid out. The whale fishery is the principal business which is carried on at New Bedford, & has been the means chiefly of building it up to its present importance in population & wealth. As early as 1764, small sloops of 40 to 60 tons burthen, were fitted out to cruise during the summer months, off the capes of Virginia & Hatteras for sperm whales; taking care to return to port before the equinoctical gales commenced; the blubber was brought into port & tried out on shore. Gradually the voyages were extended in larger vessels to the bay of Mexico, & about the West India Islands, thence to the Azores, & Cape de Verd Islands, & coast of Guinea. In 1791 a ship called the Rebecca was fitted out for a whaling voyage to the Pacific Ocean; this ship was the first American whaler that ever entered that Ocean in pursuit of whales; her voyage was successful. From these small beginnings, the whale fishery has steadily increased to its present importance, with the exception of the interruption of the Revolutionary war, & of the war of 1812 with Great Britain, until New Bedford has become the greatest whaling port in the world. Her ships now circumnavigate the globe, & explore every ocean and sea from the Arctic to the Antarctic in pursuit of whales. The number of vessels employed in the whale fishery from the United States at this time, 1852, is 620, their tonnage, 193,990, of which there are belonging to the District of New Bedford, 372 vessels, employing upwards of 10,000 seamen. There was imported into the United States, during the year 1851, of sperm oil, 99,591 bbls.; of right whale oil, 328,483 bbls.; of whalebone, 3,916,500 lbs.: amounting in value to $10,028,089 of which there were imported into the District of New Bedford, of sperm oil, 60,465 bbls.; of right whale oil, 175,460 bbls.; of whalebone, 2,473,500 lbs.; amounting in value to $5,781,118; of which value, about $5,000,000 was brought into the port of New Bedford. The average length of the voyages of the right whale ships are 36 months; sperm whale ships 44 months. New Bedford is the greatest nursery for seamen in the United States; every whaling ship takes about ten green hands, mostly farmers' sons from the country; upwards of 3,000 seamens' protections are annually granted at the custom house. New Bedford can not only claim the honor of sending the first American whaler into the Pacific ocean (the ship Rebecca); but also of owning the ship Dartmouth, memorable in history for being the ship which brought over from England the tea, that was thrown over board in Boston harbor at the commencement of the Revolutionary war; & also of owning the first ship which hoisted the American ensign in London after the close of the Revolutionary war. This ship was called the "Maria," & is still in being, staunch & strong, & is at this time, 1858, on a whaling voyage to the Indian ocean. Her register dates back to 1782, & it is believed she is the oldest ship belonging to the United States.

NEW BRITAIN, or HUDSON BAY TERRITORY, a vast tract of country lying N. of Canada, the United States, and Vancouver's I. The Atlantic bounding it on the E., the Pacific on the W., & the Arctic Ocean on the N. Area, 2,500,000 sq. ms. Pop. 180,000. Capital, York Fort. In this space is comprehended the great inland sea, known as Hudson Bay, & an immense number of large lakes & rivers W. of it, many of the former upwards of 100 m. in length. Amongst these are the Great Bear Lake, Great Slave Lake, Deer Lake, Winnipeg, &c. It also comprises a portion of the Rocky Mountains, & several islands on the W. coast. This country is divided into four large departments or regions:—the N. department, which includes all the establishments in the far N. & frozen regions, comprises the valley of the Mackenzie r., & the country between the sterile region & the Rocky Mountains, N. of Lake Athabasca. The S. department extends on both shores of James Bay, and along the S. shores of Hudson Bay, as far W. as Cape Churchill. It extends inland to the ridge which forms the N. boundary of Canada, & to the Lakes Superior, Winnipeg, Deer, and Wollaston. Along the shores of the lakes it is swampy; but inland it is well wooded. Surface undulating, but not hilly. It produces the fur-bearing animals in great abundance. The Montreal department, including the country in the neighborhood of Montreal, up the Ottawa river, & along the N. shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence & Esquimaux Bay; & the Columbia department, which comprehends an immense extent of country to the W. of the Rocky Mountains. Nearly all the rivers in the Hudson Bay territory flow N.; those in the S. parts falling into Hudson's & St. James Bays, & those in the N.W. including the Great Mackenzie river, discharging themselves into the N. Ocean. The country on the E. side of Hudson Bay, forming part of the peninsula of Labrador, is called East Main; that on the S.W. New S. Wales. The latter, which is much better known than the former, abounds in lakes & rivers. The Hudson Bay territory has yet been little explored; but its S. & S.W. parts are known to be well adapted for agriculture. Meantime, it is used by the Hudson Bay Company, in whose possession it is merely as hunting-grounds, from which to obtain supplies of furs for the markets of the world. These are probably upwards of twenty different kinds; the most valuable of which is that of the black fox. The other articles of commerce are oils, dried and salted fish, feathers, quills, & walrus ivory. The Hudson Bay Company was chartered by Charles II., in 1670.

Actual Import into London of Furs and Skins, from September 1, 1850, to September 1, 1851—comprising the entire collection of the Hudson Bay Company, and the entire collection from Canada and the United States, (except shipments made direct from the United States to Germany, and small lots used for home consumption, which cannot be ascertained.)—These entire imports were sold at auction in London, in January, March, & September, 1851.

NEWBROUGH, a chapelry of England, co. Northumberland, 4¼ m. W.N.W. Hexham. Area, 7,270 ac. Pop. 551.

NEW BRUNSWICK, city, capital of Middlesex co., N. J., 29 S.W. New York, 27 N.E. Trenton, 193 W. Pop. 1840, 8,693; 1850, 10,019; 1854, 12,000. Situated on the right bank of the Raritan r., 14 miles above its entrance into Raritan bay at Amboy, & on the New Jersey r. r., 31 miles from New York, via Jersey city; & 55 from Philadelphia. It is the capital of Middlesex co., though it lies partly in Somerset co., Albany street forming the dividing line. The streets immediately on the river are narrow, & the ground is low. The streets on the upper bank are wide, & contain many fine buildings. A toll-bridge here crosses the Raritan, & also the viaduct of the New Jersey r. r. Incorporated as a city in 1784. It contains a court house, jail, 9 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Dutch Reformed, 2 Episcopal, 3 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, & 1 Roman Catholic,—2 seminaries for females, 2 banks, aggregate cap. $190,-340, 120 stores, several extensive manuf. establishments, & 3 printing offices, each issuing a weekly newspaper. It is the seat of Rutger's College, founded in 1770 by the name of Queen's College, & changed to Rutger's College in 1825. It is under the patronage of the Reformed Dutch church. Has a president, 7 professors or other instructors, 513 alumni, of whom 77 have been ministers of the gospel, 66 students, & 10,000 vols. in its libraries. The commencement is on the fourth Wednesday in July. A new building, called Van Nest Hall, was added to the college buildings in 1848. The Theological department was formed in 1784, under the title of the Theological Seminary of the Dutch Reformed Church. It has 3 professors, 34 students, & 7,000 vols. in its libraries; & 179 persons have completed their education. The Delaware & Raritan canal commences here, extending 42 miles to Bordentown, is 75 feet wide & 7 feet deep, admitting the passage of sloops of from 75 to 100 tons burden. The New Jersey railroad passes through the city, forming a part of the chain of railroads from New York to Philadelphia, Baltimore, & Washington.

NEW BRUNSWICK, a British province, E. coast of N. America, lat. 45° to 48° 40′ N., lon. 63° 50′ to 68° W.; bounded W. by the state of Maine; N.W. Lower Canada, from which it is separated by the river Restigouche; N., Bay of Chaleurs; E., Gulf of St. Lawrence & Northumberland Strait, the latter separating it from Prince Edward Island; and S., the Bay of Fundy, & part of Nova Scotia. Its coast-line is about 500 m. in length, interrupted only at the point of junction with Nova Scotia, where an isthmus of not more than 10 m. in breadth connects the two provinces, and separates the waters of Northumberland Strait from those of the Bay of Fundy, which it is proposed to unite by means of a canal. The most remarkable bays & harbors are Bathurst Bay, on the N. coast; Miramichi Bay, on the E. coast; Passamaquoddy Bay, & St. John Harbor, on the S. coast. There are, besides these larger indentations, numerous smaller harbors, particularly on the S. portion of the E. coast. Area, 27,704 sq. m., & is divided into 14 counties. The following table gives the population, inhabited houses, & the acres of cleared land in each:—

Counties.	Pop. in 1851.	Inhabited Houses.	Acres of land cleared.
Albert	6,313	939	38,210

Westmoreland	17,814	2,390	92,892
York	17,628	2,602	69,017
Total	193,809	26,369	643,954

The population of this province is principally composed of British settlers & their descendants. The remnant, of French extraction, are settled around the Bay of Chaleurs. There is still a few of the aborigines left, consisting of the Micmacs, Melicites, & others, amounting in 1851 to 1,116 persons.

Physical Features, &c.—The general surface of the country presents a series of bold undulations, sometimes rising into mountains, or continuous ridges of high land. The latter are seldom of any considerable height; but their precipitous acclivities, sharp outline, & deep ravines, give them an alpine & picturesque character that finely & strikingly contrasts with the rich valleys & sheltered plains which alternate with the more rugged scenery. The shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence & Northumberland Strait, however, present different & far less pleasing features. There the land, for about 12 m. inland, is low & sandy, covered with trees of a stunted growth, & skirted with extensive marshes, large deep morasses, and long sand beaches. Along the shores of the Bay of Chaleurs & the Gulf of St. Lawrence, gray sandstone & gray clayslate predominate, with detached rocks of granite, quartz, and ironstone; on the S. coast, limestone, graywacke, clayslate, with sandstone, interrupted occasionally by gneiss, trap, & granite. Specimens of amethyst, cornelian, jasper, &c., have been picked up in various places. Coal is plentiful, & iron ore abundant; the former is said to extend over 10,000 sq. m., or above one-third part of the whole area of the province. A large deposit of copper has been discovered on the banks of the Nepisiguit riv., & another of plumbago, within one-half m. of St. John. The supply of the latter is said to be inexhaustible; the surface of the earth being, for 2 m., coated with it. Gypsum, limestone, freestone, & grindstones abound. Salt springs, strongly saturated, are numerous; & some sulphurous springs have also been discovered. The climate of New Brunswick is healthy; & the autumn, as in other parts of N. America, is a season of exceeding beauty, the air being dry & clear, & the woods glowing with innumerable tints of the richest & most brilliant hues. There were in this province in 1852, 643,954 acres of land cleared. Live Stock—Horses, 22,044; neat cattle, 106,-263; milch cows, 50,955; sheep, 168,038; swine, 47,932. Agricultural Products, &c.—Wheat, 296,935 bush.; Indian corn, 62,225; oats, 1,411,164; peas and beans, 42,663; barley, 74,300; buckwheat, 689,004; potatoes, 2,792,394; turnips, 539,803; other roots, 47,880; pounds of butter made, 3,050,939; maple sugar, 350,957; hay, 225,093 tons; & there were made 100,975 galls. of malt liquor.

New Brunswick is drained by numerous rivers and small streams, the principal of which is the St. John, navigable for vessels of 50 tons to Fredericton. The next river in importance is the Miramichi, which rises near the W. limits of the territory, whence it flows N. E., & falls into Miramichi Bay, on the E. coast, about lat. 47° 5′ N., lon. 64° 53′ W.; its whole course is upwards of 110 m., it is navigable for nearly 40 m., and admits vessels of 600 or 700 tons. The Restigouche is the next consid. riv.; it forms the N.W. limit of the province, & falls into the head of the Bay of Chaleur, after a course of about 100 m. There are a number of small lakes in New Brunswick, particularly in the northern part, but none of any considerable size. In the S. there are a few somewhat larger, the most important of which are Grand Lake, 20 m. long, by about 5 m. broad; & Washedemoak Lake, about 20 m. long, by 2 m. broad—both lying between St. John and Fredericton.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in the province in 1851, 52 woollen factories, emp. 96 persons; 261 grist m., emp. 366 persons; 584 saw m., emp. 4,302 persons; 125 tanneries, emp. 255 persons; 11 foundries, emp. 242 persons; 8 breweries; 52 weaving & carding estab. (5,475 hand looms), emp. 96 persons; 96 of various manuf. estab., emp. 953 persons. Coals raised, 2,482 tons; iron smelted, 810; lime burnt, 35,599 casks; grindstones quarried, 58,849; gypsum, 5,465 tons quarried.

Products.—Cloth, 622,237 yds.; & 100,975 galls. malt liquor. Value of boots & shoes made, 89,367*l.*; leather, 45,165*l.*; chairs, cabinet ware, & wood ware, 33,977*l.*; candles, 19,860*l.*; soap, 18,562*l.*; hats, 6,860*l.*; iron castings, 20,025*l.*

The principal places are St. John, the metropolis, & Fredericton, the capital. There were in 1854 several railroads in course of construction; 5 banks, agg. cap. 337,500*l.*; a savings' institution, and 4 insurance companies.

Commerce, Navigation, &c.—Value of imports for the year 1852, 1,110,601*l.* currency; of exports, 796,330*l.*

There were owned & registered in the province in 1851, 796 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 118,228 tons. There were 118 new vessels registered in 1852, with an agg. tonnage of 60,389 tons. The timber floated down the St. John river in 1852 consisted of, white pine timber, 100,000 tons; hackmatack (larch), 10,000 tons; white pine logs, 50,000,000 feet; spruce logs, 20,000,000 feet; pine boards, 5,000,000 feet; cedar and pine shingles, 15,000 M.; clapboards, 5,000,000 pieces; the whole valued at $1,945,000. The shipping numbered in 1851, 778 sailing vessels, of an agg. burthen of 116,711 tons; & 18 steam vessels, of 1,577 tons.

The great extent of its coast, with its numerous deep bays, coves, & inlets, affords great scope for the pursuit of the fisheries. The principal stations in the Bay of Fundy are Grand Menan, West Isles, St. John harbor, & along the coast to Cumberland bay; in the Gulf of St. Lawrence are Miramichi, Dalhousie, Bathurst, Caraquet, Richibucto, & Shediac. These, with other maritime pursuits, employ, according to the census of 1851, 1,454 persons; but the vessels emp'd in the deep sea fisheries from the United States greatly exceed in number those belonging to the inhabitants of the province.

Education Establishments, &c.—The University of King's College at Fredericton, the Wesleyan Academy at Sackville, the seminary of the Baptist Educational Society at Fredericton, the Madras School of St. John; 12 grammar sch., 506 pupils; 798 parish schools, 18,386 scholars. There is a lunatic asylum & a marine hospital at St. John, & a marine hospital at St. Andrews.

The provincial penitentiary is at St. John.

There were in 1851, 423 places of worship. The Church of England, the Established & Free Church of Scotland, Reformed Presbyterian, Wesleyan Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, & Roman Catholic churches, are all more or less extensively represented.

The government is administered by a lieutenant-governor, aided by an executive council consisting of eight members; a legislative council of 20 members; and a house of assembly, of 41 representatives of the people. The judicial department comprises a supreme court, with a chief & three puisne judges; a court of chancery, one of marriage & divorce, & one for the trial of offences committed at sea; over these 3 last-named courts the lieutenant-governor presides. New Brunswick was first settled by the French in 1639, & it continued, along with Nova Scotia, to form part of Acadia, or New France, till it fell into the hands of the British, after the conquest of Quebec. The first British settlers in New Brunswick emigrated from Scotland to Miramichi in 1764; & in 1784 New Brunswick was separated from Nova Scotia & formed into a province. In 1826, in a season of great drouth, a fire extended over an area of 60,000 sq. m. in the portion of the province around Miramichi bay, destroying the timber, 4 towns, & many large vessels lying in the Miramichi river, & 500 human beings perished in the flames.
